Egypt, the old racial centre of civilization, continues to exert a special attraction for many persons. With this in mind, Joan Grant has presented a unique book of the year in her volume "Winged Pharaoh", a tale of Sekreta, a real queen of the first dynasty in Egypt. The author has written a novelized autobiography of this daughter of the Pharaohs who relived about 6000 B.C. In which she tells her own story from babyhood to death. Woven into the tale of her experiences are many stories of ancient Egyptian culture and strange beliefs. The poetic beauty of style as well as a deep knowledge of the subject make this book a rare achievement. The image of a golden age when high justice made all men equal before the law will long remain after reading this volume of age-old wisdom.

An adventurous 3,000-mile motor tour through Switzerland is described by Charles Graves in his book "Swiss Summer". Mr. Graves does not write a methodical guide book but a fired itinerary and a formal program but rather as a modern motorist every village of Switzerland from Basle to the Bernina and then on to Geneva. The holidays of each member of the party, William Tell, the Prisoner of Chillon, Dr. Morin, the color of flowers, the fashions of architecture, the characteristics of landscape, are here noted with a discerning eye. "Swiss Summer" will transport the reader to the shores of any peaceful spots left in troubled Europe.

Professor of History in the University of Toronto, George Wrong has for more than thirty years been a keen student of Canada's past. His latest book "The Canadians: The Story of a People" reads like an exciting novel of adventure but in reality an authoritative single volume history of the Dominion of Canada from the earliest settlements to the present. An important part of the book is the comparison between Canada and the United States. Between the two countries the author discovers only friendliness and mutual respect. Lelong, however, shows af-

Detroit Firstbaseman Hammers Three Homers After Batting Slump

Pacedby Hank Greenberg With Three Home Runs Tigers Move Within Game of Fourth Place

Detroit Player Has 41 Homers And Seven Days Ahead of Record

GIANTS GAIN

Defeat Phillies 4-2 While Pirates Have Off Day

By SID FEDER

They're plugged up the hole in Hank Greenberg's bat and the big fellow is firing at Babe Ruth's record again.

For a couple of weeks there, big Hank might just as well have been batting with a toothpick for all the ground he was picking up in chasing the Babe's all-time mark of forty-homers in one year.

But in the last two days, St. Louis Browns' pitchers rolled into Detroit and showed Hank the hole in his stick, through which many shiners were throwing their special issues. Hank promptly plugged it up and busted five choice offerings of the Brownie flingers out of the park in two days to bring his season four-base total to 41.

Three of these round-trip tickets came yesterday as the Tigers clicked for a doubleheader victory, 8-7 and 7-4, and moved for eight of the fifteen Detroit runs.

Wins Boost Tigers

The double win yesterday also boosted the Tigers to within a game of fourth place in the American League standings, since Washington's Senators, current leaders of the spot, dropped an 4-3 10-inning decision to Boston ed Sox. Jimmy Ferr, thig, other Brown-run gunner, whacked his 25th.

The league-leading Yankees, however, weren't bothering much about such lowly spots as third and fourth places, for they whipped the Athletics 5-2, on Spud Chandler's stellar pitching, although Connie Mack's friend of the junior circuit race. The second place Cleveland Indians remember them? — were soundly thumped, 7-2, by Chicago White Sox.

National League.

With the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates idle, the Giants took advantages of the opportunity to pick up half a game by belting the Phillies, 4-2, on Jimmy Ripple's homer. This left Bill Terry's outfit 4 ½games in the pass Brooklyn Dodgers edged Boston Bees 1-0, in an 11-inning night tilt in the only other scheduled National League game, to climb into a tie for fifth place.

RUNYAN, SNEAD AND COOPER TOP GOLFERS IN CANADIAN OPEN

By ELMER DULMAGE

Mississauga Country Club, Toronto, Aug. 20 (CP)—At last he is shooting in the Canadian open golf championship. Globe-trotting Walter Hagen will be lucky if he finishes in the first ten. And the Haig is scoring better than at any time during the back recently from a world tour.

It won't be his fault if he isn't near the top—blame it on fellows like Sam Snead, Paul Runyan and Harry Cooper. Old Walter can recall winning this championship on the same Mississauga layout in 1931 with a 72-hole score of 292.

Today, with 36 holes to go, his record shows 71-74—145. That is a little under his 1931 average and Hagen is merely nine strokes off the pace set by Slammin' Sam and his little Paul, with Lighthorse Harry in hot pursuit. The Haig is no setting contender as all.

The boys on the tournament circuit are popularly supposed to have improved scoring matters in recent years—even while the pros are exploring deepest Africa with his nibblick. They showed the old master some of the tricks yesterday.

Snead and Runyan, tied for second place with the latter Tuesday's opening assault, came back with identical 67s to share the lead at the 36-hole mark with scores of 136. Cooper, defending champion, then set a new course record of 68 and bounced into third place with a total of 137.

The result was nearly everybody else was left on the outside looking in. Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del., who had a 67 Thursday, was back at 141 after taking 74. He was tied with Horton Smith of Detroit who had 70 and 71.

Slender Bobby Alston of Ottawa fired himself a brilliant 67 and gained no ground at all on the leaders. He was bracketed at 142 with Gene Kunes of Chicago and Bob Gray Jr. of Toronto. Kunes opened with 67 but faded to 75. He had a nightmare on the par-three 142d, using seven strokes.

REGAINS TITLE

After losing the rather obscure Canadian middleweight title to Ray McIntyre, of New Brunswick, Leo Wadsworth, ABOVE, came back to score a decisive 10-round decision over the Maritime boxer and regain the crown. The fight took place in Timmins, Ont.

KING CARL OUT

Like the "ace" of the American League, Lefty Grove, the kingpin of the National League hurling staff, Carl Hubbell, ABOVE, has come down with a sore arm and will be out of the line-up of the slipping and sliding New York Giants for a week or two. The loss of Hubbell, whose injury may prove more serious than suspected, may well spell the death knell to the Giants' already waining pennant hopes.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE CLOSES IN THREE WEEKS

Newark Bears Sure to Finish in First

LOSE TWIN BILL

Red Wings Picked Up Game on Leaders With Double Win

The International League season comes to an end, except for the playoffs, three weeks from tomorrow night and nothing short of a train wreck or an epidemic can keep the Newark Bears from winning the pennant.

Newark's winning record for the past few weeks hasn't been as impressive as it was early in the season, what with quite a doubleheader to the seventh-place Montreal Royals last night, but they've been playing better than .500 ball and that's all they need to do.

If the games Rochester Red Wings or third-place Syracuse Chiefs should manage to win all their remaining games, they'd finish with 98 or 97 victories, respectively, which would be a lot to win in hand, and thus would need to take only 16 or 17 more out of 21 they have left.

The Montreal veteran, Harry Smythe, had ten runs on the ball for the Bears in last night's opener, setting them down with seven hits and a 4-0 win. He found little trouble as a run from three hits off Marcus Thies, the Montreal hitters were to life in two five-run innings and took the nightcap, 10-6.

Rochester Red Wings picked up a game on the leaders by splitting a twin bill with Syracuse, the latter accidentally remained 2½ games ahead of the Chiefs. Scoring all its runs in the first inning the Wings took the opening pitching duel between Hank Borowy and Ken Kleinhans, 3-2. Syracuse won the nightcap 7-1.

Jersey City Giants had one of their poorest evenings in an in-and-out season and belted over Buffalo Bisons, 15-7.

Toronto Maple Leafs launched an early attack on Ben Cantwell and Connie Berly, cellar-dwelling Baltimore Orioles, 5-2.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

GEO. E. WATKIN

This was a real bad week for the Belleville bowlers. Three teams of bowlers went to Kingston on Wednesday and one mixed to Campbellford and all were left holding the bag.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Wonnacott went to Campbellford and lost their rinkers. Walter Wignall and Bill Whitby, skip, went into the finals only to beaten by a Napanee rink. This is a real good showing—good work, Bill.

In the doubles Dr. Carleton and his brother also went into the finals but he defeated by Tom Meal and Charlie Ross of Toronto. This Toronto pair is hard to get by. This gives the Doctor a seat in the senate.

Twenty of our players went to Stirling on Thursday night and report a real good time. Mrs. Neate and George Woodley were the winners there.

On Monday Stirling is having a men's doubles tournament to take the place of their rain out a week ago. Bill Whitby is asking for some teams from our club. The Stirling greens are in real good condition so let us help them out. Give me a ring and I will put in your entry—1.35 Standard Time—let's go.

Harry Post was a visitor to our greens on Thursday night. Glad to see you, Harry.

Our Labour Day doubles are only two weeks away. Get paired up. We want a big entry.

The winners in our trubles last night were as follows: Mr. F. R. Mitchell, Tweed; Mr. Tummon, Tweed; H. Sherratt, Belleville; Mr. Shaw, Clapp, Mrs. Edwards, C. Sulman, Miss McCullough, Tweed; G. Pasqu, G. Badley, Kingston; Mrs. Robson, W. Runnells.

Several members of our club have asked me to write my opinion in regard to Sunday bowling. Sunday bowling is now permitted in every Ah city owned greens were in operation on Sunday last in Toronto. Personally I cannot see any harm in it. If we are not bowling we are at home beats swimming, motoring, where else. And I would say if we have members in our club who want to bowl, let them bowl on Sunday. other hand if there are members who do not think it is proper just don't come around.

SOFTBALL SERIES WITH POINTERS AND CORBYS TIED

Corbys Win 16-10 in Point Anne To Knot Count

HEAVY HITTING

Deciding Game For City Title to be Played Later

It's all even in the City Softball series at two games each with one tie included.

Swinging clubs at Bridgewater's Corbys A.C. evened the current City softball finals at Point Anne last night when Chuck Barnett's dandies pounded the offerings of two homerun hurlers to route the "cementmen" by a 16 to 10 score, which about indicates the play that saw the batsmen always on top.

A total of 38 hits were shimmied by Corbys and 14 of them by Bridgedore's homesters all of which included home runs and a flock of doubles and triples. Jimmie Barrage, diminutive left fielder of the Corbys led the bat-swinging parade of the night with five hits in six official trips to the plate for a perfect 1.000 average. His teammate Kiser had four for five as did Murray Green of the Cementsters. Other potent batsmen were Murray, Cy Barrage and Freddie Mc-Guire for Corbys.

The Corbys walloped to the plate in the initial frame and chalked up no less than seven runs across the board as barrage of hits by Green, Barrage and Long. The homesters retaliated however to more than even their half and add a brace more in the second but the Corbys squad broke out again in the fourth and fifth and sixth to clinch the piece and coast in to victory.

Bob Bridgewater, winning moundsman and Stan Luffman, the Point Anne starring hurler were clubbed hard, Luffman being replaced by the veteran "Sonny" Green in the fifth. Luffman struck out three and Dracup two, but the latter received better support, Corbys kicking in with a fast double play to quell the homesters uprising. Barrage to McGuire to Cole combination clicking nicely. Bridgewater got slight assistance with one hobble while Whitehead had one error in six fielding opportunities. Both clubs were faultless-ly, while Reid took four with out a hook.

The fifth and final game will be played at a later date.

HORACE DODGE ASKS CHANGES

Says it will be For Safety And Civic Advantage

Detroit, Aug. 20 (CP)—Horace E. Dodge, Detroit, designer, builder and pilot of powerboat racing craft, has asked the Gold Cup Committee that changes be made, in the interest of both safety and civic advantage, in the courses on the Detroit River over which the contests is run, Commodore Dodge engages in the rules governing the race.

A meeting of the Gold Cup Committee will be held here Monday when Dodge is expected to state his recommendations, explain reasons prompting them and ask assurance that steps he has in the committee's eyes will be taken next year, or, if possible, this year. The gold cup race will be held Labor Day.

Otto F. Bartzel, chairman of the committee, under whose direction the annual regattas featuring Gold Cup and Harmsworth Trophy races are held, said today that safety of pilots and spectators have always been the foremost thought of the committee. He said the committee was "ready to confer with Dodge's aims.

Dodge has predicted speeds as high as two miles a minute for boats in the Gold Cup race within a year or two. Bartzel said, "With the increase in speed; the committee has considered whether we have come to greater demands on the pilots for skill and care in handling their fast craft."

TWINKLETOES SELKIRK SLIGHTLY HURT BUT SOON READY TO PLAY

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (CP)—Peary New York Yankees would be without the services of George Selkirk for considerable indefinite period were dispelled today when Trainer Earle Painter announced Twinkletoes' latest injury had responded rapidly to treatment.

Selkirk, born in Huntsville, Ont., and the world champions' most unpredictable performer was carried off the field in the seventh inning of the first game in Washington on Thursday, following a collision in centre field.

Twinkletoes and Frankie Crosetti started after the ball which had been holsted by Buddy Lewis. Crosetti made the catch, but crashed into Selkirk's right thigh so hard that George dropped to the ground dazed. An examination showed a bumped muscle in the outfielder's thigh.

It was the second time this year that the Canadian slugger was put out of commission. In the opening series of the American League campaign in Boston he hurt his right wrist. He was out of action almost a month and the ailment didn't mend entirely until about ten days ago.

Then George started to bang the ball lustily and in the recent series against Philadelphia Athletics in New York he features his team's attack by clouting five home runs in four consecutive games. In his last eight games he gathered eleven hits to boost his batting average to .371.

Selkirk seems doomed to meet with an accident whenever he is going strong at the plate. A year ago last July he suffered a severe ankle injury to the right shoulder and was laid up for six weeks. At the time he was one of the Yankees' heaviest hitters and was leading them in homers, with nine.

The prancing outfielder did not play as the Yankees thumped the A's 5-2 here yesterday but may see action today.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

On Monday the Bay of Quinte League baseball play-offs get under way with the winners of the one-and-Kingston-Picton series meeting the Gilbertville nine on the latter's diamond. This series is the best in three with the ultimate winner meeting Burrell Fanning's fancies in the league finals. As the Lake Shore Intermediates are playing a best three in five series, it naturally follows the intermediate O.B.A. provincial playdowns cannot expect to get under way the title series of the province until Sept. 3rd.

Alex Web's favourites boast of a formidable record in any man's league. In 18 league games the league leading Belleville nine won eight and lost four. Walt Geerey's Napanee laddies are the only outfit to beat the "Ortuna" on more than one occasion. The Kingston 'Locos' handed the local nine their initial defeat in a 4-3 game early in the season, when the score was extending the 17 to 19 or so. The Belleville outfit literally tossed that game away. Napanee rightfully handed Burrell Fanning-led crowd a 9-4 reverse here in the 'Ortuna' when Ted Gerow boys won 21 to 2 later at Napanee Skipper Fanning was paid a pitching visit by the fielded. Belleville clinched the league leadership by the first half of a doubleheader at Picton and then copped some 'extra' base the second game as it made little difference as to the result. insofar as the locals were concerned.

What we are really getting at is the fact the 'Ortuna" might have the services of George Selkirk for the deciding game. Indefinite period were dispelled today when Trainer Earle Painter announced Twinkletoes' latest injury had responded rapidly to treatment.

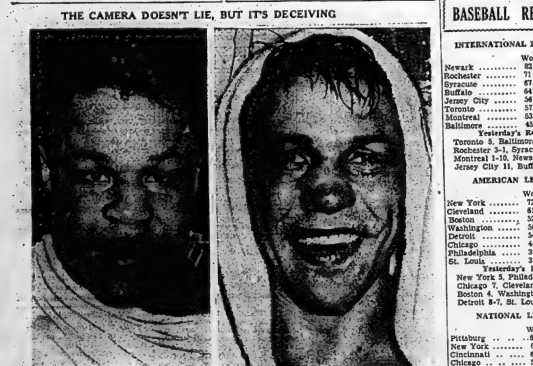
The fine pacers and trotters that are coming from the "Lake" predicted Mr. Kelcheson today.

Picton in a surprise win in Kingston, beat the 'Locos' 10 to 4 in the first Bay of Quinte play-off game for third position played last evening. The next game will be played in Picton today. The winner must be ready to meet Napanee in Gilbardville Monday in the first league semi-final.

After six games in the City softball finals, the Corby A.C. edged Frank Sedore's Point Anne "cementmen" are back right where they started a fortnight ago. In a wierd clubbing match down at the Point last night Corbys won 16 to 10 knotting the count. The series, after six games to date stands, two wins each besides two ties, that were sandwiched into the games. Some tall and potent hitting was seen last night in the "cementmix" Barrage leading the parade for a nearly perfect night at bat, five for five. Eleven of the Kiser bloke had four out of five, as a total of 38 hits were registered. A seven run splurge in the initial frame gave the visitors a big edge. The veteran "Sonny" Green was injected into the pastime and batted one good frame to stop the Corby avalanche of hits.



It's play-off time in provincial circles once again. Tweed's Towers won their keen in Kingston and Napanee in the Upper Bay Corbys nine in the opening O.A.S.A. play-off at Coleman Flats on Monday night. The members eliminated Kingston Dukes in a sixth and deciding game last night. Scrutiny, the Kingston moundsman, is no mean performer on the parts and the locals know full well they have a tough assignment ahead of them. Bawden is more than Upper Bartlett—while warming up at Point Anne last night Connie Garrett turned his ankle and is limping around today. He was taken to a "sawbones" and stated the injury was not severe, however, Harris may be available for the return game in Kingston.

BODGE PODGE: The question of the hour—"why wasn't Johnnie Bawden in uniform for the Cementmen last night?"...Trenton "Flyers" put the gad to the Napanee Mic-Macs to win their first softball playoff 19 to 2 at Gilbardville last evening...Hank Greenberg believes in either a feast or a famine, he got three homers yesterday to bring his total to 41, just eight days ahead of Ruth's best year.....This has been a banner year on playdowns yesterday Carl Hubbell retiring the N.L. Mic-Macs with a sore arm. Who's next?

THE CAMERA DOESN'T LIE, BUT IT'S DECEIVING

Everybody knows who won Armstrong-Ambers fight for the world's lightweight championship, but these pictures taken in the ring give one the wrong impression. At the LEFT is the winner and the holder of the featherweight, light weight and welterweight champion-ships at once and the same time. Herkimer Hurricane, Lou Ambers, who lost the fight but won the plaudits of the crowd. Note the cut and battered appearance of the dynamic Armstrong, a strong contrast

CATCHER'S SPIKES BITE INTO IVAL GO ODMAN'S ANKLE

The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

That was actually their farewell. "Send your men off with a smile." But he was not her man. Bravely I found herself smiling when the cab drove off, and after a time the driver slowed down and, turning, spoke to me.

"Hard luck, lady," he said. "But I expect he'll come back all right."

"I'm sorry," she gasped. "I'm all right now."

"Fine-looking soldier he makes. I could drive you to the dock, and when you get there you'll only have to walk a ways, but I know the transport and where it is."

She could not go back to her lonely hotel room. Not yet, with Chris gathering up his kind and getting ready to sail. So in the end she told him that, to retain forever in her mind a picture as small as the area under one street lamp, with herself on foot in the shadows, the background a paved yard and a shed, and that Chris would be weighed down with their rifles and blanket rolls, an endless line of men slogging along. There was quiet, silent, save for the shuffling of their feet in the sands. They moved out of darkness into the light and then into darkness. The darkness swallowed them, and even though they had had only that single moment with them.

But there was no sign of Chris, and at last she turned and went back to the cab.

This is not a story of the war, but of one man who played his own small part in it and emerged perhaps more of a man and certainly a better physician. For Chris was always to divide his active life into two parts: before the war and the summer of nineteen hundred and eighteen. While only a few months in France by the credit of his division, the second battle of the Marne was launched.

He had been shifted about. He was a regimental surgeon, and he knew what that meant. Along with the other medical officers he was in the front line. He was there to supervise the establishment of first-aid stations from them the wounded could be evacuated to the field hospitals a few kilometers behind the front.

He was aware of a suppressed excitement then, when every man in the division was moving up, and on the last night he wrote the letters which he felt sure that all things went wrong with him. He wrote four. He thanks, first, to Beverly and Miss Nettie, and last, one to Herman Mortimer about Chris's boy.

"I know I have failed you in many ways, but I have done what I have wanted you to be happy, but I probably could not have made any woman happy, my dear. Among other things I have been too selfishly engrossed in my work. The father is mine, not yours; so in case you have doubts, I hope you will take yourself a new life, and be happy in it."

There was more to it, as if by very length he could atone for his failure to love what he had. But neither feel nor write. But his letter to Beverly was just a line or two:

"Don't grieve, my darling. I have never changed, and—strange how this war makes one think—there may be something Beyond. In that I shall be there, busy perhaps but still the same. Always the same, my dear."

x x x

Against the exodus of refugees moved the division, frantically attempting to clear the road, laughing and singing, shouting greetings to the peasants, growling over the delays. "How many kilometers now?" "Why I could kick a barrel faster than this." And then at last a rise over a hill and a small straggling village, was a few hospital trucks in sight, and Field Hospital No. 1 was located. It was in a schoolhouse and Chris, making an inventory, felt discouraged at the amount to do and the small time in which to do it. Already the battle was raging fiercely along a wide front and there were rumors and counter-rumors. "Don't get out too much stuff. We may have to retire in a few hours."

The rest of the Sanitary Train came in. Ambulances appeared from nowhere. Portable stoves, kitchens, tents were set up outside, a long queue for gas cases where even the clothing might carry death. Later on the giant cotton-factors train, driven by a steam engine and providing a chamber for debonning.

Ted had been appointed a sanitary inspector. It was at this time that Chris came across him disconsolate in a field.

"Think of it, Chris. 'What did you do in the Great War, Papa?' And I'll have to tell them I was a louse hound!"

Inside the school house work was already under way as some of the wounded had preceded them. They had to lay in the courtyard, since for the most part, while around them the dust flew and the roar of motor trucks deafened them. Men were already moving among them, giving those who had not already received it the necessary antitetanus serum. "Their feet were streaked with dust and sweat; the line seemed endless.

"Get another tray and hurry!" More syringes, more "T's" marked by an iodine cross on the forehead; the line slowly lessening as the litter bed went up or the ambulances were loaded and started toward Paris. There was not enough bed. Men lay on their stretches on the floor, or on the floor without stretchers.

Chris was working at terrific speed. The operating room was small and boiling hot. The men were brought in, their wounds dressed, operations performed when haste was essential, splints applied from the great wartime wood bandages put on.

"Feel better now, son?"

"Yes, but God, I'm tired. Doc, lemme lie here, won't you?"

But then they could, or not at all. They seldom slept, except more or less on their feet, for there was work to give out, and one day a dressing opened a box of bandages and ten men passed out from exposure of the date of the Spanish-American War. Chris swore, but he dressed them.

Then Peters, in charge of the twelfth battalion aid station, was killed by a piece of shell, and in the emergency Chris was sent over. Close to the front now, the dressing station in a farmhouse already filled with wounded. It was crowded, gun roaring, shells exploding, and Chris's memories of those helpless days were withdrawn. He had had no real sleep for days, and his nerves were both numb and fatigue when at last he reached the station. Somebody had thrown a blanket over the curtain of gas blankets into a feeble subsidence. He was exhausted but there was no time to rest. There were hemorrhages to be stopped, wounds to be dressings to apply. He worked all that night and the next day, and then he had to be turned dizzy on his feet and found a corner to rest in. He slept around the clock and awoke thirty-six hours.

It was not a time when Chris and the others worked in gas masks in the heat, an added torture. Men were dying, and he was needlessly increased. They covered floor, corridor and yard. Bodies lay side by side, but otherwise silent. They came in faster than they could be sent back, and supplies were exhausted before they could be replaced. And at last one night he found himself working almost completely used up, and Chris, with no personal ego left, realized that all the stuff if had to, went outside to look for a motorcycle with a sidecar.

"To Black Jack's Farming," he said.

Chris merely reached up a long arm and produced a bridle. "Tell Black Jack to take a little walk," he said pleasantly and, jerking the lead rein free, was up and off into the dark.

He was always to remember that night ride of his; the road congested with men, machine-gun units and cannions, all moving forward, halting, moving on again. In spite of all rules it was filled from bank to bank, like a sluggish river and military police were helpless against the inevitable flow.

He returned at dawn to find that a shell had made a direct hit on the station and that most of his personnel were either dead or wounded. He stood there in the gray light, sick and dazed. One of his dressers saw him and came on a run.

"We've got to get out, Captain," he said. "It's all gone. Everything."

"There's still the barn," said Chris stolidly.

They moved there, and the work went on. Now the war became a barn filled with wounded who came and went, with light from candles that swayed and dripped in the heat, and with odors that ranged from the ammonia of the old floor to that of blood, sweat, and dirt.

"Wipe my face, somebody. It's hot as hell in here."

"Better get out of here, Captain."

"We can hang on a bit longer. They hung on. There was no past and no future, only the hour and perhaps only this minute. The night came, however, when they were ordered out. Chris watched them go, and he was still watching when the exhausted stretcher bearers carried in a badly wounded man. They put the stretcher on the ground and sank down themselves, gasping for breath. Chris bent over the stretcher.

"Hello, son. Let's see what you've got here."

"I've got plenty," said a weak but familiar voice.

It was Dick Wallers.

Chris straightened. In the hot darkness he could see the bearers, now flat on the ground, and the pallid face of Dick's face, touched his forehead, thick with clammy sweat. Somehow, behind Chris was a car, but it was too small for the stretcher, and at best it would be hours before he could get it through that road; and Dick had not much time, if any.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. and Mrs. Hammer came for dinner last nite. Mr. Hammer being pop's boss, and we had roast beef and things, and Nora brought the meat in on the big platter and put it down in front of ma. Mr. Hammer saying: A noble monument to a grand occasion, and, pop saying, And I'll add the crowning touch by demolishing it myself, change places with me, mother, and hand over those carving implements.

Now William you're surely not seriously thinking of starting your carving career at this of all times, ma said. You know you're but a mass of thumbs, what would Mr. Hammer think of your pitiful efforts? she said.

I'd applaud them to the skies, Mr. Hammer said. There's no site more inspiring, in my opinion, than a man carving, or even trying to carve. It's a man's ancestral rite to carve his own hard earned food at his own table, and there's something uplifting, something simbolical, about the spectacle, he said, and pop said, That's my meeling exactly. Whether he carves well or ill, you can get an awful from an ancestral rite, he said.

That's my feeling exactly, Mr. Hammer said. Away back in the stone age, man became the natural killer and carver of the family, and the call is still in the blood, he said and said. O, all rite, then suppose we compromise. I'll let you carve, Mr. Hammer.

O what a gassly thought, Mrs. Hammer said. He's never carved in his life and he's not going to begin here, the man couldn't carve a canary, she said.

The result being ma carved as usual, doing it swell.

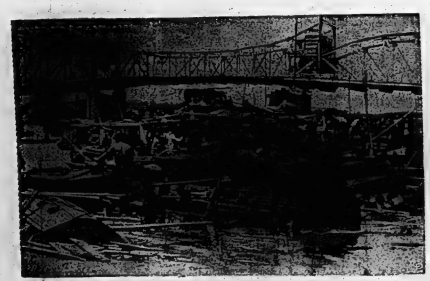
MR. ROOSEVELT AND KING GEORGE VI ENTER INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE



PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND PRIMEMINISTER KING ENTER THE BRIDGE

Prime Minister King, at Hampton, N. Brunswick, that United States would not leave Canada unaided in the event of an attack from hostile forces. President F. D. Roosevelt travelled to Jay Lee, a few miles distant, and along with Prime Minister Mackenzie King officiated at the opening of the new bridge linking the two countries across the St. Lawrence. At 10:30 the official car bearing Mr. King and Mr. Roosevelt is seen crossing one of the spans with the two leaders shaking hands to the cheers of the many thousands who have gathered from the nations they represent. CENTRE, the car has reached the Canadian boundary and which was cut by Mr. King and Mr. Roosevelt, signalling opening of the structure for traffic. BELOW is an aerial view of the roadways and bridges which consolidate the link between Jay Lee, Ont., and Collins Landing, N.Y.

MAD AIR-RAID TURNS MUDDY STREAM INTO RIVER OF BLOOD

More than 1,000 Chinese lived in these shattered sampans before a Japanese air-raid blew them to splinters as they lay on the river near Canton, China. The muddy waters of the Pearl River ran red with blood as the explosive blasted away the hosts and killed and maimed hundreds of the boatmen and fishermen in their flimsy floating homes. Object of the vicious attack was the Canton-Honan bridge in the background. The structure escaped unscathed though the bombs spread death only 50 yards away.

ON HIGHWAY BOARD

The proposed International Highway from Hamilton, B.C., to Fairbanks, Alaska was brought a step nearer with the appointment by President Roosevelt of a commission authorized by the last session of the U.S. congress. Donald MacDonald, Fairbanks engineer, was named on the commission and is one of the original proponents of the highway. The estimate cost of the road is $35,000,000.

Worker Dies on Tower

One of the victim's fellow-workers, Claude Voorhis, was himself electrocuted while attempting to reach the body.

World's No. 1 Optimist

The world's greatest optimist is Jim Moran, Seattle salesman, who, to prove his ability as a vendor of merchandize, is heading for Alaska to sell ice boxes and straw hats to the Eskimos. It all started when Moran heard an eastern sales representative refer to a tough job as being "as hard to sell as ice boxes to an Eskimo." If that's the peak of salesmanship Moran thinks he can reach it. The outfit he's wearing is made (according to Moran) from the skins of 17 yaks which he has shot.

WHEN ENGLAND STAGED GREATEST MOCK AIR RAIDS TO TEST DEFENCES

Taken in the south of England during the latest air-raid preparedness drills, these pictures illustrate the measures Britain is taking to see that her civilian population is protected as much as possible from the explosive and incendiary bombs that are expected to be rained on the country by enemy planes in the event of war in Europe. At the left is seen a rapidly constructed anti-aircraft defence post, a circle of sand bags thrown up to protect the operator of one of the newest anti-aircraft machine-guns. The heavy clothing worn is made of special material for protection against gas. At the RIGHT two gunners of a squadron of fighting planes are prepared to step into their machines and attempt to repel the imaginary foe. More than 7,000 planes took part in the manoeuvres which formed part of the greatest tests of her air defences Britain has staged.

YOU KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS

Once pictures like this begin to appear on the sport pages you can start chasing the moths out of your 'coon coat and take off the screen doors. The boys have started rugby practice and that means the fall winds will be seeping through that window frame you forgot to fix any day now. Or maybe you better get in a few more turns on the beach. But don't say we didn't warn you!

WHAT DO YOU SAY GIRLS?

And this, ladies and gentlemen, is the world's handsomest athlete, as proclaimed in a competition at Le Baule, France. Emile Bonnet is his name, and while the name sounds French, Emile is an American. Athletes from all nations took part but Uncle Sam's representative came through with rippling biceps and tanned integument to cop the award he is seen receiving. One at a time, girls, please.

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 22 — (CP)—There's always a soft spot in the most hard-boiled policeman. ## Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science, Service and Meteorologist

Accuracy in forecasting! Many persons wise-crack about weather forecasts. Some say: "I read the forecast and act just the opposite." But they never do that consistently. The forecasts are really astonishingly accurate when one realizes the complexity of the problem: it is probably one of the most difficult in all nature. Consider the forecaster ordered to prepare an anticipated rain area will end. On that no two forecasters would agree exactly. They must consider not only all the data and atmospheric processes but also the topography. Forecasters make different predictions of accuracy for different regions of the country some being more difficult than others.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 22 (CP)—Pressure is high in the Ohio Valley southward to the Gulf of Mexico, also over Alaska and British Columbia and relatively low over Ungava and Hudson Bay with a shallow trough reaching southwestward across the northwest states. ## Europe's 'Bronze Age' Pushed Back 1000 Years to 2800 B.C. by Research

Cambridge, England, Aug. 22 — (AP)—Europe's "bronze age" was pushed back 1,000 years to 3200 B.C. today by Professor V. Gordon Childe of Edinburgh university, who drew a picture of civilization as it existed then in Europe and the near east, based on recent archaeological discoveries.

Excavations in Greece, the Danube regions and elsewhere have convinced him the continental bronze age should be dated "round er 2800 B.C. than 1800," Prof. Childe told the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

"At the beginning of the central European bronze age towards the middle of the third Millenium B.C. the following stages could be distinguished," he said:

"1. The metropolitan civilizations of Egypt and Babylonia.

"2. Relatively provincial civilizations in Crete, Syria and Hittite Asia Minor, but all fully literate and truly urban.

"3 Bronze age towns in western Anatolia and round about Greece whose walls may enclose from four to 11 acres and defend not only smiths but also specialized potters and many other craftsmen. Most are illiterate, but literate urban civilization is already dawning at Mycenae.

"4. In Macedonia and the Balkans and on the middle Danube stable villages exist: Their size can be estimated from the cemeteries comprising a maximum number of 180 graves. Besides farming, the people specialized industry is metallurgy, and commercial organization is too rudimentary to make the pottery generally available for trade.

"5. In Czechoslovakia and south Germany a similar economy reigns but the settlements are less permanent and the maximum number of graves so far reported from a cemetery is 100.

"6. In north Germany, Denmark and south Sweden are bands of herdsmen and small hamlets of self-sufficing peasants still equipped with stone implements.

"7. In the extreme north and wilds scarce of livelihood is food gathering."

ITALY ORDERS MODERN COUNT ITALIAN JEWS

Tried Methods of Naziism Are Being Applied in Italy

ESTIMATE 44,000

Three Causes Named to Explain Attitude Toward Hebrews

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Aug. 22 (AP)—The Italian Government is oiling its census machinery for the first modern count of Italian Jews.

Aided by Nazi Germany's tried methods, the Fascist Government intends soon to find out how many Jews there are in Italy so that their participation can be limited in the armed forces, civil service and professions by the ratio of one Jew to every 1,000 non-Jewish Italians.

Foreign Jews' Case

Fascists say foreign Jews will be forced to give up their work in Italy and, perhaps, expelled. Those who emigrated from Germany and Austria in the last few years to again face an uncertain future.

The census is to be carried out by the Ministry of Interior's newly-created Bureau of "Population and Race." It is to be based on blood not religion, and Fascists say severe penalties will be meted out to Jews who attempt to hide their ancestry.

Jewish figures estimate Italy's Jewish population at 44,000.

Expected from the German race office have been in Rome as advisers, to explain how Germany has dealt with its Jews through careful filing systems.

Italian espousal of anti-Semitism, disavowed until recently by Fascism is attributed to several causes. Officials generally name three:

1. Caused Underlying Anti-Semitism by a desire to defend the newly acquired empire through prohibition of intermarriage of Italians to prevent creating a mixed race.

2. A wish to strike a blow at "International Hebrewism", which Fascists accuse of leading attacks on Fascism.

3. The Fascist belief that Jews occupy a position in business disproportionate to their numbers.

PLEDGE GIVEN BY ROOSEVELT ADDS TO DUTY

Prime Minister at North York Picnic Refers to U. S. Friendship

ADEQUATE DEFENCE

Canada's Aim to Make No Enemy to Attack U. S. From Canada

Woodbridge, Ont., Aug. 22—While the Canadian government appreciates President Roosevelt's assurance of United States aid to repel any invasion of Canada it will not shirk its duty to provide adequate defences on its own account.

This was the sentence left by Prime Minister Mackenzie King with his former constituency of North York, on his official visit. He was back in Ottawa today after speaking here Saturday and spending Sunday with his old friend, Sir William Mulock, former Chief Justice of Ontario.

The government intends to go right ahead with its program of national defence, Mr. King indicated. Canada had responsibilities as a good neighbor to the United States and one of them was to take steps to prevent any hostile power attacking the United States from or by the Canadian territory whether by land, sea or air.

When he spoke of President Roosevelt's visit he said that "everything that was said during my visit and everything that has been said since, has shown how warm the friendship is between our two countries."

The press cables, he said, had shown that the President's Kingston speech "has already been noticed abroad, and its international significance duly appreciated." What the President had said about the need of those in the Western Hemisphere to contribute to the peace of the world according to their concerns and our ways in Canada "is the part that we greatly value this confirmation.

"But we must still expect me to express their warm appreciation of the assurance which the President has given that the people of the United States will not stand by if the territory of Canadian soil is threatened," he continued. "Every utterance of the past two days has made us feel more than ever before as a friendly people and neighbor."

No Military Alliance

He said that "we realize that there is no question of military alliance, which are not part of the obligation of the people of the United States nor of ours, but the assurance was "evident of the spontaneous friendship" of the two countries.

While appreciating the implication of the President's speech, Canadians, he said, "know at the same time that we have responsibilities and liabilities for maintaining Canadian soil as a friendly one for men in the Western Hemisphere."

"We too have our obligations as a good and friendly neighbor and one of them is to see that, at our own instance, this country is made as immune from attack or possible attack as we can reasonably be expected to make it. We realize should the occasion ever arise, every power should not be able to pursue their way, either by land sea or air, to the United States across Canadian territory.

"During the last two years we have been making special efforts to put our own means of defense in order. We have been co-operating with the many measures taken to this end. I am confident that within the limits of our constitutional responsibilities the country intends that we shall go on going forward on that course. In that way, I believe, we can make a small but best play the part of a good neighbor.

In Accord With Policy

"This policy," he continued, "it might add, accords wholly with that agreed to by Canada at the Imperial Conference held in London last year, and which set forth that each Dominion was responsible for its own defence. Our defence, as well as the defense of all other parts of the British empire, we believe, is further to be secured by consultation and co-operation with the other members of the British Commonwealth.

"The common concern which each would be expected to have for the whole was recognized by the

Roar of Lion Fails to Impress Four-Month-Old Grizzly Bear

Calgary, Aug. 22—(CP)— To the animals of Africa, the roar or a lion is a signal to scram—in a hurry. But it failed to impress a four-month-old grizzly bear that arrived in Calgary's St. George's Island zoo Saturday.

The 75-pound cub, captured on the Calgary Creek farm in the Peace River country several weeks ago, was obtained for the zoo through the efforts of W. R. Wallace, Alberta game commissioner. Transported in a cage in baggage car, the cub was in his pen at the zoo only two minutes before making known his enmity to the jungle king.

The cub ambled about for a moment, sniffed amiably through the bars at the brown, black and cinnamon bears in the adjoining cage, turned and came face to face with the king of beasts.

Through the bars shot a set of razor-like claws. Leo recoiled but not before his nose was stung. Up went a howl. The other animals in the zoo joined in and the menagerie was turned into a bedlam.

But his grizzly ship was not impressed. It just ambled on and then curled up for a nap.

It was probable the death toll would increase by one, though authorities awaited the result of further investigation into the fielding officially that 29-year-old William Less had been drowned in the Niagara River at Niagara Falls, New York, N.Y., man's motorboat was swept over the 167-foot Niagara Falls Saturday night. He was believed to have been in it when it made the plunge though his body was not found.

While her parents were absent, Florence gained entrance to her home through a cellar window, obtained matches from the pantry and lit a fire in the living room. Her dress caught fire.

A fight for possession of a corn-field for the Edmonton Quarter, resulted in the death of Aristide Bourdiras, 35, it was alleged that Bourdiras' father also was stabbed during the fracas in the affray but is not in serious condition. ## SEES EXTENSION RURAL PROGRAM BY GOVERNMENTS

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture For United States Speaks

FARM ECONOMICS

By JOHN LEBLANC-
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., Aug. 22—(CP)—Extension of government operations for rural and agricultural improvement was forecast today by M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in the United States, in an address prepared for delivery at the opening session of the 12th international conference of agricultural economists.

The political-economic trend today was for governments to assume increasing responsibility for the promotion of economic and social welfare of their citizens, Mr. Wilson said. Every government had some positive program for rural and agricultural betterment, and indications were "these programs will be extended rather than curtailed."

Concern For Betterment

The United States official spoke before delegates from 19 countries and from 30 states in the United States from Montreal to discuss the topic, "Economic Trends." His address on "the social implications of economic progress on present-day agriculture" was the first paper on the same topic delivered by J. F. Booth of the Canadian Department of Agriculture's marketing branch.

Mr. Booth's paper reviewed the changing character of agricultural development, from the individualistic farming of the past century, to the industry's commercialization and the rise of tremendous forces in trade. Today in Canada, he said, the nation as a whole must bulk largely in consideration of government agriculture policy because of the industry's effect on the general life of the country.

Wide Types of Farming

Both groups of farming in the world, the commercial type and the subsistence, had characteristics, Mr. Booth said. Mr. Wilson said in his paper, "The type, he said, is part of a "sick commercial civilization."

"As the years have gone by," he asserted, "the commercialization has grown more and more com-

TWO KILLED IN REAR-END CRASH OF SUBWAY TRAINS

Scores Injured in New York When Two Trains Telescope

TORCHES ARE USED

New York, Aug. 22 (AP)—At least two persons were reported killed and more than two score others were injured in a rear-end collision between two subway trains here today.

Crews of a dozen ambulances sent to the scene gave first aid to injured passengers on the station platform, at Lexington avenue and fifth street, and then took them to hospitals.

The motorman of a southbound train, Salvatore Cola, and an unidentified negro passenger were trapped when the first car telescoped the rear of another southbound train standing at the platform.

An ambulance surgeon succeeded in freeing the unidentified negro but only after he had amputated his leg, working by the light of blazing torches aside with the aid of Mayor LaGuardia, who arrived shortly after the crash.

Most of the seriously injured were passengers in the rear train, which was the number on the first train were hurt during the confusion which followed when the lights went out after the explosion.

Police reported the crash was caused when William Curley, motorman of the telescoped train jammed on his brakes after a passenger was caught in one of the doors just as the train started to pull out of the station. Cola was unable to stop his train in time to prevent the

Mother Morris on 'Gratitude' Trip Financed by Canadian Veterans

By RUTH LENNON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Aug. 22—(CP)— They left Montreal today, Sandy Morris and a handful of the Canadian veterans she "mothered" and darned socks for in her "home away from home" during the war.

"Jenny," as she is known to the "boys", talked over old times with a group of Montreal and Ottawa friends who welcomed her on the arrival from London last night. Then she and her husband, fired and fed by a group of Montreal veterans, were entertained at a round of luncheons, dinners and teas, and paid their hotel bills.

Darned Socks For Boys

But, aside, one of the "boys" said that, since the end of the war, the "friendship and companionship" would continue—not to mention the dozens of socks that were darned, letters forwarded and the money sent when we were broke."

Now, however, the tables are turned, and the boys will do the entertaining. Across Canada members of the "Princess Pats" who adopted Sandy Morris as their "London mother" and other regimental ex-members are availing their chance to return her hospitality.

Here for two days Miss Morris will go next to Ottawa, then to Toronto and across Canada to Winnipeg. After returning to Montreal she will sail from New York

Large Steer from Wild West Show Causes Furore on Lake Waterfront

Toronto, Aug. 22 (CP)—A large steer caused a stir and excitement on the Lake Ontario waterfront Saturday night when it broke away from a railway siding where stock for the world famous Pan-American National Exhibition was being unloaded. A cowboy on a horse finally lassoed the animal.

Harry Horton and a friend were about to enter the grandstand of the Toronto Canoe Club when they heard a bunder of hoofs behind them. They just managed to duck into a doorway as the steer charged by. The steer next crashed through the only door at nearby tennis courts. Some players dropped their racquets and ran, others started to scale the wire fence enclosing the courts.

While the steer held sway on the courts, a cowboy roped the steer by the horns and leaped from his saddle when the animal held its head still. The cowboy finally coaxed toward the Exhibition Grounds but it still hadn't pulled its last trick. As the horse went around one side of a tree, the steer went around the other. Again the cowboy nearly took a tumble.

The cowboy decided then to call it quits, he tied the steer's legs and went for aid. Then the steer was taken to its stall, to rest before it had tossed one of the men into somersault when the man grabbed it by the horns.

CZECH INTERESTS OFFER ECONOMIC ISSUE SOLUTION

Would Have Czechoslovakia Buy Wheat From Danube Countries

BUY SUDETEN GOODS

Solution Offered to Remove Discontent in Sudeten Areas

Prahe (Czechoslovakia), Aug. 22 (AP)—Promise was held out in official Czechoslovak quarters today that this week would bring a definite turn in the indecisive negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and its autonomy-seeking Sudeten German minority.

Prahe said Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator in the dispute, was expected to have something constructive to say "about Thursday."

The hint that Lord Runciman's silence would be broken was contained in a communique issued by the semi-official "Central European Radio".

Exchange Scheme.

London Aug. 22 (CP-Havas)—The Financial News today reported a proposal whereby Czechoslovakia would acquire wheat and other agricultural products from the Danubian countries with the proceeds to be spent by purchasers in other German manufactures has been presented by Czech economic interests as a solution of the pro-Nazi problem to the Runciman mission now in Prague.

The scheme calculated to remove the economic basis of the present discontent in the Sudeten districts, was placed before Frank Ashton-Gwatkin Chief of the British Foreign Office's Economic Section and Runciman's personal Munchmen's staff of experts the newspaper said.

The Sudeten Germans have suffered through the trade recession to a much larger degree than the rest of the Czechoslovak populaties, the Financial News continued.

FRANCO'S REPLY TANTAMOUNT TO FULL REJECTION

May Require Revision of Non-Intervention Plan

BIG BRIDGE TO GAP

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 22—(CP Cable)— The Duke of Plymouth, chairman of the non-intervention committee, today arrived in London to study insurgent General Franco's reply to the proposal for proportional withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain.

The reply, made public Sunday, was tantamount to a refusal and required a complete revision of the plan.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was on his London late today. Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, will arrive from Yorkshire tomorrow. It was expected they would confer with the Plymouth on plans to concerns the non-intervention committee and on what steps will be taken, particularly in regard to General Franco's demand of full belligerent rights before any troops are withdrawn.

Not Seen Representatives

Lord Plymouth has not yet seen representatives of the other nations making up the committee but informal conversations are expected. So far it was undecided whether the committee would be convened, it was held probable.

Spanish government circles in London were emphatic in saying that Barcelona would not agree to the many conditions and reservations made by General Franco. They are committed to the withdrawal withdrawal of volunteers and would accept nothing less than withdrawal of 10,000 men from each side.

INDIAN BONES ARE UNEARTHED AT WEST LAKE

Perfect Specimens of Bones And Arrowhead Discovered

BEADS IN GRAVE

What is said to be the best addition to the collection of Prince Edward County discoveries of Indian bones and relics, was unearthed at West Lake over the week-end by Walter Mather who has uncovered two perfect specimens of Indian skeletons, while digging loam on the farm of Arthur Bristol.

Massey with five other employees of the county found a number of beads around the head of one of the skeletons. These were, or had been originally, beads of solid copper. The centre bead was of a large size with the remainder tapering off to small ones. First arrowhead was found in the grave.

The skeletons were intact when found but fell apart when removal was attempted. The soil immediately surrounding the bones was red as if colored with ochre.

More Chinese Die in Canada Since War Began in East

Postponement of Burial in China Now a Patriotic Motive

ANCESTRAL LAND

Present war in China, together with the effects of recent harder times in this country, have resulted in more Chinese dying in Canada during the past year than ever before.

This was the observation offered by Tom Kee, Toronto, executive of the Chinese Nationalist party, in which capacity he is also leading a collection with Ontario subscriptions and loans to his native country.

The Chinese mortality rate in Canada is ordinarily very low, it was pointed out, for the average visitor in flawless English. Because, there is the belief that to die, or anything too old or infirm and has the belief that his days are numbered, he takes a boat and returns. Accumulated here after years of denial and scrimping, he purchases a steamer ticket to China. If he has no money and is listed as a destitute, his fare home usually is borne by Chinese friends who "circulate the hat" in other words, take up subscriptions for him.

Recently, however, heavy overhead charges on the bodies of China from her former sons, and the relief that his days are numbered, are having hard times lately have drained the funds of the various parties and organizations, so many who have contemplated having the bodies of their friends returned for China for burial have had to delay. Usually Chinese are buried in Canada and are later taken up, hermetically sealed in caskets, labelled plainly and sent back to China usually in a period of no longer than three or four years elapse. The various societies are strained with this work of returning the bodies to the homeland.

But the postponement of burial in Canada has created one, China-torn with strife at present has meant a considerable change to former residents in Canada. Those who have died lately in this country will be in their boxes next to the homes of their ancestors fit time.

"An impossible job expected to be done under impossible conditions", stated a group of local readers today who returned from a morning's expected work in Prince Edward County minus a day's pay and no job picking tomatoes.

Five of the men worked for three hours this morning. Their total picking was just ten bushels of tomatoes. They were told they had to be paid.

"We couldn't find the tomatoes for weeds. Every cluster of the tomatoes was almost covered with weeds. You'd have to lie down on your stomach and pick to do it properly," stated one of the men.

NATURE LESSON ON CITY HALL DOOR

Pedestrians passing the city hall this morning were treated to a hand lesson in Nature study.

That's the first time I ever saw one myself," declared a woman. Thos. Cushing, pausing in his early morning inspection of the market building, to examine the large bug closely. "But I've often read of them."

Valuable through its fondness for grasshoppers and other insects, it already did, the Praying Mantis is one insect which should not be ruthlessly destroyed, entomologists of the local Dominion Bureau.

It was a shipment of six barrels of horseshoes, and five small cases of horseshoe nails, one of the first consignments of this nature to be received here in some time.

NO IDLE MOMENT FOR FOUR DAYS OF EXHIBITION

Hon. M. P. Dewan Will Officially Open Belleville Fair

Perhaps not in the last decade have residents of the city and district had the opportunity to view the bountiful hand of Nature as exemplified in the abundance of products that mark the agricultural sections of this district that will present itself from July 30th to Sept. 2nd at the Agricultural Park, Belleville, when the Belleville Fair, the show-window of Hastings and Prince Edward district's offers to the public, one of the most outstanding displays of pure-bred livestock, horses, farm and garden produce, and the many things that go to the heart of the fair-going public.

Rated in the past as one of the outstanding agricultural shows in Eastern Ontario, the fall this year is due to the untiring effort of a capable board of directors, the cooperation of Mother Nature and the enthusiasm of residents, farmers and merchants of this district, will establish any previous exhibition held here for a number of years.

In Agricultural District

Ideally located in the heart of the dairying, fruit growing and general farming sections of the province, with its proximity to Prince Edward to the south contributing entries that will equal those offered by our own county of Hastings, the fair this year in its sixty-ninth year, is assuming a position to the foresight, ability and pride of achievement of farmers of this district.

Not only in things agricultural will the exhibition stand out. With an eye to the entertainment appetite of the vast throng expected to attend the fair, directors have secured one of the outstanding attractions obtainable. In selecting the Garden Brothers circus, the Board feels they are filling a long-felt amusement want in that circus-lovers suffered a keen disappointment this year, in the non-appearance of the leading Big-Tent Shows scheduled to show here.

Minister of Agriculture to Attend

From the time the opening gun sounds, and the Hon. M. F. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture officially opens the 1938 edition of the Fair, not one idle moment will ensue until the National Anthem rings down the curtain on the night of Sept. 2nd. Everything has seen arranged for what is conceded to be a splendid fair. There will be music by Belleville's outstanding musicians. The Municipal Band, Buildings will house merchandise in displays that will far outshine those of previous years.

Equine aristocracy, and blue-blood of cattledom will be on display, while proud standard-breds, will vie for speed supremacy on the track. The finest in the electrical brilliance of many new and novel lights will provide a fairy effect, the colorful sideshows, and the exciting mystery of tented shows will form a setting for the Midway. All in all the Belleville Fair will provide amusement and education for young and old in one of the finest displays, seen here in many a year.

Three fortunate persons will be the proud owners of automobiles when the Fair closes on Sept. 2nd. These splendid cars will be given away by the Belleville Exhibition, being given away by merchants of the city.

FRANCO'S REPLY

May Open Frontier

France's action in that plan places the Chamberlain government in an embarrassing position and may have the effect of reopening by France of the Pyrenees frontier to war supplies for the Spanish government.

Official circles here admit a good deal of resource will be needed to bridge the gap between the non-intervention leader's plan and the limits to which certain members of the committee are prepared to go.

Tied up with France's attitude is the Anglo-Italian agreement to which Mr. Chamberlain is committed, but which is ratifiable only on settlement of the Spanish question.

Until volunteers are withdrawn from Spain, there was no hope of ratifying the agreement which was signed at Easter. Despite this, it has been necessary twice in the past two weeks for Sir Neville Charles, British Charge D'Affaires in Rome, to draw to the attention of Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, allegations of increased Italian supplies of men and arms to General Franco.

No Denial of Allegation

It was understood here over the weekend that Count Ciano told Sir Neville Charles after receiving details of the allegations but that no proof could be offered they were correct.

There were some in diplomatic quarters here who felt the way would be ended before any new proposal could be agreed upon for withdrawal of foreign fighters whose presence in Spain the non-intervention committee regards as a cause for the present delay.

There were some who thought effect, France had killed the chances of the Anglo-Italian pact. Paris reports of last week were recalled in this connection, that France had decided to cast his lot with Italy and Germany even at the risk of losing connections with Britain.

U. S. TOURISTS ARE APPRECIATIVE

Refer to Welcome to Canada by Traffic Guards

Thousands of American and Canadian tourists and sightseers availed themselves over the week-end of the opportunity to visit both countries through the medium of the International bridge, recently opened by Ivy Lea by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

A seemingly never-ending stream of traffic with the slight majority in favor of the Canadians, passed over the now famous structure on Friday and Saturday, according to Mr. James Lynch, Waterloo, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. R. Bamford Syracuse, and Mr. Ross Grey, Clayton, N.Y., who were week-end guests of Fire Chief and Mrs. William Lynch of this city.

An official welcome to Canada is extended by guards on the Canadian span, Mr. Lynch said. "As we neared the Canadian gate, a burly guard stepped forward with hand upraised. A little frightened we stopped as his fellow on a forbidden look on his face. However, he smiled graciously, and said "welcome, Canada." There is a bad stretch of road for a short distance ahead of you before you reach the highway, but the speed limit if fifty miles an hour, drive carefully, Good-bye." And with a wave of his hand he walked away to greet another car" Mr. Lynch smiled. Guards are placed approximately every thirty feet to keep cars and curious drivers from stopping to admire the magnificent view to be had from the bridge, Mr. Lynch added. The two Catalpha were crowded with pedestrians as we crossed. The authorities were so busy they had no time to examine baggage. All they did was ask for the car permit which could be secured up Ivon returns.

Dogs were allowed on the island but not on the various spans. Those

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 22.—(AP)— Stock market leaders backed down today in one of the slowest sessions for more than two months.

Losses ran to a point or so during the forenoon, with the ticker tape barely moving. Pairs support appeared later and extreme set-backs were reduced near the final hour. Rallying attempts, though, were unaccompanied by any expansion in volume. Transfers were at the rate of about 400,000 shares.

Motors, last week's star recovery performers, were among the first to give ground. They improved eventually.

Steels shaded declines when the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated this week's mill operations at 42.8 per cent of capacity, up 2.4 points, the best mark since last November.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 22 (CP)—Losses predominated today in a listless session of the Toronto Stock Exchange. After early strength, senior golds softened and followed industry and base metals into lower territory. The industrial list broadened as the day progressed but lacked strength. Western oils were irregular. Transfers approximated 400,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford
By Financial Service

Canadian Car and Foundry's year does not end until September 30th, next and the annual report, when it makes its appearance late in the fall will show better earnings than in the previous year when $4.17 a share was reported on the preferred and $1.75 on the common. The company, in addition has a substantial volume of business on hand and is in line for armament business, when as and if such business is placed. Canadian Car also is greatly diversified its business so that is derives revenues from company's income. The preferred stock is attractive both for income and appreciation and the common stock is considered interesting for appreciation over a period.

New York brokers' wires continue to take a somewhat non-committal attitude on the immediate trend of the market, though in the main bullish for the longer pull. Steadily improving domestic situation with continued good business news, it is maintained, are tending to allay nervousness over European developments, though it is expected that the seriousness of foreign news should diminish as time goes on while the situation should get better rapidly with the approach of Labor Day.

The question is being asked whether good investment buying is presently going on in the market. In this connection it is pertinent to point out that substantial amounts of shares of such companies as Montreal Power, B.A. Oil, Shawinigan, etc., have been changing hands in the past few weeks without any fractional range. This would appear to indicate quite accumulation of meritorious issues for income.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation

OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may cause just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up flat, sour, heavy-eyed, bilious — and the reason why force purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water surges through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of hard, poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, naturally, and passed out of your body. Can do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 40 cents a tin! At your drug-gist now—but if you're wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight!

REVIERE DU LOUP, QUE.—Boarded 600 boxes butter. All sold at 22 cents.

ST. PASQUAL, QUE.—Boarded 335 boxes of butter. All sold at 22 5-16 cents.

VANKLEEK HILL, — Boarded 631 boxes white, 413 colored. White sold at 13 5-8 and 13 11-16 cents, colored at 13 11-16.

Police Blotter

A hit and run driver was reported in the city over the week end. Douglas Millsap, Napanee motorist, complaining his automobile had been struck by speeding motor car, while crossing on Dundas Street Saturday night.

Mr. Millsap informed police he was proceeding westerly on Dundas Street late Saturday night, when he just another motor car. The oncoming vehicle sideswiped Mr. Millsap's car and hastened away without stopping. Police believe the collision to have been caused by the driver of the second car having been intoxicated.

A number of motorists were taken into custody by local police. The report the latest week end of investigations of the current summer, over the week end. Included in the list of those apprehended was Charles Keary, farmhand, who may face more serious charges when arraigned into court. Keary was arrested on East Bridge Street Saturday night, following complaints of a man committing indecent acts. The accused was detained for questioning at the police station and charges are pending, police revealed today.

After having apparently imbibed too freely, a local young man was from the abutment of the Belleville Pedestrian Subway, Saturday bridge. East Main street, into the waters of the Moira River on that under. Residents of that district summoned Dr. G. S. Cronk to the scene of the accident, as it was believed the man had been seriously injured. The ambulance was also brought to the scene, but the young man refused to be removed to the hospital. The arrival of Constables Ellis and Taylor soon changed the young man's mind, however, and he was removed to the hospital, suffering slightly from an injured chest, he complained.

Why the young man was not more seriously injured when a 30 foot fall from the railway right-of-way to the river still puzzles eye witnesses, however.

EARTHQUAKE LEAVES MANY HOMELESS IN REMOTE ECUADORIAN VILLAGE

Causing extensive damage and some loss of life, 9-severe earthquake recently shook parts of Ecuador, South America, the small town of Tinga, near Quito, capital, bearing the brunt of the shock. Four tots who had a narrow escape from death are seen at the left, bewildered and unhappy, as they sit in the ruins of their home. They had previously crawled from its house after three walls and the roof had crashed, and were unscathed although their parents were injured. Like all nature's upheavals, the terrible disaster produced some strange results. At the right, is seen one of the town's bath buildings, the heavy front wall thrown down, but the door and tiles on the roof undisturbed.

News of Toronto Produce Market

Toronto, Aug. 22—Eggs and butter both edged upward on the Toronto produce market Saturday. Cheese and churning cream remained indifferent to the possibility of moving either way.

Dealers' quotations for graded ggs receipts dropped the lowest from the previous day's price range of 26½c to 29c for A-large in the past week's short closing session of the Toronto market, moving up to 29c straight, A-medium and C's did likewise, finishing at 28c and 21c, respectively. Grade B, however, which had been at 23c before, stayed at that figure.

This advance was attributed by a reliable Toronto authority to the current light volume of receipts and good local demand, which made good quality eggs easily worth the top price. Some inferior eggs, he stated, which were having difficulty to sell, were arriving in the city of late, and had resulted in some transactions being done under the market. A continuance of the relatively active demand at Montreal was what was keeping eggs steady here, he said.

The asking price for No. 1 Ontario creamery butter solids was raised 1-4c to 25½c here Saturday. Local dealers reported the market was steady.

Little or no business was done in cheese, and prices were left unaltered.

Churning cream continued to hold the previously prevailing range of 22c to 23c (country truck prices) for No. 1 grade.

Market Tone Improves at Montreal

Montreal, Aug. 22 (CP)—The general tone of the open produce markets showed a definite improvement this week, according to Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Butter prices recovered 4c of their 1 1-3c loss of the week before. Cheese prices improved 1-8c to 1-4c, while grain prices continued their advance, owing to the shortage, adding 1½c. The lower-grade eggs, however, were slightly easier. Potatoes remained steady.

Wholesale butter prices to retail dealers sold for 24½c to 25c and wholesale for cheese to 24 1-2c. Western butter delivered here was offered at 24½c. Finest fall pasteurized price to jobbers was 23 1-4c to 23 3-8c. Receipts: 18,959 boxes.

Cheese sold at 14 1-4c a pound for Ontario white, 14 1-4c to 14 3-8c for Ontario colored, 13 7-8c for Quebec white and 14c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 31,087 boxes, including 3,429 for export.

Graded egg shipments in used fres cases sold at 29½c a dozen for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 24c for B large and 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 7,373 cases.

POLICE COURT

Clarence Mitchell, Mount Brydges, Ont., appeared in Belleville Police Court, this morning before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., this morning, charged with reckless driving. The charge was accepted in the matter and the case was enlarged until Nov. 21st next.

"There is a young lady in the hospital as the result of this accident and we will not be able to continue until at least three weeks," Detective Sergeant Morton, B. C. Donnan, K.C., which prompted the enlargement.

The case was introduced by Motorcycle Patrolman H. Jillings of Napanee, who stated the injured person was Miss Mary Scott of Napanee. The accident in question happened near Napanee on Aug. 11th.

"I would ask for a week's remand in this case in order to permit Dr. Doyle, Provincial Mental Clinic doctor, to look into this case," suggested Mr. Donnan when Charles Keary, 21 year old farmhand appeared on a charge of indecency. No plea was accepted nor was any evidence adduced.

Case is Withdrawn

Upon the statement of facts, given by Mr. Donnan, a charge of false pretences was withdrawn against Samuel Bell of Whitby. "Apparently there was no intent to defraud, only a misunderstanding between the parties concerned," pointed out Mr. Donnan. The matter will be looked into following the purchase of a motor car in Belleville recently. Restitution was previously made by the accused man's father.

Ernest Ernest Lucas appeared charged with assaulting Samuel Gwinnup and causing the latter actual bodily harm. Swinnup stepped forward and stated he would like to have the case withdrawn. Lucas paid the costs and the pair left the court room.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked His Worship of 16 year old Robert Herrington. Belleville, who appeared charged with the theft of a quantity of brass, the property of the Belleville Fruit Machine Company.

"Well, I guess guilty, the way Mr. Lucas said it, anyhow," agreed young Herrington.

"This looks like another case for Dr. Doyle," I suggest," interrupted Mr. Donnan.

Young Herrington's father, who was present in the court, agreed to the examination scheduled for tomorrow.

Peasant farming's illness was over-population, the Assistant Secretary said. "When outlets for surplus population either through migration to undeveloped countries or to city industry are cut off, then peasant agriculture begins to suffer from overpopulation. It therefore turns out that both commercial and peasant farming are in trouble and the prospects ahead are none too good."

PRINCESS HAS BIRTHDAY

The second daughter of their Majesties King George and Queen Mary was eight years of age on Sunday and this was an event in the life of Lilibet and her sister to the heir presumptive to the British throne. Princess Margaret Rose has had much prominence in the past year or two and will grow into more prominence as her birthdays come.

Today was the real day of celebration of the birthday when a party was held in her honour .Then the birthday cake was cut—it had been baked by the royal household staff at Buckingham Palace and was sent to reach Balmoral, Scotland, where the Sovereigns and their family are spending their holidays.

Everyone in the Empire will wish Princess Margaret Rose many happy returns of the day.

THE FAIR

Next week brings the event to which the agriculturists of this Quinte district and the people of Belleville and the towns and villages around about are looking forward. It is a mark for town and country. The farmer is bringing his best exhibits covering every phase of agriculture, livestock, the produce of the field, the work of the farmhouse and the farm kitchen, the clay in handing its mercantile and its industrial exhibits.

The fair board's ambition which has been achieved in the past and will be achieved in the approaching exhibition is a through co-operation of the life of the district. One of the means of achieving this is a prize list which cannot fail to attract champion stock and the best in every class of products and produce, another is a fine program, so that every taste may be satisfied. That is the way to gain the only foundation for a real fair—a large showing of exhibits and a throng of people day and night for the period of the fair.

In this district Belleville fair comes at that season which virtually spells the end of the season. School days are ready to begin a few days afterwards, and the full autumn activity is ushered in. So Belleville fair becomes the last summer festival of this district.

Indications are that the coming exhibition will excel everything in the fair's history to date.

THE CAISSONS STILL ROLL

The jingle of harness and the creak of taut traces have been largely replaced on the practice fields of the army by the mechanic rumble of trucks and the smooth roar of gasoline engines; but still "those caissons go rolling along" in the pages of The Field Artillery Journal. Indignant "at the preservation—indeed, the downright corruption"—of the customs of yesteryear, and alarmed lest the traditions of the horse artillery be begrimed and stultified with motor oil and gasoline, the author of anonymous article in recent number of The Journal has set down for posterity some of those ancient songs, dear to the heart of every "red leg."

"Over hill, over dale, we have hit the dusty trail,
And those caissons go rolling along.
'Countermarch,' 'Right about!'
Hear those wagon soldiers shout,
While those caissons go rolling along.
"For it's Sandy-yee! to the Field Artillery
And those caissons go rolling along."

The Caisson song is the most famous of them all, but there are others that strike a nostalgic note, a note of the good old days when things were as things now aren't, when the red sun rose over the mesas and the mist patches steamed in the pockets of the hills and the dew lay crystal on the grass blades and the harness jingled and the battery went into action at the gallop.

But turn the pages of The Journal and those who regret the dead past will find the words of "The Red Guidon" another famous song of the old days. And one must know, as he reads the words and flicks the pages, that "The Red Guidon" still waves and the caissons still roll in the field artillery, even though the guns now rumble behind motors and there is no more "foam upon the leather and sweat upon the hide". For times change, but traditions linger.—New York Times.

That we would do, we should do when we would; for this would changes, hath abatements and delays as many, as there are tongues, are hands, are accidents: and this should is like a spendthrift sigh, that

YELLOWKNIFE, A ROMANTIC WORD, CARRYING A BIT OF A THRILL TO ANYONE WHO EVER EXPERIENCED A MINING RUSH—for Yellowknife is away up beyond—ever northward the shining trail leads—along the Yukon glacier trail some think where the big ice above sons ago brought down minerals in huge quantities and buried it for future generations to discover. Cobalt, Porcupine, Kirkland Lake, high spots of Ontario's early mining industry, constitute an old story now, staid communities planning growth and expansion for the next fifty years. But the adventurers push boldly on seeking new fields to conquer and neither cold nor heat, nor wild beasts, or voracious insects, or hunger, or thirst, can stop them. Long Lac, Little and Big, burst on the Front Page in a constellation of shining nuggets and Geraldton grows over night into a town supporting two newspapers. But the northern fields never ceases and Copper mine and Yellowknife claim Front Page notice with sensational mineral finds and mining communities spring up almost overnight—while all the hardy sourdoughs whose tales have at one time or other been familiar in Australia, South Africa, Western United States, even New Guines, appear between dawn and dusk and become a part of this great drama of human hearts and hopes concerned with uncovering the great riches hidden beneath the tundra where but yesterday only the moose, and caribou broke the stillness with their mating calls. Geraldton is no longer a new mining camp, and its newspapers are asking their readers to REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN— "from our files of a year ago" and the restless tide of discovery flows ever northward toward the Land of the Midnight Sun, immortalized by Jack London, Robert Service and other writing chaps who cared less for gold than for the shifting memories that illumine the trail which leads to the never-ever land of everlasting happiness and hopes fulfilled.

SPEAKING ABOUT THE WEATHER —there we go again—always harping on one sore subject—everybody complains about the weather, according to Mark Twain, but nobody seems to do anything about it. All of which is wrong, says the Weather Man for we do something about it, we foretell it and explain it. Sure, and what does that get us? However we're thinking about the weather, did you know that in about the year, did you know that in many vaudeville theatres, when vaudeville was in bloom, there were signs up in the dressing rooms: NO GAGS PERMITTED ABOUT THE WEATHER. This was to eliminate the audience conditioning— if primitive methods of air-conditioning— if attendants were permitted to heat up the human atmosphere with jokes about the humidity and hot weather generally, the future attendance would suffer. Entain the audience, so that is how it's done, which is whether is like—but don't suggest heat and get them thinking about that until they are too uncomfortable to enjoy the show. The Show Must Go On.

HEARST CHAIN NEWSPAPERS IN THE UNITED STATES now number 21 dailies and 16 Sunday papers. The chain has been ruthlessly shortened to give more life to those which have achieved "the survival of the fittest". Last election the Hearst newspapers, aiming quite the policy promulgated by William Randolph Hearst opposed the candidature of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and urged the electors to elect that Republican chap—we have forgotten his name already—but the electors in millions preferred Roosevelt, a new political policy has been promulgated and now Hearst editors are told "It is true that Mr. Roosevelt wants and needs prosperity, and is trying earnestly to bring it about . . . Why put obstacles in his way when he is going in the direction we all desire? Who after all is qualified to criticize him?" Looks like the Hearst interests have found it unprofitable opposing Roosevelt. When the Hearst newspapers find they cannot buck the public opinion they are apparently content to swim with the popular current, and no government can change faster than they can.

Unemployed on the Farm

Councillor Thomas Leslie, of Toronto Township, declares that although Peel County farmers are in urgent need of harvest help, they can't get it. Able-bodied relief recipients, Mr. Leslie charges, have refused to take farm jobs, flatly informing welfare department officials that they will consider only factory work on highway construction. Mr. Leslie adds that he advertised in vain for men for a farm job, offering $2 a day and board though the average wage paid in Toronto Township is $30 a month and board.

"There is still lots of work available in Peel County," Mr. Leslie points out, "but these fellows on relief simply won't take it. Good dairy farming isn't the nicest job in the world, but someone has to do it, and it doesn't seem fair to leave the farmers short-handed at harvest time, while these men lie around and draw relief cheques."

True enough. It doesn't seem fair. It isn't fair. And there shouldn't be relief cheques available for able-bodied men who decline to work when jobs are offered them. Why should the hard-working taxpayers of Ontario be digging up funds to

That Body of Yours

Second Growth Tonsils and Tonsil Tags May Cause Arthritis

A patient consulted his physician about a sore throat. The physician informed him that it was his tonsils that were likely causing the trouble. The patient replied and stated that if it were his tonsils he must have grown another pair as he had had his tonsils removed when he was ten years old.

The physician made no reply but he knew that the tonsils had not been completely removed at that age or they would not have returned. When tonsils are removed at an earlier or later than six years, our throat specialist tell us that they may sometimes return.

There are many patients with arthritis who have their teeth carefully examined by Xray and other methods who never think of their tonsils being the cause because they had their tonsils removed in childhood. They admit that they have remnants of tonsils or tags still present in the throat, and also that they sometimes have a sore throat but think it is such a small piece or pieces of the tonsils left that they could not possibly cause the arthritis or rheumatism.

In speaking of these "secondary" tonsils or tonsil tags, Dr. Paul Hamilton Breuning, New York, in Medical Clinics of North America states that they are one of the most vicious types of all infected tonsils in producing inflammation in the fibrous and muscles at distant parts of the body. Second growth tonsils are tonsils which resulted from the healing of the partly completed operation for removing the tonsils and the surface of the piece of tonsil left after the operation is infected and may be much infection. Because this stub or tag of tonsil is not a deep or dark red in color it does not mean that it is not a source of infection into the blood and arthritis and rheumatism may develop.

The thought then in searching for the cause of the pains that is not only the cause of inflamed tonsils with frequent sore throats should be investigated also. Second growth" tonsils and tags should be investigated also.

BARN FIRES

Two barns were burned in the Plainfield district on Saturday night causing threshing operations. They serve as a reminder to all farmers that care must be exercised during this season of the year.

Even though such losses may be covered, or partially so, by insurance, there is a loss which cannot be met by money. The farmer would rather have his binz filled with grain, and stock and grain in his stock in a good barn than the insurance. Then, too, replacing the building and its contents. It is heartbreaking to see a summer's work in the fall or winter literally go up in smoke. Everything of the barn itself, and it is the hub of the farm activities, could again, even if the money is available to do so.

Fires cannot be too much caution around barns during the threshing season. Matches must be kept under, and can be ignited by the small spark. Once a fire starts, it is often impossible to subdue it, and it only becomes a matter of saving machinery or other removables can be rushed out.—Windsor Star.

LAND OF PLENTY

Sunday Island, in the lonely Kentucky mountains, 500 miles to the north of New Zealand, is a land of plenty, where Eddie Eagle's fish stories are according to Mr. Alfred Bacon, one of its two inhabitants, on return from a brief visit recently one a short business visit.

"It is a quite primitive life on the island," said Mr. Bacon, "we're only interested in what we can find and grow." He said they grew bananas, pineapples, guavas, peanuts fruit, tomatoes, sweet corn, citrus, lemons, paw-paws taro, kumaras, pumpkins and vegetable marrows. For meat they had the flesh of young goats which was really excellent; in fact, he preferred it to mutton. They also ate fish, which could be caught in abundance.

As a variation in their diet, many visitors brought a few tins which, in addition to supplying plenty of flesh, usually provided it a welcome change in the fare which they used in their cooking. They had no beer or wine, and in the place of sugar they used a syrup extracted from a root growing on the island. Their drink was made chiefly on their maize-meal porridge.—New Zealand Herald.

THREE CENTS

"Costs of production cannot be forced above a certain point without making it impossible for a newspaper to live. Its revenue from circulation and advertising—and when the circulation is swapped it comes either to merge with some other paper or go out of business.

"The man in the street who pays three cents for a newspaper that gives him a picture of the entire world while it is still hot, seldom if ever has any conception of the dollars a day it costs to collect that news, to edit it, to put into type, to run it on the press, to distribute it on the streets and in the mails. Three cents cannot do it."—Quincy Patriot-Ledger.

NEVER AGAIN!

One recalls the year 1930 as one of hope. To the returned soldier, two years after the guns ceased firing, world resembled a trash covered wasteland, through which a storm had passed. The war was over, to stay, the period of travail and grief was less acute. People dared only look forward, not back with that resignation that comes to a family after a funeral. The past was dead. A new era was starting.

The grass was green in Flanders, in Russia, and in France. Heavy crops began to spring from the bodies of millions dead.

"Never again!" a wiser world declared. Parents thanked God their children born in 1930 would never have any memory of what war was, and that they were separated from the psychological influences of the years of struggle. That they, born in the world of 1930, symbolized a new hope, a new ideal, a new destiny.

Twenty we read: "Chemical warfare is calling the class of 1930 to the colors. They will serve in the infantry." Over the world other classes of 1930 are just where the classes of 1914 were this date 24 years ago. Depressing thought, and tragic commentary. It seems that the world merely goes around, not forward.—Hamilton Spectator.

VANISHING SHAKERS

In 1867 there were in the United States approximately 4,000 members of the religious sect that Ann Lee planted in America in 1774 under the name variously rendered which may have been the United Society of True Believers in Christ's Second Coming—a name popularly forgotten many years and supplanted by the word Shakers.

By 1915 their number had decreased to 500 and this year it is reported to have sunk to 192. Sister Anna Case, who for 56 years has headed the settlement at Colonie, Albany County, died on Monday of last week in her 94th year. Three members of the settlement remain on the fine farm reported to be the most profitable in its neighborhood—she so proudly managed.

They have no successors; the doctrines of both Shakers does not attract those who preach Marxism and the proletariat dictatorship.—New York Sun.

INSCRUTABLE WESTERNERS

The psychology of Europeans is inscrutable, Men powder their faces with a shirt-front like a cuttlebone and of suit of wool even in summer, and women are in full dress when they are half naked. Even in the winter, I am told, even because it is rare for me to be dressed like that. But as I say, and again, even if the money is available to do so.

Fires cannot be too much caution around barns during the threshing season. Matches must be kept under, and can be ignited by the small spark. Once a fire starts, it is often impossible to subdue it, and it only becomes a matter of saving machinery or other removables can be rushed out.—Windsor Star.

CHEATING THE CHEATER

From Le Soralois, of Sorel, P.Q., comes the solution of a rather common problem in ethical ignorance. While the solution is ingenious, it may be well to state that neither Le Soralois in publishing it nor The Printed Word in making a free translation, endorses the morality involved.

The problem is stated thus: "Someone gives you a counterfeit dollar. You can't pass it on ordinarily do? You attempt to pass it to another dupe. Don't do it; on this point we are all alike! But the catch is that, nine times out of ten, you don't succeed. Discouraged, you put the piece in your pocket and decide to stay honest in spite of yourself."

Here is how the correspondent of Le Soralois solves the situation. He says: "A customer buys from me an article worth 35 cents, he gives me a dollar bill in payment. I must give him 75 cents in change. I put together my bad fifty-cent piece plus 35 cents in good money, making 85 cents in all, in place of 75. The customer, seeing that I have given him ten cents too much, hurriedly puts it all into his pocket, for fear that I shall see my error. My piece is filled with a loss of ten cents, if you like, but at least I am rid of it. I do not have to reproach myself for cheating my customer, since he himself has been dishonest enough to cheat me. Thus I live in peace with my conscience and my conscience. —Printed Word.

Marmora

Marmora—After an extended illness, William R. Reynolds passed away in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, about 1 a. m. Thursday morning. For quite a number of years the deceased was head electrician at the plant of Deloro Smelting and Refining Company and he was popular with all classes. A few months ago he became seriously ill and underwent an operation but failed to recover.

Besides his widow he leaves to mourn his loss five sons and three daughters, Arthur and Roger of New York, John, Charles and William at home, Mrs. J. Gowling and Jean of Ottawa and Eleanor at home.

The funeral service was held on Saturday afternoon at his late residence, Deloro. Interment in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

Next Wednesday afternoon a Softball Tournament will be held on Marmora Fair Grounds. While it will be under the auspices of Marmora Agricultural Society it will be under the direction of Marmora Softball Club. Six teams are expected to compete, including Havelock, Marmora, Deloro, Eldorado, Springbrook and Madoc. The J. R. Cook Challenge Cup will be competed for and some interesting games are looked for.

About twenty five members of Marmora Women's Institute met in St. Andrew's Church Hall last Tuesday evening to bid farewell to a valued member in the person of Mrs. E. Schofield, who is leaving with her family at the end of the month to reside in Toronto. The gathering was called to order by the President Mrs. J. Gordineer and Mrs. Hanchard acted as leader in the community songs. Miss Margaret Rowan contributed a humorous reading after which the guest of honor was called forward and Mrs. Rorry read an appropriate address. ### FORMER KING-HATER SUMMERS IN CANADA

No longer a hater of the British monarchy with a yen to punch the king's nose, William Hale Thompson—Big Bill in his Chicago mayoralty days—finds peace and contentment in Canada. Under the British flag, Thompson has a summer home at Baie Fine on Manitoulin Island, Georgian Bay, a home so remote and inaccessible that a caterpillar tractor is necessary to reach it after crossing to the island. A lengthy boat trip from Little Current is also required and here is Bill with boat starting up his outboard motor for a run to his home.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin'to go

The liver should pour two pounds of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays. It just stays in your bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin (Dr. Caldwell's Liver Tonic) gets at the cause. It tells the liver to pour those two pounds of bile into the bowels. Then you "sit and grin." Harmless and pleasant, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubborn cases require more than one dose.

HAPPY COUPLE 50 YEARS WED

Mr. And Mrs. Ebenezer Cooke, Gordon St., Honored on Occasion

Marking fifty years of happy married life of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Cooke, 70 Gordon Street, celebrations were held quietly over the week-end. Although Saturday was the anniversary day, a family reception was held on Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. Cooke's ten children now scattered in many parts of the province and in the United States gathered for the gala event.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooke have been residents of Belleville for the past twenty-five years coming here from England. They are both natives of Gloucestershire, England. Mrs. Cooke was formerly Edith Kate Cooke, daughter of late Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, while Mr. Cooke is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Cooke. They were married at Perth, Glamorganshire, South Wales, on August 20th, 1888 and lived in England until 1913. For seventeen years Mr. Cooke saw railway service in England with the Great Western Railway. On coming to Canada he was a popular employee of the Grand Trunk and the Canadian National Railways for another seventeen years. After thirty-four years of faithful service he retired six years ago.

Well Known in Community

Mr. and Mrs. Cooke are well known throughout the community and the congratulations showered on them, the cards with messages of good wishes, the flowers and gifts, showed the wide circle of friends happy to join with them in marking their jubilee day.

Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, four sons and seven daughters. One son, Charles, passed away shortly after coming to Canada. All were born in England and nine of them came to Canada with their parents in 1913, making the trip across the Atlantic a busy one for father and mother.

All members of the family were present yesterday for the celebration which took the form of a dinner party. Masses of flowers, gifts to the guests of honor, made a charming background for the gathering. The dinner table was centred with a beautifully decorated wedding cake, on which were the figures in gold "50 "1888-1938". Bouquets of gladioli and marigolds in shades of gold carried out the color scheme of the day. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, who were present yesterday were Mrs. R. ## Mother, Child Both Need Holiday

Giving Youngster Day Free of His Chores Lends New Interest

By LISA GRENELLE

After some experimenting, several failures and fizzles, a clever Colorado mother recently solved the problem of summer chores, made them fun for the children, but, at the same time, a business, which is as it should be.

In the beginning, Mrs. C. had the usual trouble. The children seemed neither satisfied to work or not to work.

When left all their time to play, pleasure palled. They stayed near their mother, demanding to run the vacuum cleaner, the lawn mower, to boil the eggs, to set the table. But once given such chores as a daily duty, their enthusiasm waned.

Mrs. C. tried shifting some of the chores. The same job all the time does get monotonous. But it didn't work to well. Ruth wasn't strong enough to mow the lawn; Billie was too young to be taught the art of cake making. "It's better to do the work myself," Mrs. C. thought, and dismissed the children.

Spelling Them?

But that, she realized as soon as they were off, was a greater mistake. Wasn't she spoiling them? Wasn't she making irresponsible little drones of them? The children must learn what work was, she decided; they must learn that, rather than play, was the normal method of killing time.

Mrs. C. called the children back to their chores and kept them busy. Grimness and gloom descended upon the household. Each child had the manner of a little martyr.

In principle, this may have been right, but as practice it was certainly deplorable.

So Mrs. C., to keep her principle and to satisfy the tenders, was forced into another idea. She would make of this a regular business proposition.

Each a Day Off

She called the children to her, got out pencil and paper. For each the needs of the home, which she would be responsible each week day of the week except one. Each child was to have one day off. She herself would take one afternoon off, to which she would leave the responsibility of running the house entirely to the children.

That was something new, exciting. It was business. The children were delighted.

Even when the scheme was old before was the novelty, it was excited about, the day off to work proved, to be a real treat.

When every day is a holiday what fun is a holiday? Even the children found that a genuine tiresome. But when there is only one free day, that is fun. What fun is like play, why play? But when play is limited, that is to get the most out of it, it must be planned.

KEEP EYEBROW LINES NATURAL

Trim, Normal - Looking Pattern Best

By HELEN FOLLETT

Eyebrows are in training. They're having the quirks taken out of them, are being made to follow the straight and narrow path of good behavior. We must say they have been on a prolonged "binge" made to go every which way since girls first discovered the fun of tweezing them.

The proper place for the eyebrow is along the line of the eye socket. If you plan away the lower portion, you carry an expression of surprise. If you remove the upper layer of silken threads, you appear sinister. Shaping eyebrows requires a discerning eye. There are beauty shops in which operators do nothing of eyes, lips and nostrils. If they're curved, so are the eyebrows.

The loveliest line is that of the wing of a bird in flight—low upturn on the inner end of the eyebrow, a long, thin downward sweep with a tiny lift at the end. You'll see this shaped brow in the portraits by old masters who knew what they were doing.

Cross carefully those little scimitars that have much to do with facial expression. Use mineral oil, applying it with a tiny brush. Keep them free of powder. If mascara is used, see that it does not sink down into the flesh.

A child born on this day may be clever, versatile and enterprising, certain shrewd or subtle qualities that may advance its interests and win it an established place with its superiors. It may write in practical lines.

Married Girl Yearns to Go Back to Her Office Job

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 years old and have been married over a year. Before my marriage I held a very good stenographic position but gave it up because my husband did not want his wife to work.

I love my husband very much and he is good to me but I get so restless. Housework is so monotonous and I feel so depressed and lonesome alone all day. There's no excitement in keeping house and I'm used to being around people.

I did have several temporary positions since I've been married, and I felt so much better, but then I couldn't do the cooking and was site out quite a bit. This my husband didn't like, as he said it made for a happier marriage if the wife stayed at home instead of going to office.

I suppose he's right, but I know so little about cooking and domestic work, and plan for my old job again. What can I do to get over this restless feeling?

Doris

It's perfectly natural for you to feel that way. Every girl who gives up a position and gets married feels the same at first. She has been accustomed to "doing and going," and has had a certain time for each task.

In her own home her time is her own. Nothing is really urgent; she is her own boss and can do as she pleases when she pleases. She's used to having a group of men and girls around, and there's always excitement—more or less—in an office.

I urge you to regard homemaking as a profession and not as a chore. You'll find it's just as interesting and exciting as office work. Take up cooking and learn how to do it well how to prepare appetizing and well-balanced meals.

Your husband is right when he says it makes for a happier marriage if the wife stays at home. A woman can be a competent housewife and a competent business woman at the same time. Either job takes all she has.

Tipping Servants After a Visit

It's a question often asked . . . whether or not you should tip a servant after you have been a visitor in a home. You should, unless the hostess requests that you do not.

Let's say that you have spent a week-end in a one-servant, even a part-time servant, home. A two-dollar tip is about the right amount, or more, for the longer stay. Of course if the maid has done any laundering or pressing or sewing for you or errands for you, your tip should be increased in accordance with the amount of service. In a larger household you give one or two dollars to each servant who has served you. If you are an intimate friend of the household that has several servants, and if you do visit there often you should give a big present to every one of the servants.

If possible you should give the tip directly to the servant, with a "Good-by, Marie" or "Thank you, Marie." And make a special point of not giving the tip in the presence of the hostess or host or other guests.

Servants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am in doubt as to whether, when one has guests visiting for several days, it is correct to introduce them to the servants or whether in the course of their visit they casually address the servants? This has been puzzling me for some time.

2. When introducing a man and woman, should the woman's name be mentioned first, for example, "Bill, I'd like you to meet Miss Dorothy Smith, Dorothy, Mr. Bill Anderson".

1. Very often a servant is introduced to a visitor, sometimes quite casually, sometimes not in a "great house" where there are many servants, the servant in attendance on the guest will come into most contact (for instance the maid who serves the guest's room) will be introduced somewhat like this, "Nora will unpack your bags if you will leave the keys with her," Or, "If you have anything you wish pressed, will you tell Nora, and she will be glad to do this."

In a small household where there is perhaps a servant who has for a long time been employed in the household, the hostess of that home almost always says something like this, when the guest arrives, "This is our Mary, and she will be happy to do anything she can for you". Or, if you are a relative, this is usually the form of introduction, "Mary, this is Mrs. Benton, my sister from Virginia."

While such introductions vary according to the formality or informality of the household, in either case when they are made, they should be made with the graciousness that reveals appreciation of personality and the dignity of service.

2. The basic rule of introduction is that a man is introduced to a woman, the woman's name being mentioned first. "Miss Smith, may I present Mr. Anderson, Or "Miss Smith, this is Mr. Anderson" or "Mr. William Anderson?", or for a very informal and casual introduction, "Miss Smith, Anderson."

However, another correct and casual form of introduction is, "Mr. Anderson, have you met Miss Smith (or "Miss Dorothy Smith)?"

Older Man Disgusts Son's Wife

Has Repulsed Him but Fears to Stir Up Trouble

By VIRGINIA LEE

There are few things that disgust a young girl more than an old man who "makes passes" at her, as they say.

I suppose I should qualify that statement with the words, generally speaking. But, again, generally speaking, the young girls who make a fuss over older men and encourage their attentions are those who want to get something out of them.

Otherwise they are sweet and gracious, courteous, interested and friendly, in the general course of social life, but that is all.

And I often have thought that it would be a most enlightening—but scarcely pleasant — experience for amorous old boys to hear some of the remarks girls make about them when said girls are together and chatting of this and that.

Or young woman, 31, writes me, signing herself Disgusted Daughter-In-Law.

Her father-in-law, she writes, "is continually making passes at me that are disgusting to me. This has been going on for some time. At first, I tried to make excuses for him, thinking perhaps he hadn't done it purposely, but it has happened so often that I even put him out of my home twice and stayed out of his.

"But this is causing unhappiness for my husband's mother. She's a grand person, and I'm afraid the shock might harm her, as she is sickly."

Then she says she has told her husband about it, but he feels he cannot say anything to his father. She also has told her father and mother, and her dad said he would talk to the man. But she doesn't want to make unpleasantness between the two families. And she thinks, too, that if she complained to his family they would turn against her.

Well, if you've told your husband and he won't protect you, and your dad and mother know, but you do not want them to help, you will have to handle it yourself. I find that is what women usually have to do on outside novels where great big heroic men rush to the defense of helpless women.

A very tasteful of your demeanor when with your father-in-law. Many girls, innocently, maybe, put temptation in the way of men like him by their attitudes, dress, etc. So be sure there is no fault on your part.

Then do not allow yourself to be left alone with him. His wife probably knows nothing of his tendencies. Be nice but never affectionate to your father-in-law and don't be afraid to take your own part at any time.

NEW ELEMENT

There's much to be said in favor of the existence of a 93d element, transmutation theories of the French Academy of Science as discovered by the noted physicists, Jean Perrin and associates and very little that can be said against it—until the initial data have been carefully checked. This will be done immediately by workers all over the world as soon as the paper is published.

When the distinguished Russian chemist Mendeleef conceived of the Periodic Table, or Periodic Classification of the elements, arranging them in families and groups according to their weight, chemical activity, etc., he left several blanks in the table to be filled in during later years as new elements were discovered. From the lighter to the heaviest known substance the series allows for 92. Italian physicists, however, have made a 93d and a 94th by adding electrons to uranium in a single bombardment.—Christian Science Monitor.

How to Beat the Heat If You Stay in Town

By JULIET SHELBY

Maybe you are one of the unlucky ones who just has to stay in town all summer. Well, don't be too discouraged—there are several ways to beat the heat and remain cool looking and comfortable.

Coiffures this season are definitely a big help. Shorter hair is the thing and it is both smart and practical. Select a hair style that is off the face and neck. And remember to keep the arrangement simple, and see that the cut defines the shape of your head. It's a good idea to go into conference with your hairdresser about this before you do anything drastic. Between the two of you, you'll be able to work out something that will be a delightful combination of beauty and comfort.

In hot weather it is better to have your shampoo a little more often than you do in the winter. Once a week is good average. If your work is around home instead of in an office, you can go to the hairdresser early in the morning. Have it set, then come back and let it dry while you are busy around the house. This will save you those wilting forty-five minutes under the drier.

The question of spending is a serious one if you are staying in town in a hot apartment. Try to steel yourself an hour of complete relaxation before you go to bed. Just stop thinking, talking and worrying about how hot you are. Take a tepid bath or shower and put on some cooling eau de cologne. Slip into a comfortable housecoat, lie down and read a mildly interesting book. While you are reading you might sip a cool glass of grapefruit juice. It will help cool you off and it will be wonderful for you.

How To Be Cool By Day.

Another problem is how to keep clean and fresh looking through a long, blistering day. Take lots of baths or showers. Start your day with one. Then use eau de cologne and dusting powder, have another before dinner and try to lie down and have at least a half-hour of relaxation before you get dressed again. You will feel much better for those few minutes. But even with all the increased bathing you will find that you will have to cleanse your face and neck often during the day and apply fresh make-up. The process itself is refreshing, and you will be getting compliments about how crisp and cool you look.

To be on the safe side it is a good idea to use a deodorant or antiperspirant about three times a week during the intense heat. Then you will be absolutely sure that you are going to retain that freshness all day long.

HOUSEWIVES FORM UNION

French housewives in Paris have been forced to form a union, calling itself the "Union of Housewives," Reuters reports.

New laws governing the economic rights and privileges of household servants drove the Paris housewives to organize for their own protection, it is said. The French government recently increased the wages that all servants who have worked in a home for a year or more are now entitled to a vacation, but extra pay to cover their meals and room rent during that period.

Individual Chicken Pies
Green Beans

Lemon Sherbet Cake or Cookies

Individual chicken pies are favorites at restaurants. Not all restaurants make good chicken pie, however, but the price you pay has, of course, something to do with that. You can hardly expect a chicken pie, complete with plenty of chicken and gravy, for a dime. For that matter, any kind of pie with chicken until very tender, then separate from bones and grizzle and cut into small pieces. Now you can either line the individual pie tins with pastry, fill with chicken, small onion or two, a bit of carrot and diced potatoes, add gravy, season well, put on the top crust, and bake.

Or you can make a sort of cream-ed chicken by thickening the soup-y left after the chicken was cooked, and then adding the chicken, vegetables and seasoning. Make either a biscuit crust or a regular pie crust, and when your filling is hot, bake, don't forget to prick the crust to let out the steam. Bake in a quick oven—400 degrees at first, say for ten minutes, and then at 350 for at least 0 minutes more. If you are afraid the vegetables will not get done in time, cook them before hand-ing as you did the chicken or par-boil them.

Three and one-half cups sifted cake flour, three and one-half tablespoons baking powder, one-half tablespoon salt, one-half cup granulated sugar, one tablespoon cinnamon, three-fourths tablespoon ginger, three-fourths tablespoon cloves, one-half tablespoon baking soda, one egg, well beaten; one-third cup melted shortening, one cup molasses, one cup milk. Sift flour, baking powder, salt, sugar, spices and soda together three times. Combine egg, shortening and molasses. Add flour mixture gradually, while stirring, and blend well. Cover bowl and chill several hours or over night in refrigerator. Shape into balls three-fourths inch in diameter. Roll in granulated sugar. Bake on greased baking sheet in a moderately hot oven of 375 degrees F. for ten minutes. Makes five dozen cookies. In using an electric beater, beat the egg, add shortening and molasses at high speed. Scrape the bowl and beat one minute longer. Turn the beater to low speed and add the dry ingredients sifted together. (Tested by Good Housekeeping Institute.)

Concealed Plumbing.

It has taken a long time to overcome the old selling point of "open plumbing", but at last the public has become less suspicious of anything that closes in the plots of breath a lavatory or kitchen sink, and the manufacturers, taking advantage of this wearing down of prejudice, have come out with lavatories that look like cabinets with doors below the basin that open up to reveal the sink. # Babe Must Never Hear Word, 'No'?

Psychologist Insists Infant Should Be Restrained

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

THOUSANDS of young mothers have disciplined themselves in rigid routine in the infant's physical care. They have followed the clock and the pediatrician's schedule to the very letter counting no self-sacrifice too costly to pursue this course.

And they have read many books and pamphlets on child care; also on child training. They patiently early habit-forming fits into their own routine about as perfectly as did the parts of Solomon's Temple.

All the while these conscientious young mothers have heard and read over and over and believed as if it were established as a fact for all ages "Never spank the child. Those who do admit their failure and stupidity." Such statements they have heard in practically every respectable assemblage of young mothers heard it at their bridge club, the alumni association meeting and in their sorority. And to be more sure about it they read it in any day, perhaps in their newspaper. Said an anxious young mother to me recently, "All the girls of our sorority say the baby should never hear the word 'No'."

A Dreadful Danger

Well, this conscientious mother who in physical care and simple habit-forming is the infant has about attained perfection, soon learns that her darling baby is so eager to express himself, to explore and appropriate all that promises him pleasure that he avoids danger only when personally protected; only avoids objects, however perishable, which injure him when intercepted by a larger, stronger person, and expresses no awareness that another individual possessed any right. When in desperation this mother says "No," she might as well have said it to the ocean waves.

Accordingly, for his protection and protection of her self-regard, she must wear herself out before or after this toddler every minute. In case she hires a substitute she still must face the multiplying instances when she and baby are unmy each other just because he never had acquired restraint.

Think of the frail and weary, nervous mothers—some indeed who have an untimely grave—because their little child had never learned the meaning of "No." And all the while she is giving up her life inch by inch, she and the child rarely realize complete enjoyment with each other.

Occasionally a mother one might say, "Only one thing that lacked: She did this silly doctrine of no restraint and give to the poor child a chance to escape certain dangers, and win the crown of consciousness and citizenship so that you and he might live together happily thereafter."

"LIGHT NIGHTS"

From the end of May to the middle of July Denmark has what are known as "light nights"—nights that are never wholly dark because a silvery glamor is in the air all night until sunrise. During this period, the heavens again are littered in sapphire velvet of the deepest intensity and the ocean is like a silver paper pasted on the blue. The trees are sharply etched, and the birds begin to sing earlier than by day. In the complete hush, the hoot of an owl or the sudden leap of a squirrel from one branch to another causes a tremulous shiver to vibrate through the night air. In the National Museum are treasured exquisite relics of ever broidery—Hedebo sewing"— which Hedlegd says were worked entirely during the "light nights."—Christian Science Monitor.

Claims to Have Changed Madame America's Figure

By LILLIAN CAMPBELL

DOROTHEA DOCTORS, New York, claims to have changed Madame America's figure, and made her fortune thereby.

Miss Doctors has just a $25-a-week girl several years ago. Then 1931, when the depression was at its lowest ebb, she started her own business and made good over a feminine Horatio Alger story —and now she rates $150,000 a year.

It was this way: In those days the boyish form was the correct fashion figure—no waist, small bosom, sans shape of any kind. She thought it was pretty awful and unhealthful, and considered and considered, until she found a way to change it. She combined bandeaux to call by any other name) with brassieres to suit her in any of the regular stocks, so she proceeded to make her own.

Miss Doctors' figure was admired, and friends asked her to make garments similar to her own for them, so she started her own business. Now it is not uncommon for her clients to make trips from California for the purpose of being fitted by her. She gives 'em "glamour" by trim waists and youthful bosoms.

Her success has given Miss Doctors an entirely new philosophy about the whole business of jobs.

"It is almost more important," says Dorothea, "to know when to let go of a job than to know how to get one! In the first place, no one should take just a job; even to begin with, unless it is along the lines which you see marking a path toward your best ultimate development. Once on the path, even if you have arrived at the point where you have gone as far as possible for you to get in that particular job, take your bearings, mark time and let go!

"If you have something really beyond the average in ideas, in talent, in ability—never mind what anyone else says about depression. There is no such thing for one with ideas."

How Your Appendix Is Formed

Dr. Clendening Tells Why It Is Subject To Infection

By LOGAN CLENDENING M.D.

OUR DISCOURSION of appendicitis recently was somewhat dogmatic and today it may be well to add a more logical description.

The Appendix is a small part of the intestine at the juncture of the small and large bowel. It has no purpose nor function in man. In him it is a vestigial structure—a mere degenerate reminiscence of the magnificent caecum of our perhaps distant relatives the ruminants.

Like all vestigial structures it gets into trouble—like capitalism and monarchy (and democracy?). Functionless organs are peculiarly liable to disease.

And the appendix is more helpless than most because the contents of its intestines, as they move over it, are a mass of germs. The appendix itself being mostly lymphatic tissue on the inside surface, is particularly liable to infection. So all the elements of trouble are at hand.

There has been quite a discussion in the medical journals lately about the possibility of trauma causing appendicitis. Trauma means violence—a fall, a hit, an accident of any kind. A certain number of cases of appendicitis are caused by injury to the abdomen, the most plausible explanation being that the violence thus inflicted contents of the large intestine into the cavity of the appendix, which is usually closed—a matter of protection on nature's part.

Remarkable Instance

A most remarkable instance of appendicitis due to trauma, which came to my attention, was that of a man whose business began with vague pain in the region of the appendix. Finally an abscess formed at this point, which a surgeon opened. It was considered to be an ordinary appendix abscess until during the dressing of it one day, a peculiar thing was seen sticking out of the wound. The patient discovered that himself. The surgeon who was dressing the wound took hold of it with a forceps and pulled out the toothpick.

How did a toothpick get into an appendicular abscess? Undoubtedly the patient had swallowed it. He did not think he had, and could not remember any occasion when he had accidentally swallowed a toothpick, but that is the only explanation that will hold. Foreign bodies frequently are swallowed without the slightest sensation accompanying them. The toothpick had made its way without harm as far as the appendix. Presumably it, through the digestive tract until it got to the juncture of the small and large bowel, and then, by luck, perforated the coat of the intestine and caused the abscess which initiated appendicitis.

An Expert Gives Pointers On Fighting Ubiquitous Moth

THERE is no one season for fighting moths. It is a year-around battle. But as August is a popular vacation month, and as moths work industriously when all is quiet and they are undisturbed, Katharine Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute, gives some timely advice on preventing moth damage in the August issue of the magazine.

If you are storing your household woolens in a cedar chest, be sure the chest is well constructed with a high percentage of aromatic red cedarwood, and that the cover fits tightly. Everything stored in it should be cleaned thoroughly. The chest should not be opened except to remove something from storage.

If you are using garment bags, remember even though they are "chemically treated" or impregnated with cedar oil, they protect only by keeping moths out. So be sure the bags you buy are well made and are kept tightly closed when not used. Also, remember the clothes must be clean and free from moths, moth eggs and larvae before you store them in the garment bags.

In storing woolen blankets and rugs on shelves, fumigate them by sprinkling generously with a fumigant and then wrap them very closely in heavy paper, says Miss Fisher. You don't think because you put your woolens in a dresser drawer, or provided them with mothballs or other fumigants that they are safe. They are not. Moths and their eggs can escape through cracks, and there seldom remains a sufficient strength of concentrate protection.

Fighting moths, insect sprays with moth-proofing compounds, are warned. Insect sprays will not make fabrics moth-proof. They only help prevent damage by killing flying moths and the larvae which are on the fabric at the time. To moth-proof fabrics one mothproofing compound must be sprayed so thoroughly that it enters every thread. Nothing is moth-proof, however, until it has been adequately treated with a good mothproofing compound.

Pirates Lose No Ground In Twin Loss; Cooper and Snead Tie

Buck Newsom Deserves Votes As Most Valuable Player as He Hurls Browns Out of Cellar

St. Louis Has Lead Over A's of One Game in This Respect

PIRATES LOSE TWO

First Double Loss of Season But Lead is Not Impaired

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

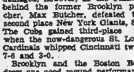
New York Yankees have an 11-game lead today as they face this week's trying program of five straight doubleheaders. Pittsburgh Pirates aren't looking as much as they did a few weeks ago but still are five games ahead of their National League field. The Cincinnati Reds, instead of being up in second place as they had hoped, are back in a third-place tie with Chicago Cubs.

But all these are secondary matters—the Browns are out of the cellar.

It looked like an impossible feat for Gabby Street's St. Louis Club to escape last place not long ago when the Athletics still were going strong. But thanks to Buck Newsom, who probably deserves a few votes for the most valuable player prize, they're in seventh place, a game ahead of Philadelphia.

Wins 19th Game

Newsom, winning his 19th game of the season and his sixth in a row, was the main cog in the Browns rise. He ended Detroit's six-game winning streak yesterday with a six-hit performance, as St. Louis won, 8-4, even though Hank Greenberg socked his 42nd home run and Al Benton hurled hitless ball for the last five innings. Rookie Land Clift broke the ice with a homer in the sixth and added another in the ninth with the Browns had put over five runs in the eighth.



The Yankees took care of the Athletics, meanwhile, sweeping them into eighth place, 5-4 and 8-1. Lefty Gomez pitched a steady game in the opener and Red Ruffing did twice as well in the nightcap.

The double victory added to the Yanks' lead as Cleveland's second-place Indians split a doubleheader with Chicago, losing the opener, 4-3, when Johnny Allen cracked in the eighth, then winning the nightcap, 3-2.

Pirates Lose Two

Pittsburgh suffered its first doubleheader defeat of the season at Chicago, losing 6-4 and 8-1 to the Cubs. The Bucs' lead wasn't badly damaged, however, as the Pirates behind the former Brooklyn pitcher, Max Butcher, defeated the second place New York Giants, 8-3. The Cubs gained third-place tie when the now-dangerous St. Louis Cardinals whipped Cincinnati twice 7-6 and 2-0.

Brooklyn and the Boston Bees drew one good mound performance as the Dodgers won the first game, 6-0, behind Fred Fitzsimmons, and the Bees turned in a 9-4 triumph for Dick Errickson. Faced by Zeke Bonura, Washington downed Boston's Red Sox, 5-4, in the opener then went down, 7-2, before Joe Cronin's fielding.

The Sports Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir—

I trust you will allow me one little space in your paper to express my gratitude to the Softball loving fans, and supporters in your city.

Many happy hours were enjoyed by the writer, on the old "Coleman Plain" diamond, also in assisting with the work, on the upper diamond on the property so kindly set at our disposal by Mr. Wm. McCreary.

Our Belleville aggregation had in 1937 some splendid displays of true British sportsmanship and had the Salmaa Club get up to the third round, the Intermediate "B" team Petite Anne, or Lonely Bunch, captured the championship in their class and our "A" team also asterded the playoffs but were knocked off by Peterboro.

From various reports through your columns I note some fine exhibitions have been given the public, and now the play off games in the O.A.S.A. are in progress. I am looking forward to the championships for and Junior "A".

Your Belmont team certainly won their way into the hearts of two thousand fans here, Wednesday night as they played clean, heady ball and took their 1-0 defeat as true sportsmen. Not a squak. I trust the fans get behind the entire club in the play-offs give the boys their hearty personal and financial support.

Thank you for your valuable space. Will, with pleasure, visit your town championships.

Yours very truly,
Wm. J. Todd,

BUFFALO BISONS HARDEST HITTING SQUAD IN LOOP

Only Four Games Behind Third Place Syracuse Chiefs

WIN TWIN BILL

Toronto Leafs in Fifth Place By Small Percentage

(By The Associated Press)

All their present rate of progress, Buffalo Bisons aren't likely to do much more than slide into the International League playoffs but when they have their collective eyes on the ball, they're undoubtedly the hitting-est team in the circuit.

Paced by the veteran Ollie Carnegie, current home run king, they are the Yankees of the League when they get started and they may make plenty of trouble in the post season round of games.

Jersey City Giants, who were threatening their hold on fourth place, Toronto Maple Leafs, 12 out 56 runs in five games. But they had to sweep a doubleheader yesterday 7-2 and 12-3 to gain a 3-2 edge in the series.

The twin victory again gave the Bisons a 7 1-2 game hold on their first division spot and left them only four games behind the third-place Syracuse Chiefs who took a 3-2 decision from Toronto in the second game.

Two home runs by Babe Herman helped keep the Jerseys in the first game running and finally old Clyde Shoun, Buffalo veteran, hadn't pitched since 1936 had to step in and rescue Joe Marcus in the ninth. The Little Giants had scored four runs in the eighth. The second game was a duel by the herd collected 17 hits including homers by Boland and Phillips.

Jersey pitching — seven-hit ball and shaving off one rally after another by the late leading Red Rochester the first game 4-3 over Newark. But the Buffalo sun-hit blowing for the Bears halted the Wings in the nightcap and Newark won 3-1 by handing Jersey its first Al Sherer in the fourth inning.

Montreal conquered the collar-dwelling Baltimore Orioles twice, 8-3 and 4-2.

PETES PROTEST OSHAWA WIN

Heavy Hitting Game Won By G. M.-Men 11 to 10 Saturday

Oshawa, Aug. 22 (Special)—Oshawa General Motors defeated Brockton 11 to 10 in a game largely crowded at Alexandra Park Saturday afternoon to take a one-game lead in the O.B.L. playoffs. The game, which took close to three hours to play, was finished under protest, while mixed with the barrage of base hits was a free-for-all fight between members of the Peterborough team and spectators and the expulsion from the park of Coach Lefty Wills of Oshawa, following with Umpire Collings. Oshawa's winning run came in the Washington, with Bennett batting for pinch-hitting. Bennett crashed into Catcher Pepes second-sacker as he was fielding the ball, allowing Wallace to scamper over the plate with the run.

It was the second collision between the two players in consecutive innings and the game was only continued after heated protest that it would be protested. The free-for-all occurred when McNally, who had taken second in the seventh inning to the plate umpire's decision and left the field after entering the Peterborough dugout. He was accompanied with a spectator and in a few seconds hundreds surrounded the open dugout with fists flying in several spots. The game was a heavy-hitting affair and marked the first time since coming to Oshawa three years ago than Ken (Jake) Bolwell, ace pitcher for Oshawa, was unable to finish a game he started.

SAM SNEAD AND H. COOPER TIE IN CANADIAN OPEN

Will Play 18-Hole Playoff Today For The Title

RUNYAN IS THIRD

Tony Manero, Hottest Golfer on Saturday's Rounds

Toronto, August. 22.—(CP)—Young Sam Snead got another chance to wrest the Canadian open golf crown from the bald head of Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicago today, for the reason that the Lighthorse couldn't hold on when his Mona ny seemed secure.

The slammin' man from White Sulphur Springs W. Va., all but took the title from the Chicago Veteran Saturday when Cooper floundered in with seven strokes on Mississauga Club's home holes to finish the championship tourney tied even proper with a 72-hole score of 277. Out on the course, Sam heard the news at the 15th tee when he needed two birdies and two pars for 276.

He got his birdie three at the 15th hitting his approach to within four feet of the pin. He was par four on the 16th but at the second last hole his pitch was only nine feet from the flag. Sam studied his putt then rimmed the cup and had to sink the ball from two inches away for an even four.

On the 18th where Cooper's game had gone to the winds, Sam drove into a little gully behind the 17th tee. But he came out nicely and needed to sink a 50-foot chip to win, or take two strokes to tie. His shot was two feet away and he rimmed his fourth to draw level.

18-hole Playoff

So an 18-hole playoff was ordered today between the youngster who became a sensation of the tournament circuit less than two years ago and the champion who left the pack on his heels in the Canadian open at St. Andrew's Club here in 1937. At stake besides the championship was the difference between the $1,000 first prize and $600 second prize—and Snead and Cooper are running one-two among golf's money-winners this year.

Hotshot Manero all day was Tony Manero with rounds of 70 and 66, but early difficulties left him out of the pace and he finished in a three-way tie for seventh place with Ben Del., post together two 75s for a 72-hole total of 286 and fourth position. Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N.Y. scored 69-71 the final day to finish fifth with 287 and Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N.J., tied him with two 70s. Paul Runyan, White Plains, N.Y., tied with Cooper and Snead entering the final round fired 75 on the last 18 holes and wound up in third place with 280.

Robson Top Canadian Pro

Lex Robson of Lakeview, Toronto, was top Canadian Professional, equalling par 72 on his third round before coming one under on his fourth for 289. For the second successive year Phil Farley of Montreal was professional, his 295 putting him nine strokes ahead of C. Ross Somerville of Toronto, Ont., low times Canadian Amateur champion.

Little Benny's Note Book

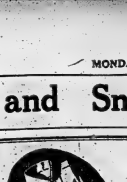
I thought I was going to be late for supper again tonite on account of how dark it was, and I opened the front door easy and peeked in and I was rite, thinking. Heck, they look half ways through already.

Meaning pop and ma back in the dining room talking and eating, and I had a idea, thinking, G, if I laid down on the couch in the front room and accidently fell asleep for a couple of minutes, then I could say I'd been asleep in the front room and it wouldn't be any lie.



And I snuck in and laid down on the couch, and I could hear pop saying. This is the last straw, this is the 3rd nite in a row, what does he think this is, a hotel?

Presently meaning me, and the next thing I knew I was asleep dreaming I was walking through a forest and I met a giant and he claimed I was a Terkish rug and grabbed me and started to shake me to get the dust out, and I woke up and what was it but pop and ma both shaking me at the same time, ma saying, What are you doing in here with both feet on my good cushions, your father and I were so worried we were going to telefone the police.

What kind of a stunt is this, this is a new one for Peet and Max, pop said, and I said, Well gosh, I cant help falling asleep, can I?

Who the dooce knows what you can help? pop said. And by golley, I looked in this room 2 minutes before we went in to dinner, and there wasn't a waking or sleeping boy in here, now that I come to think of it, and ma said, O, never mind trying to fix the time and date, I'm so relieved to see him could give him a crack he'd remember to his dying day. Go back and say your prayers, he said.

Which I did feeling lucky.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

This present week has all the markings of the proverbial headache for the sports department. Commencing today there are the play-off games, both at Napanee, in the Bay of Quinte League. The Kingston Locomotive Aeroplanes with a 2-1 victory in the Prince Edward County set on Saturday, just as the Churchian lads surprised the Lower Canada boys during previous. Now Kingston and Picton are slated to meet in a seven-death game at Napanee this afternoon with the winner meeting the Napanee Gibbards in the first game of the league semi-finals, commencing at 8:30 p.m. this evening. The second game of the league semi-finals will be played on the home grounds of the team winning the afternoon sudden death fixture.

The O.A.S.A. provincial softball play-off swing into action tonight with the Kingston "Tanners" versus the Belleville Corbys A.C. at Coleman Flats, with the return game scheduled to be played in Kingston on Wednesday. If this series is completed in successive games, the remaining Point Anne "contestmen"—Corbys fifth and final city league game will be played this coming Tuesday. Also in the line of softball is the return game between Kingston and the Belleville Juniors. The Limestone City kids eked out a 10-9 win over the local teen-aged boys at Kingston and are naturally coming to Belleville favorites to repeat victory or taking the series in successive games. Joe Reid Kingston's pilot will entertain other ideas in the picture.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Fair Grounds the fans will get their first peek at the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors in junior O.B.A. action, the Kiwanis meeting the Oshawa juniors here, with the return game scheduled to be played in Oshawa on Saturday. There is rumored a fair sprinkling of ex-talent to this game as a former Belleville boy is the new pilot for the Motor City kids, we refer to Ralph "Slugs-em-Deep" McGee who is reported to be pitching exceptionally good ball for the Oshawa juniors this year. McGee is the visitors' big threat and in his fire-ball line-mate Ken Bolwell of the Oshawa crowd. Coach Stub Barrett feels his squad has two pitching aces in Bolwell and Doherty. It should be a real series.

Major league magnates have tired waiting for Chandler to produce the pay sensaes of trips to St. Louis, and are in a position to demolish—at about it—possibly move one of the two Mound City clubs to another city, claims Sid C. Keener, sports editor of the St. Louis Star-Times, following a trip with the Cardinals on which he felt out the big-wigs on the big items.

"The transfer of the Cardinals or of Browns would require long and drawn out legal action, and it's doubtful that this conductor has been advised that Commissioner Landis and other Browns may be invited to move to Brooklyn," writes Keener.

"The American League circuit would become top-sided by the transfer of the Reds to Brooklyn. This change would create five teams in the East and only three in the West. This condition would be remedied by changing the Washington Senators from an eastern representative to a western club.

"This shift of the Browns from St. Louis to Brooklyn is simply the first suggestion that has been made in solving the St. Louis problem. There are two clubs here. Possibly baseball can support both. The 1938 season opens but perhaps eventually. "Other major league magnates have finally become convinced that St. Louis will not support two big league teams.

"Therefore, one club must go—the Browns to Brooklyn or the Cardinals to—well, the ban may be lifted in Detroit or Cleveland.

"Sadly, Cardinals-to-Detroit is the logical solution to the entire matter. Detroit is considered the most enthusiastic baseball city by either major circuit on the basis of population.

"Each league has opposed the change in its circuit, currently block the attempts to rid St. Louis of one team. The time has arrived, this department has been informed by an authoritative source, for the two organizations to get together and arrange a satisfactory settlement relative to the Cardinals' transfer to another city in the two leagues.

"Brandon, no doubt, will hop at the opportunity to send his club to Detroit or to Cleveland.

"The American League would prefer Brooklyn to St. Louis.

"Cleveland is a perfect baseball centre. The enormous population of some 10,000,000 within a short ride of the park in Brooklyn makes that city more attractive than St. Louis, critics. League competition for the Yankees would hardly be a threat to the Dodgers' supremacy in upper New York.

"The American League would have to approve the transfer of the Cardinals to Detroit or Cleveland, and the National League would have to sanction the Browns' invasion of Brooklyn.

"Anyway, this is the important topic that will be discussed by club owners, who are tired waiting for business to improve in St. Louis."

Mickey Cochrane could probably cause a big revival in baseball interest, and this is the matter that is going to receive important attention from the major league magnates. Sooner or later, the Cardinals or the Browns may be transferred to another city."

Theatres

AT THE CAPITOL

"Partners in Crime"

"Partners in Crime" at the Capitol as his No. 1 is an airy, lighthearted bit of mystery that draws a lot of entertainment from the antics of Basil Rathbone and Ida Lupino. Overman, two of the funniest players in Hollywood today. Penny Singleton, Muriel Hutchison and Ines Courtney contribute beauty and talents to the general merriment.

The picture plot spins Overman in the role of a private detective on the trail of a couple of blackmailers. Anthony Quinn, the Irish-Indian who played so effectively in "The Train From Madrid" does a "heavy" part in "Partners in Crime," and does it very ably, with a chilling air of menace.

Overman and Karns, as a detective and a newspaper writer, are down-and-out financially when they meet Muriel Hutchison.

Overman is suspicious of Miss Hutchison's connection with Quinn, who looks like a dubious character; and in no time at all he finds that they are in the city to blackmail the wife candidate for mayor in the forthcoming city election.

Overman offers to help the reform candidate, and manages to nail Quinn in jail. But Miss Hutchison carries on the blackmail plot in spite of this.

Overman then tricks Karns into letting himself be jailed and thrown into the same cell with Quinn in an effort to get information. The trick gets sour when Quinn is poisoned and Karns is accused of murder.

In a final mad dash of energy Overman goes to work to clear his self and succeeds so well that he almost makes him the mayor of the town in the process.

"Ladies In Distress"

"Ladies in Distress," starring Alison Skipworth and Polly Moran is grand fun for the entire family. The hilarious antics of "Skippy" and Polly, aided by the versatile Max Terhune, Bob Livingston, Virginia Grey and Berton Churchill, will please old and young alike.

Allen is the Mayor of a small town, which is infested by racketeers. Against the wishes of her sister, Polly Moran, Mayor Skipworth goes to New York and looks up a boy who once went to school with her, and who has since become a big time racketeer in the big city. Bob Hope, in this role, agrees to come back to Bohemia with Skipworth and help her wipe out the gangsters.

Bob becomes attracted to Virginia Grey, Skippy's and Polly's niece. After many amusing situations, Bob is finally able to rid Bonneyville of the racketeers, and decides to quit the game himself.

Max Terhune, playing the role of Bonneyville's Police Chief, does more than his share of entertaining.

AT THE BELLE

"The Crowd Roars"

As Tommy McCoy, the boy who fought his way from the slums to the heights, Robert Taylor presents the finest, most vigorous acting job of his career in "The Crowd Roars," on the Belle screen.

Here is the answer to the plea for action in the pictures, that Mr. Taylor putting every ounce of energy and ability into the first prize fight role. The picture is packed with thrills, suspense and gripping suspense.

Several of Hollywood's supporting star: Frank Morgan as his father, ex-vaudeville trouper; Edward Arnold as the gang leader behind the scenes of the fight game; Maureen O'Sullivan as his sweetheart and Jane Wyman as her school chum and rival for Taylor's affection; William Gargan as the ex-light-heavyweight champ killed in the prize ring; Lionel Stander as Taylor's trainer; Nat Pendleton as a gambling rival; Isabel Jewell as Frank's wife; Gene Reynolds as Tommy McCoy as a boy. Every one makes a standout of his or her characterization.

Richard Thorpe, directing the picture, has kept it going at a break-neck pace without sacrificing values for feeling. Sam Zimbalist, producing from Lawrence Bruce's original story, has given the film true flavor of the world it represents.

A very interesting and unusual Pete Smith oddity "Penny Party," produced in full beautiful technicolor, the Bells latest World News events and "A Day at the Beach" an amusing Captain and the Kids cartoon will be presented on the same program.

Next Attraction Coming

Sidney Lanfield, who directed "Thin Ice," "Love and Kisses" and "Wake Up and Live" for 20th Century, has assigned Betty Davis, Errol Flynn, Ronald Reagan and John Russell.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Music For Madame"

Wearing a gay romance for the glorious voice of Nino Martini, "Music For Madame" at the McCarthy Theatre proves to be one of the screen's most delightful musical offerings. Joan Fontaine is partnered opposite Nino Martini.

With a fine cast and delightfully tuned music, enhanced by songs that range from operatic selections to modern ballads, the picture takes on the role of a model singer even more of a screen favorite than his former films, "Way To Romance" and "The Gay Desperado."

Hollywood forms the setting of the story. Martini, a penniless but confident young singer, arrives in the film capital determined to achieve fame. Unfortunately, his self-confidence is misdirection. He is made the innocent tool of a band of crooks who commit a daring jewel robbery during a wedding reception at a producer's home while Martini is singing.

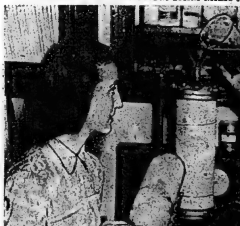
Unable to clear himself, and fearing both the crooks and the police, the singer is involved in complications and a tender romance. Although the picture is vividly dicated, but not until after a unique twist at the end of the world-famous Hollywood Bowl bowl at which afford him opportunities to harm Joan Fontaine with the magic of his voice.

Miss Fontaine is ably written to fit his talents. Martini scores splendidly. Joan Fontaine, R.K.O. Radio's new discovery, is perfect as the heroine in charming fashion, and Allan Mowbray as the temperamental orchestra conductor, Erik Rhodes as a rival tenor, Lee Patrick as Miss Fontaine's room-mate, Billy Gilbert, Alan and Frank Jenks as the comic relief, should be a treat to the comedy angles throughout the production.

John Stuart's direction and the production values afforded to the film by Producer Joseph Sistrom deserve high praise in "Music For Madame" a real entertainment treat.

Edgar Kennedy in a fun-filled comedy number, a short subject entitled "Good Housekeeping" an interesting Pete Smith commentator on cartoon presentation entitled "Jungle Jitters" and Charles Kemper (vaudeville star) in a novel special and very entertaining vaudeville skit that will please every patron, entitled "Nickel Lewdown."

NO HAY-FEVER AT 10,000 FEET SAYS FLYING DOCTOR



Seeking data to aid scientists in their fight against hay-fever, annual summer plague in most sections of United States and Canada, Dr. Oten C. Durham, of Chicago, one of the continent's leading experts on hay-fever, took to the air. Durham, in the above photo, is shown fitted with a 2,000-mile air tour, during which he chased pollens through the clouds at an altitude of 7,000 feet in an effort to determine just how high these little tormenters go. Above are three phases of Dr. Durham's operations. At LEFT, the special pollen-catching slide used to trap the pollen above the clouds. At CENTRE, the slide is shown fitted outside the window of a transport plane to pick up the pollen during transit. RIGHT, Dr. Durham is shown busy with his microscope and other pollen counting apparatus while flying. He found the air pure at 10,000 feet.... ...ar Eden for hay-fever sufferers, but hardly practical for living all year round.

MAKING CLOTH FROM SKIM MILK KEEPS THEM OCCUPIED

Earl O. Whittier, of the United States department of agriculture, pours casin, a by-product of skim milk, into the machine which he and Stephen P. Gould invented to change the by-product into synthetic wool. Miss Lucille Profe stands by, holding in one hand the finished article, looking very much like a tailor's sample of cloth, and in the other some wool fibre in a test tube. The machine produced this wool-like material from skim milk, also, and it is used principally in the manufacture of men's suits and women's coats. The American's however, claim they use a different process from that developed in Europe.

President when, in conveying the assurance he did, he prefaced his words by explicitly pointing out that the Dominion of Canada is not part of the sisterhood of the British Empire.

With the President, he believed a day would come when the water of the St. Lawrence River would be dedicated to the lasting and productive use of the peoples on either side of it.

Opens New Basis

"The new United States draft treaty," Mr. Lawrence Waterway Treaty affords a practical basis for the discussion of the whole situation," he declared. "It opens a new basis of approach to the problem of the waterway problem.

"There are phases of the combined project of power and navigation developments which will require full consideration by the United States and this examination is being given. The co-operation of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario and of the Ontario Government would be necessary 'to the utilization of the power produced both at Niagara and on the St. Lawrence.'

It was axiomatic that Canada and the United States respect the right of each to manage its own affairs and no solution of the waterway problem can be accepted which did not have each Government master in its own house.

Will Reply to Letter

Mr. King said he had seen a letter stated to have been written by Premier Duplessis, of Quebec, but he had not received it officially. He would reply to it in due course after consulting his colleagues.

Whether dealing with a Provincial Government or the United States Government the Federal Government would act in "a manner befitting the importance of the issues at stake and according with the wishes of the Canadian people as to how public business should be conducted.

At a time, when the world was torn by strife and misunderstanding one of the greatest services a public man could render was to help to keep his own country united.

And, the Prime Minister went on to say, that was construed as another reference to the Ontario Premier, there could be no greater discovery or disloyalty than to seek to divide where it was possible to unite or fail to co-operate where

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

She went to work the next day, quietly and efficiently. In the emergency the hospital accepted her without comment. She scrubbed her first bathroom cheerfully, walked incredible miles of hard floors in her flat shoes, carried heavy trays. At night her hands were sore and her feet swollen. She would go to sleep, to be called at some hour or other to clean up an operating room, and for the first time she saw the tragedies of the mills. Those were the things that Chris had seen and known, and when he had tried to help these people, she had failed him. No wonder he had let her go.

She grew to full stature during those weeks, going quite simply about her work, finding no task too menial, and making friends everywhere.

One day she met Katie in a hall. Katie had been elected a member of the Women's Board that had a tribute to Chris, and now she was going to a meeting. She smiled and held out her hand.

"Oh, it's you, Mrs. Ames! How are you liking the work?"

"Very much. Of course I have always worked here, in a sense. It's not entirely new to me."

There was no condescension in Beverly's voice, but Katie seemed on with an angry flush.

"She has, and I haven't—I suppose that's it," she thought. "That was to put me in my place. She and the Simpson woman!"

Later on Katie went with the others to the usual tea in Miss Nettie's room. She went with a faint air of bravado, but no one appeared to notice. Only Miss Nettie, her tea poured, sat back and watched her, carefully dressed, slightly rouged.

It was the next day that Miss Nettie was found on the floor of her room. She was conscious, but she could not walk, and they put her to bed in her small adjacent bedroom to die. Not at once. That would have been too easy, and life had never been easy for Miss Nettie. But in due time and with Beverly beside her bed, Toward the end she roused from her stupor and looked at Beverly.

"Look after Chris," she said very clearly. "He needs it."

She was asleep before Beverly could answer, and she never wakened again.

The flu went as suddenly as it had come, and Beverly went back to her empty life. Save for Miss Nettie's death the hospital became normal once more. Nurses and staff were drifting back, oddly inarticulate about what they had seen and done. The poker game in the internes' room was resumed, there was a house surgeon now, and upstairs in the X-ray room Scott was still talking the jargon of his trade: water-cooled tubes, aluminum filters, and general X-ray therapy.

"Pretty soon we'll do away with you surgeons," he would say boyishly. "Watch radium, watch us, and see."

But Scott himself was going to need a surgeon, and soon. He was going to lose his right arm, and knew it. He carried it in a sling now, but he refused to have the operation until Chris came back.

Chris returned in February. Katie was at the dock in a new fur coat, a Katie somewhat plumper. Once shut off in the taxicab together, they were a marked constraint between them. They were strangers meeting after a long separation. It was as if all the years of intimate, living had been wiped away, and Chris, searching desperately for words to bridge the gulf, found himself talking banalities. When at last he reached out and took her hand, she submitted, but her eyes were on the streets, the people, the shop windows. She was excited, he saw, but not with his return. When he released her she hardly knew it.

The feeling of strangeness persisted in the hotel, and it was not lessened when he found her smoking one cigarette after another.

The next few days did not bring them any closer. Chris tried, coming in from his camp when he could to take her out, admiring the clothes she bought, forcing himself to theatres and late suppers, trying to bridge the gulf between them, even trying man fashion to catch and hold her wandering attention. But it was useless. She was bored by the war, which he frankly regarded as water over the dam. But she was proud of him in his uniform, aware that other women followed him with their eyes. One night, however, she suggested that he take the cadaveric off his collar.

"Take it off? Why?"

"You needn't let everybody know you were only a doctor over there, need you?"

After that he never mentioned the war to her. Indeed, he began to be alarmed as the days went on to look out for some anchor to hold their marriage. Katie was slipping. She would lie in her hotel bed all morning reading romantic drivel, her clothes scattered all over the room, the air close, and the bathroom littered with towels, with bath salts, and face creams. He would come in from his solitary neatness of his quarters to find her there, the bed sprinkled with ashes and to remember Lily with a shiver of distaste. But when one day in sheer desperation he suggested that she have a child she was as stubbornly reluctant as ever.

"Don't be so blind, Chris. If you think I'm going through that—"

She had a new argument now. After all, we are not children, and I'd like to have a youngster running around the house."

"Why not think it over, Katie," however, and she used it triumphantly. "And raise him an cannon fodder for the next war! Nothing doing, Chris. That's that."

He gave it up then. When he was finally demobilized, he went back home, but the feeling of strangeness still persisted. He had no sensation of home-coming. Everything was the same—outside of his familiar offices—but Katie was not the girl he remembered. It was filled with new furniture; even Olga was gone, and Katie had a new maid-servant, who seemed to regard Chris as a guest rather than a master.

"By the Lord Harry, Katie, I feel as if I ought to tip them."

Hardly the fictional return of a man home from a war, he thought, with a strange woman in a uniform asking where his bags were to go, and Katie herself busy over a projected dinner.

Late that night he went into the office and closed the door. He was confused and lonely. For a long time now he had never been alone, had been swept in some wild current from this place to that. Now he was in a deep, still dizzy, still confused. Upstairs Katie was busy with lists at her small desk, her cigarette dripping ashes over her papers. The servants had gone to bed, and after a time he realized that the furnace needed attention, and, going heavily down the stairs went through the familiar motions once more.

Katie gave her party the next week. A strange butler came in. People Chris had never seen before thronged upstairs to the living room, drank cocktails, went down again to dinner.

"When I can get the offices out of the house, I'll have some room." She was Katie to most of the guests. They ate Chris's food, drank his champagne, played bridge, watched him covertly.

"How about the war, Doctor? Tell us about it."

Tell them! With their eyes glassy with liquor and the women's dresses too low. Katie's dress too low, also.

"It's over. Let's forget it."

"Let's drink to his being over." They were young and smart. Even Chris knew that. But he did not belong among them, as he had never belonged in the Lewis house a thousand years ago. He did his best, but it was not until they had gone and he was alone in the shabby back office that he felt at home again. He lighted a pipe and moved around the room. It was all familiar, all dear to him. This at least was home.

He opened the drawer of the desk and rummaged about for little Chris's picture. It was not there.

He turned out the light and went about to go upstairs when he heard voices and saw Katie and Bob Barrett coming down. Barrett had thrown an arm lightly around her shoulder, and both of them were smiling.

"Well, was it a good party?"

"You always have good parties."

Chris stood still, his empty pipe in his hand.

"Where's Chris?"

"Gone out, I suppose."

"All right. Then here's a kiss to sleep on."

It was apparently a light caress, lightly given and lightly received, but Chris from as he stood. He waited until Katie had closed the front door and, humming softly, had gone upstairs. She looked up, startled, when he followed her.

"I thought you were out."

"So I imagine. Does Barrett usually kiss you good-night?"

"He was tight," she said, flushing. "Anyhow, what if he does?"

Suddenly it seemed unimportant. Katie herself seemed unimportant, sullenly putting away cards and bottles and at last putting out the light and leaving him there. When finally he followed her, it was to find her in bed and pretending to be asleep.

CHAPTER XI.

Chris carried on, although those first few weeks of his return were disheartening enough. His private practice was scattered, and there were days when no one came to either office and he had not a call to make. If he thought of Beverly in those early days, it was to put her away again, definitely and finally: the easier since his immediate problems were one, more pressing. He found to his shock and surprise that Katie had not only spent his money, but all the reserve he had left for her in the bank; and before long he began to realize that she was also deeply in debt and was concealing it from him.

"I don't blame you much, Chris. I haven't any bills," she said, looking frightened. "I have a few, of course, but they can wait. There's no hurry.

"I have to keep my credit good. This new car of yours—is it paid for?"

"Not entirely. I still owe something on it."

She brought him a few bills then but it resulted in his going upstairs finally and conducting an etherial search. He found them everywhere, stuck away in hatboxes, some under her mattress, a few in her desk. The total appalled him, but she was never her fright then and furiously angry.

"How dare you go into my room and throw everything about?"

"Your room?"

"Well, it's been my room. It isn't my fault that you chose to go away, is it? You didn't even fight. You only—"

"That's enough," he said her, white, but still quiet. "It is your room from now on. I'll sleep in Dick's old room."

"And maybe you think that will break my heart!" she said. "Only don't neglect me to come crawling back to you, Chris Arden. I'm through with that."

He moved his things that night, his clothes, even his uniform with the cadaveric on the collar. Then and without so much as a good-night he slammed the door on that back room and left her there.

Looking back afterward, Chris was never able to say just why and how he had found himself in this position or in that. The strings which had moved him puppet fashion were always invisible. But he was not Katie that night deliberately destroying any pride of achievement he might have had, and to wonder out of his later knowledge whether it was not something rather pitiful after all an attempt to pull him down to her own level, and perhaps the inner knowledge that he had never loved her. That he would never really love her. He was dead to her by morning but his resolution remained. In a way he was relieved. But she had done one desperate thing to him. She had cost him his faith in the man during the war.

The war was over for four million men. Rather less than half of them had been to France, but all of them had been through a disorientation that made the return to normal life difficult. For months or years they had obeyed orders, rarely thinking for themselves. Mostly they had been young, and if they had fought, they had also played when the chance came. The war had been an escape from grim reality. Now once again they had to face it.

And so Jerry Ames came home, catapulted out of the blue skies where at last he had found himself, missing his wings like a disembodied angel. No more for him the rising at dawn while the mist lay thick on the ground and the mechanics were shadows moving about along the field; no more the "All right, fellows. Let's go." No more the climbing into the plane, the roar of the propeller, the sweep and lift, and at last the good earth below him and the better skies above, no more that feeling that he and his ship were one, loafing above the poor devils beneath, then lifting on and up, on and up, eyes alert, every cloud a possible ambush, but her all that. Freedom, the complete freedom of the air. Maybe a delight then, playing tag with the enemy.

"I know that dodge. Try this one."

Somewhere to go then, with a vengeance. He would laugh, there alone in his ship. What did he care? What the hell did he care? This was living, sport, adventure. "Get on his tail." "Smart fellow, that one." Letting go a burst of fire, missing, trying again. Once or twice a bit of luck, and then the slow, easy return to the field, the landing, then men at the mess, ready to eat and plenty to drink. Somebody playing a battered piano and the crowd singing.

Toward the end they were almost all replacements, but Jerry had a luck held.

Then suddenly it was over, and on the ship coming home—that spring Jerry took up a cigarette in a new cabin and was unable to put it in his mouth. He tried several times and then struck a match and succeeded. But he was frightened.

"How much have you been drinking?" asked the ship's doctor.

"Like the rest. Plenty."

"Well, I could make a better nervous system than you've got out of a spool of thread and a few buttons, my lad. You'll have to lay off. Lay off for good, I'm telling you."

He did lay off for the remainder of the voyage and even for a short time thereafter. He was dead cold sober when Beverly met him in New York, but she was worried when she saw him. He looked thin and worn, and there were new lines etched on his face. He greeted her cheerfully, however and after his usual fashion.

"Hello there. And how's the girl?"

"Jerry. I'm so glad you're all right!"

"That's all right. Bev. That's great. For heaven's sake, don't cry. I'm here, I'm fine and dandy. How about going somewhere tonight?"

"Why go out tonight, Jerry? You need rest, don't you? I'd like—I'd like to take care of you if you'll let me. You look so tired."

"Tired? Me?" He grinned. "I've had the time of my life. Who won the war? Jerry won it, my girl, with his little hatchet."

We are there ever a more distressing ailment than Rheumatic aches and pains?

Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Sciatica—what does it matter what you call them? The root cause is generally the same—Uric Acid in your joints—and the usual cause of Uric Acid is a liver that's out of order. Strike a blow at the cause and begin to enjoy real relief.

Take a glassful of water. Stir a ½ teaspoonful of Fynnon Salt into it and drink before breakfast every day. Soon Rheumatic aches and pains will begin to "let up". They'll become less frequent.

Remedy lies in the combination of Sodium, Potassium and Lithium in Fynnon Salt. These elements are similar to those from Mineral Springs which have brought fame to Spas the world over. # HUNGARY GIVEN RIGHT TO REARM 'FOR PEACE'

LITTLE ENTENTE WAIVES CLAUSES OF WAR TREATY

Hungary Granted Military Equality in Armament

NON-AGGRESSION PACTS

No Evidence Entente Favors Break With League of Nations

Bled, Yugoslavia, Aug. 23—(AP)—The Little Entente swept away the military clauses of a Great War treaty today and gave Hungary the right to rearm "in the interest of peace."

The three nations—Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—agreed to abrogate some restrictions in the Trianon Treaty and grant military equality to Hungary.

The action followed a similar move by the Balkan Entente, which includes Rumania and Yugoslavia, on July 30 wiping out military clauses of the treaty of Neuilly which limited Bulgaria's rearmament.

3 Day Conference Ends

Dr. Milan Stoyadinovitch, Premier and Foreign Minister of Yugoslavia, made the abrogate announcements at the close of a three-day conference of Little Entente Foreign Ministers.

He said the principle of an understanding had been reached with Hungary also on bilateral non-aggression pacts and minority provisions details which would be negotiated between Hungary and the three nations individually.

Conversations on Danuban navigation, he announced, will be discussed in Belgrade "in the fall."

European Relations Improved

A formal communique expressed satisfaction over improvement of the international situation in Europe, particularly between the Little Entente countries and their neighbors.

The communique contained references to the League of Nations which observers considered slightly weak in that there was no indication the states contemplated a break with the League.

Yugoslav sources said Germany, now trying to extend her influence into southeastern Europe, was annoyed at Italy's alleged efforts to gain supremacy in the Danube basin.

Petrescu Comnen, Rumania's Foreign Minister, was expected late in Rome in the near future to conclude a friendship pact agreed with a similar to the five-year treaty signed by Italy and Yugoslavia last October.

Germany And Hungary

The action of the Little Entente came while the Hungarian Regent, Admiral Horthy, and other high Hungarian officials were on a visit of state to Germany.

Hungarian relations and the German press have given every indication that Chancellor Hitler is seeking to convince Hungary it would be to her advantage to have Germany as one of her best friends.

The Trianon treaty, to be revised as a result of today's agreement, was signed by the allied and associated powers and Hungary on June 4, 1920. Although it recognized Hungary's independence from Austria, the pact long has been a sore spot because it limited Hungary's army to 35,000.

The Balkan Entente states — Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Yugoslavia—only recently cancelled similar limitations placed upon Bulgaria by the post-war treaty of Neuilly.

The Trianon treaty reduced Hungary's population from 10,500,000 to 7,500,000 by ceding territory to Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia. This created minority problems which still have to be settled.

At the end of a week or two it does not look anything but it is comfortable.

By Major A. H. Tilmsen

Science Service Meteorologist

Anti-trades! Edmund Halley, astronomer-royal of England, was the first to explain the trade winds—those steady winds that blow so steadily from about the 40th parallels, north and south, to the equator. As the tropic trades near the equator they become warmed and are forced to rise, flowing out at the top, going to the southeast and part to the northeast. These winds are the anti-trade winds, so called because they flow in a generally opposite direction from the trades which are directly underneath. They are called "counter-trades."

Million Soldiers With Civilians Mobilized to Guard Hankow Area

Shanghai, Aug. 23—(AP)—One million soldiers and 200,000 civilians were reported mobilized today to protect the Hankow area should the Japanese break the deadlock that has kept them 110 miles from the provisional Chinese capital for nearly a month.

The Chinese civilians were being trained in behind-the-lines duties. Included were 60,000 Hickory-men who would become a troop transport corps.

Chinese headquarters which reported these details said women were being given important roles as nurses and military aids. A women's corps was being trained as medical workers in the front lines. Many college graduates, members of leading Chinese families, were said to be among the corps members.

The Chinese-Japanese struggle for mastery of Poyang Lake, about 135 air miles south east of Hankow, continued with undiminished fury.

The Chinese maintained the invaders landed on the west shores of Poyang but were clinging to a mere foothold on the water's edge under withering Chinese fire.

The Japanese thrust toward Nanchang, Chinese air base about 225 miles south of Hankow, was described as "far from reality" in Chinese dispatches, which added Japanese progress on the east shore of Poyang was "small and unimportant."

TRADE PROBLEMS LOOM AS HORTHY MEETS HITLER

Hungarian Statesman And Hitler Talk Over Czech Issues

BALKAN PROBLEMS

Hungary Unable to Absorb German Exports For Hungarian Wheat

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Kiel, Germany, Aug. 23—(AP)—Czechoslovakia's fate was listed as one of the chief conversational topics between Chancellor Hitler and Admiral Nicholas Horthy today as the German and Hungarian statesmen met to inspect heavily fortified Heligoland.

Informed Nazi quarters said the two statesmen saw eye to eye on the problem, the "satisfactory" solution of which might enable Hungary to grant Hitler and Premier Milan Imil or Italy their wish for an Hungarian-Yugoslav reconciliation.

These sources said Hungary would like the autonomy of Hungarians in Czechoslovakia, if not return to Hungary, just as Hitler wants the autonomy or return of 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia.

Trianon Peace Treaty

It was said that should this come to pass for Hungary, that country might forget revisionist demandsgrowing out of the post-war Trianon peace treaty which took away a third of her 18,000,000 population and sections now belonging to Yugoslavia.

Another subject for discussion among Hitler, Horthy and other officials including Foreign Min Imredi and Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya of Hungary, was the question of how to increase the German exports to Hungary so as to enable Hungary to send more wheat and other agricultural products to Germany.

Hungarian Imports

Hungarian sources said Germany owes Hungary 24,000,000 marks ($2,600,000) and can pay only with deliveries of manufactured goods which Hungary, as a predominantly farming country, cannot absorb in sufficiently large quantities.

Germany, in her apparent desire to encourage the Balkan countries economically, is hard put to it to find enough industrial products to make her Hungary's most desirable trade partner.

Although the martial note was dominant today—as it was yesterday—Nazi sources said Horthy also was paraded before the visitors—informed Nazi circles said there was little likelihood any new German-Hungarian military agreement would result.

THREE BOYS TAKE WRONG PATH; FALL OVER THIRTY FEET

Companions Find One Unconscious So Grope Way to Get Help

ON TREACHEROUS TRAIL

Hamilton Boy Carried on Backs of Policemen to Safety

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 23—(CP)—Four police officers early today rescued a 15-year-old boy from a rocky mountain ledge, where he had been lying unconscious for more than an hour. The boy was one of three who had fallen 20 feet over a cliff when they took a wrong path during the night.

Bruce Fortune, 15, Edwin O'Connor, 17, and Fred Kelsey, 15, were climbing the treacherous mountain shortly before last midnight when they toppled over a cliff at Chedoke Falls on the western outskirts of Hamilton. The Fortune boy was knocked unconscious in the fall and suffered possible skull injuries.

The two other boys crept dazedly to the side of their chum. Realizing it would be too risky to carry him from the spot in the darkness, they groped their way down the steep bank and flagged a motorist for a drive to Hamilton.

When police reached the cliff they found that the unconscious boy had not even moved.

Carry Boy on Backs Over Trail

The officers took turns in carrying the boy on their backs along a treacherous trail to safety, finally reaching the creek bed. The boy, suffering also from severe scalp lacerations, was rushed to a waiting ambulance and taken to hospital here. O'Connor and Kelsey suffered multiple bruises and abrasions.

Unable at first to find the path they had taken in the belief it was a short cut, O'Connor, Kelsey and the police officers searched for nearly an hour before they found the ledge where Fortune was lying.

Britain Will Not Throw Up Hands Over Spain, Basic Policy Unchanged

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 23—(CP Cable)—Informal conferences have started between the Earl of Plymouth chairman, and other chief members of the non-intervention committee looking toward a new approach to the vexed and complicated question of withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain.

It was thrashed out unlikely in committee, or the sub-committee made up of principal members, would be convened at present, but Lord Plymouth has discussed inaugural General Franco's virtual rejection of the British plan for removing volunteers with representatives of France, Italy, Germany, Portugal and Soviet Russia.

Until the views of the various countries are clarified a meeting of the committee was impossible. Later today Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, will confer with Lord Plymouth and both may interview Prime Minister Chamberlain who has returned from a weekend in the country.

There was no indication Great Britain was throwing up the sponge over Spain. The basic policy continues to be to localize the conflict and minimize its effect on general European peace.

At the same time, no efforts were made to hide the seriousness of General Franco's blow to the general policy of non-intervention.

SCHULTZ DEMANDS G.O.P. C. PROFITS SAYS WEINBERG

Testifies Hines Paid $500 Weekly by Schultz Racket

MONEY FROM GAMES

New York, Aug. 23—(AP)—George Weinberg, 36, former business manager for the late gang overlord, Dutch Schultz, testified in the conspiracy trial of Tammany leader James J. Hines today that Schultz demanded 60 per cent of the profits of the mid-million dollar policy racket to take care of his mob "and Jimmy Hines."

Again bringing in the name of the veteran political leader, whom he had previously accused of accepting $500 a week as "fixer" for the Schultz gang, Weinberg said that in March 1932, Schultz told him he was going to be acquitted by Ed and Elmer Maloney "and Jimmy Hines" and back from Hot Springs, 'Arkansas."

Weinberg repeated his testimony that Hines got a $500 weekly by the Shultz mob.

"I myself paid Jimmy Hines $500 in front of Hines' home," he said.

Weinberg said that 10 days after a meeting of Hines, Dutch Schultz and Bo Weinberg," he continued, "I met Jimmy Hines. He agreed to pay Hines $1,000 down and $500 a week."

Weinberg said that thereafter he saw Hines weekly and paid him $500 a week.

Further Testimony

Weinberg's testimony:

"Along in May, 1932, I saw Dutch Schultz and Bo Weinberg about time the policy bank operators were shown they could get protection. That was after the payments had been made to Jimmy Hines."

Under direct questioning, told him to get the "O.K. from Jim", and that he saw Hines in June and July "numerous times" at his office to operate the policy racket.

"Schultz told me to open it up and try it," the witness testified, "and so I opened a bank at 251 Lenox Avenue and headquarters at 251 Lenox Avenue."

"Where did the money to pay Hines come from?" asked District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, who is conducting the prosecution of the conspiracy in connection with the

FOREIGN OFFICE DENIES ESPIONAGE WAS CONFESSED

Capt. Kendrick, Former Passport Officer in Vienna Reached England

NO GERMAN DETAILS

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 23—(CP Cable)—The foreign office today denied German claims that Captain Thomas de Kendrick confessed to espionage while held by the gestapo (secret police) for three days at the Hotel Metropole in Vienna.

The former British passport officer in Vienna landed at Croydon airport late today and made contacts with the foreign office but has not made any report yet on his detention.

When Captain Kendrick was first arrested and taken to the hotel, the gestapo headquarters for the former Austria, the British government demanded a "full and speedy explanation." But now he has been released and is outside of Germany and no explanation is not so vital.

COMMITTEE WILL PROBE NAZI AND FASCIST GROUPS

Termed Communistic Theory a Complete Illusion

PARTY IS AIDED

Washington, Aug. 23—(AP)—The United States House of Representatives Committee investigating un-American activities decided today to split into three groups and shift its inquiry from Communism to Fascism and Nazism.

Chairman Dies (Dem.-Texas) announced public hearings would be resumed after today's session. He said a sub-committee of four headed by Representative Starnes (Dem. Alabama) would go to New York for a preliminary examination of material gathered by the new phase of the inquiry. Other sub-committees will work on the west coast and in the midwest.

The sub-committee intended to "give as much time and attention to the Fascists and Nazis as we gave to the Communists." He added that hearings probably would not be resumed in Washington until December.

Seeking to Grasp Power

The full committee heard testimony yesterday from Dr. J. B. Matthews, a former leader in communistic activities. He said United States Communists were seeking to grasp power by bringing about an economic collapse and then would "slaughter reactionary property holders and idealistic believers in democracy and capitalism."

Matthews said he slowly became disillusioned after years of work for the Communists, and that the basic social theory "the most complete illusion ever born in the human brain."

He mentioned one probable phase to be studied by the committee's west coast group when he declared:

All Spend Big

"Almost everybody in Hollywood has been approached by one of these unified front (Communist) organizations except Mickey Mouse and Snow White."

Matthews said thousands of prominent persons had aided the Communist cause by permitting use of their names in propaganda purposes by various associations. Many persons did not recognize the intent of the unified front organizations, he explained.

Earlier Dies had said, Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor and Jean Harlow had sent "hearty greetings" to "Ce Cui," a French newspaper which Matthews asserted is Communistic.

"No one, I hope, is going to claim that any person who permits his particular is a Communist," he added. "The unfortunate fact, however, remains that millions of them unwittingly serve the purposes of the Communist party."

LABOR LEADERS MAY FORCE A GENERAL STRIKE

Will Fight Daladier Gov't. to Retain 40-Hour Week

FIVE MILLION MEMBERS

Paris, Aug. 23—(AP)— French labor leaders rallied their forces today to fight the Daladier government for retention of the 40-hour week and for increased wages in the possibility of a general strike.

The General Confederation of Labor which lists 5,000,000 members and most other unions ordered their executive committees ready for action. Foremost in the offensive were the Communist-led, fighting government efforts to force Marseille dockers to work longer hours than during the weekend and thereby exceed their 40-hour work period.

The Federation of Port Workers' Union said "grave decisions" would be made soon unless extra pay for overtime was granted the Marseille members and labor chiefs said this was a threat of a strike in all French ports.

The situation evolved from Premier Daladier's proposal Sunday night to decree decree powers to speed national defence and industrial output because of the uncertain international situation.

Quickly Replaced

The Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Labor resigned but quickly were replaced by Anatole De Monzie and Charles Pionnet, respectively of the Socialist Union party, an ally of the powerful Socialist party.

Daladier's not ease opposition to Daladier's plan, however, Socialist and Communist sources said. This asserted there was dissatisfaction even among the Premier's own factions to be ready for a showdown fight between the Liberal left and the Socialist-Communist bloc.

The Premier was said to be confident he could muster enough votes in the Senate if he could win his point with the support of the Radical parties certainly will stand as that of a "courageous patriot."

SPECIAL CENSUS OF JEWS STARTED

Questionnaires More Than Yard Long Are Distributed

Rome, Aug. 23—(AP)—Italy started her special census of Jewish today.

Questionnaires more than a yard long were distributed to all "racial" and "suspected Jews" with the addition that failure to fill out the forms would be considered as refusal to obey the Fascist regime's false information.

Since the Count included all Jews in Italy as of midnight last night, foreign Jewish tourists were among those given questionnaires.

In Rome police distributed to hotel porters and apartment house janitors lists of "suspected Jews" in each place.

"Suspected Jews" were compiled to date whether the suspicion they were Jews was erroneous. Scores of them were Germans with names resembling Jewish names.

Information asked included names, ages, addresses of all members of the family, parentage, nationality, religion, date of arrival in Italy and war service.

Scientists Look Forward to Time When Crop Failures Will Be Nil

Cambridge, England, Aug. 23—(CP Cable) — A prediction crop failures eventually may be almost unknown was made today by John Russell of the Rothamsted Experimental Station, speaking today at the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Sir John said meteorologists some day would be able to estimate the general rainfall during the crop growing season, from which a fair idea of size-fancy of yields could be worked out.

"We can expect to look forward to a time when crop failures will be almost unknown and when crop production will involve even less labor than it does at present," he said.

London is threatened with loss of its water supply within 35 years, Dr. Samuel Boulton, geological authority told the association.

"A general progressive lowering of the level of water in the underground reservoir of London has been taking place over a long period, but during the past few years this has become more marked," he reported.

"Unless the fall is checked, the reservoir will be exhausted in 35 years or so."

Circumstances Surrounding Deaths Hunger-Striking Convicts Probed

Philadelphia, Aug. 23—(AP)—At least four investigations were launched today into circumstances surrounding the deaths of four hunger-striking convicts at the Philadelphia county prison where a coroner's physician said, apparently were scalded to death.

Warden Michael J. Smith of Welfare, Charles Engard, sent two special investigators to the institution at Holmesburg, Pa., with orders to "get the bottom" of the hunger strike which resulted in the deaths of the placed in punishment cells where the bodies were found by guards.

They were among more than 600 prisoners who began the strike a night during which, Warden William Mills said, some 200 cells in the punishment cells fought among themselves.

Dr. Morton Crane, the coroner's physician, said the men had died of violence.

"I am of the opinion that scalding water somewhere got into their cells," he said. "All four exhibited the symptoms of nasal congestion that is typical of death by gas, steam, or hot water."

Bruises, Abrasions

"There were bruises, lacerations and abrasions—and by abrasions I mean that where the skin was ripped off, and they still showed signs of blood. That would indicate clearly to me that they were beaten before being scalded to death."

Warden Mills scoffed at the theory that hot water or steam might have caused their deaths. He added that the bodies of the prisoners had been fighting, "no officer and no employee of the institution laid a hand in violence on any of the men."

Judge Harry McDevitt of the Common Pleas Court who had sought to aid in the hunger strike, said he was told the prisoners broke steam pipes in their cells to use them for weapons, thus permitting steam to grive into the cells.

Detective Sergeant James Durran of the city police expressed belief the men died of "overexertion, exhaustion and undernourishment after hours of fighting among themselves.

PEPSI-COLA ASKS WRIT TO RESTRAIN COCA-COLA CO.

Demands Rival be Enjoined From Trade Interference

(New York Journal American)

Suit was filed in Queens County Supreme Court by the Pepsi-Cola Company against the Coca-Cola Company, asking for a restraining order to enjoin the Coca-Cola Company from interfering with the Pepsi-Cola Company, its subsidiaries and licensees throughout the United States.

Simultaneously with the filing of this bill of complaint against the Coca-Cola Company, the Pepsi-Cola Company stated a petition had been filed in the U. S. Patent Office in Washington by the Pepsi-Cola Company attacking the validity of the Coca-Cola trade-mark.

The petition further states that the names "Coca" and "Cola" are both descriptive terms, are public property and, therefore, cannot be used exclusively by the Coca-Cola Company.

ACTIVE 15 YEARS.

The bill of complaint alleges that the Pepsi-Cola trade-mark has been in existence and in continuous use for more than 35 years, and that during all that period Pepsi-Cola has been sold side by side in competition with Coca-Cola; and that its trade name has never been challenged in the United States by any person during that period.

The bill of complaint further alleges that the Pepsi-Cola company and its subsidiaries, affiliates and licensees have an investment in excess of $28,000,000, and that in the calendar year has spent in newspaper advertising alone in excess of one million dollars ($1,000,000).

The Pepsi-Cola company complains that the Coca-Cola company has instituted numerous suits and that of its subsidiaries, affiliates, and licensees.

"RIGHTS" ATTACKED.

The Pepsi-Cola Company asks an injunction restraining the Coca-Cola Company "from causing any opposition to be filed to the registration of plaintiff's trade-mark in any State of the United States or in any foreign country" and from any action that might prevent registration of a mark for manufacturing, buying, selling, distributing or otherwise dealing in the trade name of Pepsi-Cola.

Papers in the suit were served today by the law firm of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, on Deputy Secretary of State William O'Brien at Albany, as the legal representative of the Coca-Cola Corporation in New York State.

County Landmark Destroyed by Fire

Flames wrote a dramatic exit to one of Hastings County's land marks on Sunday afternoon when sparks from a blazing driveshed ignited the old Gooderham homestead near Stella. Goodfellow homestead near Roslin, leaving it a mass of smouldering ruins.

The house, the property of Alexander Goodfellow was unoccupied at the time. The driveshed that housed a few implements including a binder, the property of Goodfellow and a mower belonging to Mrs. Ida Golden, a tenant around the old stone structure that was built in pioneer days were completely destroyed.

Believed to have been caused by the carelessness of passing travelers the shed was rapidly enveloped by flames. A driving wind drove the burning embers and sparks in the direction of the house that quickly fell a prey to the flames.

Damage was estimated at one thousand dollars. Insurance covered the loss, it is stated.

Police Blotter

All was quiet on the police front last night, with no arrests being made. A call was received in the city the evening to quell a disturbance at the Corbeau Flats where it was reported a fight was in progress between players of two softball teams in which a number of spectators were said to be involved. The game had been resumed, and peace had descended on the playing field by the time officers arrived.

Four incidents formed the comparative coolness of the highways to seek lodging in the cell-block.

Guides Up North Do Fine Business With Tourists

Guides of the Bay of Quinte, fishing licence issuers, sporting goods dealers and others largely dependent annually on the summer tourist trade through this section have lost money this season through the opening of No. 7 Highway through the north, it is believed by some who complain of the lack of trade this year.

"Though we had a pretty fair early season start, the tourist business as far as fishing in the bay goes, this year has been bad", declares Eugene Bush, one of the city's licensed guides, whose last tourist party was taken down the bay about two weeks ago.

"There are lots of fish in the bay, but they seem to be passing up this part of the north. Fishing for bass was never better, but most of them are being caught by local anglers", the veteran guide.

"They're going through No. 7 Highway and giving Belleville the go-by" it was stated by Geo. Finch, local issuer of fishing licences who added that business was considerably below that of last season.

"Most of them who do apply want a licence for only a day or two and balk at paying the bigger fee. Whether that is the real reason for the lack of business, it is hard to say."

In former years, it was explained licences were generally purchased in Belleville before tourists headed northward. Fishing licences and other necessities are purchased in locations right on the fishing grounds.

FAIR NOTES

Belleville Fair, 1938 model, will be Greater and Grander than ever, and one long to be remembered, according to Chas. J. Symons, the genial and capable publicity director, and supervisor of Special Attractions. Every part of it is analyzed up with abundant enthusiasm and optimism and every department is humming as never before since the High Pressure Days preceding what happened in 1929. The Fair itself as an exposition of the agricultural and industrial progress of this district will set a new peak of perfection, and the Special Attractions will be on a scale much larger than ever attempted before.

Garden Bros. Circus has been engaged as a special extra attraction which will meet in 1938, the Fair itself as an exposition of the agricultural and industrial progress of this district will set a new peak of perfection, and the Special Attractions will be on a scale much larger than ever attempted before.

Garden Bros. Circus has been engaged as a special extra attraction which will meet with the approval of all Belleville Fair patrons. The superentertainment production played in Toronto at the Coliseum this Spring and won instant approval and admiration from Only Circus-minded folk who were disappointed at the non-appearance of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus this summer will find the Circus billed for Belleville Fair Week Bros. entirely to their liking, with many thrilling, death defying, well trained animal acts, etc.—in fact the cream of circus entertainment.

x x x

Following out their policy of presenting something new each year of compelling interest the directors have arranged for a thrilling race between thoroughbred horses from the big race tracks. This will be one of the most thrilling features of a program full of thrills and pleasing entertainment.

x x x

Tuesday, August 30, will be Children's Day and a great attraction the Garden Bros. Circus will be presented in the afternoon. The Bandstand, Clowns, Lions, Tigers, Elephant and "everything. Children's tickets will be fifteen cents for everything including the circus—Pink Lemonade extra.

x x x

Meet me at the Fountain will be the password of the year as in years past.

x x x

Meet me at the Midway, said he, but the crush was so great that she lost connection and couldn't find him. She hadn't met another Boy Friend the day would have been spoiled, and the poor lady before, or if you must meet her on the ground tell her to meet me at the Fountain, where many a romance has started and ended happily ever after.

x x x

Some of the speediest trotters and pacers in Canada are converging on Belleville this week for the Trotting and Pacing Classics. Drivers of thoroughbred speeders will have plenty of gilt-edged competition when the Order were called to bring out the horses.

Bovine aristocracy, the blue-blood scions of the reigning strains of Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey and other milk-producing lines, the finest specimens of Belleville Fair horn and Hereford, will parade in a royal display of catttedom. Each of the breeds that have been seen in this district, when outstanding specimens of their breeds were after their prize herds in competition at the Belleville Fair that opens here on August 30, and continues for four days.

x x x

From the far-flung corners of Hastings county, from the prize cattle sections of Prince Edward and Ontario, breeders of many famous strains will assemble their herds at the Fair Grounds bringing with them those sons and daughters of sires and dams that have made and are making a name for themselves in the show rings of the province.

x x x

For a number of years, the breeding and showing of pure-bred cattle have been making tremendous strides in this district. From the lowly start of one cow, farmers and breeders throughout Hastings and Prince Edward have been steadily building until many farms boast full herds of these cattle. Gradually the black and white of the Holstein, the red and white of the Ayrshire, and the dun of the Jersey have been replacing the grade herds that were common here a few years back.

x x x

Introduction of blooded imported sires and dams, for breeding and inter-breeding of famous bloodstrains, is gradually bringing the herds of the district to a point where they compare favorably with any in the country. American buyers yearly invade this district, looking for cattle, and they consider the culmination of years of study in breeding and raising.

This year then will see one of the finest parades of cattle ever before exhibited to a public that is slowly but surely showing an increased interest in blooded stock. Farmers are justly proud of their herds and many splendid specimens of both sexes, that wear the red ribbon of major prize, even at similar exhibitions, will be on display when the Belleville Fair officially opens on August 30.

EMBALMING ART SUPERIOR TO ANCIENT EGYPT

Rotarians Told of Advance in Science of Embalming Since Days of Pharohs

A vocational talk by Rotarian Orland Pinkston featured the weekly meeting of Belleville Rotary Club at Hotel Quinte Monday. Rotarian Pinkston, as a funeral director, touched on various misconceptions of his vocation entertained by a section of the public through lack of knowledge of the details of the business. One common misconception, said the speaker, was that cost of funerals was excessive. This was met by a presentation of the various items entering into overhead and the many services rendered in connection with a death in the family, leading up to the final ceremony in the funeral itself — together with the maintaining of staff and premises satisfactory to government and city officials and to meet the approval of patrons. The qualifications of a funeral director were given into detail by the speaker, showing the education required and the legal and examinations necessary to pass before a license is granted. Modern embalming was a far advance of that of the ancients as it is possible to be, although some people think the ancient Egyptians knew all there was to know on the subject when they taken the art into the grave with them. A very interesting description was given embalming given by the speaker and the exacting standards now spreading over several years installed by the Government and that a license would be issued. This was followed by a final conventions of the Funeral Directors Association where members kept pace with all latest developments in the profession.

"So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old; and they embalmed him and he was put in a coffin in Egypt," Genesis; 50-26.

That was the earliest recorded embalming, said the speaker, but this science has made great strides since then, and the ancient Egyptian process would not be tolerated for an instant nowadays.

Embalming embraces two purposes, sanitation and preservation, and the scientific handling of the dead is an important factor in keeping the health rate down. Rotarian Pinkston's description of his vocation was a dignified and interesting exposition of the science of embalming and received from the funeral director, and unseen, which take a lot of trouble off the shoulders of those to whom grief has laid a heavy burden.

Rotary appreciation was voiced by Jack Hartwick and President Mack Hale.

Visitors present included: Rotarian Wallace Buchner, Toronto; Buckley, W. A. Buckley, Jr., South-brige, Mass.; Rotarian Horace Beris, Boston; Rotarian Mac Gordee, Peterborough.

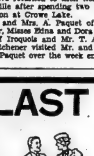
Pop was smoking to himself with a enjoyable expression and Ma said, I stopped in the Bon Ton Auction Rooms today, Willyum, not to actually buy anything.

What did you buy? pop said, and ma said, A set of dishes, lass cups and saucers, the most exquisitely perfect little things ever saw, Willyum, I cant wait till I show them to you, Willyum.

I cant wait till I see them, pop said. What use have we got for a dinner lass set around here? We don't drink coffee after dinner, and anybody offers me a steaming tass at breakfast had , better be wearing a bullet proof vest. They mite make a little ash receivers, though, he said.

Oh deer, perish the suggestion, my beautiful pink pabbleted, gilded, Wedgiwaare dimmy tass set, ma said. Why, they are as fragile as butterflies and no living sole except myself is ever to be entrusted to wash them, they're to be used for when we have guests exclusive-like and that's the answer to all questions, she said, and pop said, But when we have guests you'll have to trust Nora to clear them away and wash them.

Oh my goodness I never thought of that, ma said. That's perfectly true, that would be the very worst most impractical line to serve anything as perishable as Wedgiwaare. If our guests want after dinner coffee they'll have to be content with our ordinary cups or else go without, that settles that, she said, and pop said, Yes gods, it's a womans world and they properly deserve it.



And, he got in back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

'GOOD NEIGHBOR' POLICY

President Roosevelt said last Thursday at Ivy Lea at the opening of the Thousand Island Bridge, that the people of the United States would not stand idly by and see domination of Canada threatened by another empire. Canadians realize they also have a duty, they must plan their defence and not be dependent for defence without doing the utmost that is required for their own security. That is only 'good neighbor' policy.

Prime Minister King in a speech on Saturday added the assurance to the people of the United States that Canada would not allow any power to attack or attempt invasion of the United States through a Canadian base, either on land, or sea or in the air. To give such assurance of course implied that Canada must be strong to withstand any threatening invasion of Canada or of the U. S. from Canada.

And Mr. King made it clear that his statement and that of the President a few days ago did not mean a military alliance. This is not in the tradition of either country, but the statements are evidence of the good neighbor policy of the two nations.

Mr. King explained the attitude on defence:—"During the last two years we have been making special efforts to put our own means of defense in order. The country has approved the many measures taken to this end, and I am confident that within the limits of our capacities and responsibilities the country intends that we shall keep on going forward on that course. In that way, I am equally confident, we shall best play the part of a good neighbor.

"This policy, I might add, accords wholly with that agreed to by Canada at the Imperial Conference held in London last year, and which set for that each Dominion was responsible for its own defense. Our defense, as well as the defense of all other parts of the British empire, we believe, is better to be assured by consultation and co-operation with the other members of the British Commonwealth.

"The common concern which each would be expected to have for the whole was recognized by the President when, in conveying the assurance he did, he prefaced his words by explicity pointing out that the Dominion of Canada is part of the sisterhood of the British Empire."

To allow an enemy to attack the United States from Canada or threaten Canada is unthinkable to such good neighbors as the United States and Canada, whose spirit is much the same.

The statements of President and Prime Minister stand as signposts to the world. These statements are one in heart.

And they tell the world, especially that part of it which has boasted its opposition to democratic principles that democracy is worth defending and will defend itself. The growing assurance of the democracies is a healthy sign.

VALUE OF A FAIR

What does a fair mean to the community? An answer to this question was given yesterday at the opening of the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa. The Ontario Minister of Agriculture, Hon. W. M. Dunbar, an stated that exhibitions and fall fairs are particularly valuable to the farmer in pointing the way to lower production costs.

The Minister said that "farming is becoming highly competitive. The farmer because of economic conditions is obliged to produce at the lowest possible cost. He must produce the best article or animal he can with the least outlay."

He further points out that no farmer can attend an exhibition without returning to his home with renewed inspiration and with a determination to emulate the achievements of the winning exhibitors."

Mr. Dewan spoke of junior farmers' work as of paramount importance to rural Ontario, for he said that farm problems will not diminish with the years. No work is more important than to develop and retain an enlightened rural citizenship.

The Provincial Minister offered a word of caution to Ontario fairs generally. "May I beseech you at all times to keep your midway a model of cleanliness and innocent amusement. As I said at Peterborough the other day, let us now [illegible] fairs must do this to if they are to retain provincial support."

In addition to these factors about the fairs and exhibitors, everyone knows the place which industry is given in the institution of the fair. There is also the factor of the social contact of city-dweller, and agriculturist. There is the inspiration of crowds.

In a fair such as Belleville's the mercantile exhibits play no small part, the offerings of city business and industry.

The reference of the minister to the competitive age in agriculture as in everything else is something on which producers in farm and city must and do ponder. This has become more and more intensified in recent years.

The inspiration to rival the winners' achievement in producing the finest livestock or the choicest grains and fruits and vegetables, and to make the finest showings in the products of industry is natural consequence of a district fair.

YOUTH AND AGE

We are building a house wherein to dwell
When the evening star we'll see;
And the way we live today shall tell
What kind of a house 'twill be.

Its walls may be hung with pictures fair,
Beauty may fill each room,
Stores it may have to free-us of care—
By the door roses may bloom.

Or, alas! it may be a windowless shed,
Cold and forbidden and grey;
Regret there its thorny couch may spread,
And happiness steal away.

This house is myself, this house is you!
In it must of our habits partake—
Of smiles and frowns; we know we do,
A palace or prison we make!

OPENING OF THOUSAND ISLAND BRIDGE MARKS NEW ERA IN THE LIFE OF THIS CANADIAN SUMMER PARADISE, in the opinion of many who know and have learned to love the locality, so rich in historical interest and in the most beautiful of natural scenery. Years ago the Thousand Islands, in the vicinity of Alexandria Bay, particularly, was a humming hive of human activity where folks from many lands enjoyed the summer months amid the cool, breezes and health-giving odors of pine and balsam. Building of new Thousand Island bridge may hasten revival of popularity of this summer paradise now showing signs of new life.

'ABERHART'S ABERRATIONS HAVE REVERBERATIONS FAR AND WIDE EVEN UNTO NEW YORK CITY, where the Times comments as follows:

"Premier Aberhart of Alberta is the best know of its wise men, but he doesn't bear the palm alone. From time to time Mr. Solon Low, provincial Treasurer, enriches the world with thoughts of which it is as yet unworthy. He has just been telling his reverent consitituents how to end unemployment. His remedy has the inevitable simplicity of genius. The central government must stop being a miser and "distribute money free to all Canadians so that all industries would be busy." What is to back this somewhat generous distribution? All the gold produced in Canada. All the government has to do is to buy this gold, paying for it easily with bank notes that will cost "only the printing." In vain do mossbacks sneer at Solon and insist that this printed money, after sufficient activity of the printing press, would become hopelessly depreciated. A Province that has two Sages, Aberhart and Solon Low, can always draw on its treasuy of wisdom."

And still we do not believe that any cat, alive or dead, is worth fourteen thousand dollars, especially in St. Louis where thousands are on relief.

When Churches Had No Organs

The decision of the Free Methodist Conference committee, meeting at Brantford, in regard to silent music in the Gospel Tabernacle Church rening, old-timers of the seventies and eighties will recall incidents in many Western Ontario churches over the subject of musical instruments. The late Andrew's Presbyterian Church, London, it resulted in the resignation of the pastor, Rev. John Scott, in 1875.

The minutes of the session of St. Andrew's Church, bearing the date, September 13, 1869, contains an item: "A communication having been received from the Sabbath School teachers praying for the use of a melodeon in conducting the service of praise in the Sunday School and asking the concurrence of the session in the said proposition, the session having considered the matter find that having regard to the harmony and spiritual edification of the congregation they are unable to grant their concurrence to the prayer."

On the eve of the opening of the church, October 17, 1869, a letter was read before the congregation containing a resolution of the choir in which it stated that the members still adhered to the resignation which they had recently tendered in the session and positively objected to the use of a musical instrument as a part of worship to be held on the Monday following the opening of the new church. Advocates of the organ continued to urge the session to purchase an instrument but not until 1888 were they successful.

Out in the rural districts a similar discussion was taking place. The old session book of the Bethel Presbyterian Church, Proof Line seconded by John Sinclair, that the session of the Proof Line congregation having taken the compelling action the remit of the synod regarding not use of instrumental music in the services of God resolve and declare that the introduction of instrumental music in the service of the Canada Presbyterian Church would be hurtful to the peace and unity of the church and that therefore the prayer of the overture from the congregation of Knox Church, Montreal, be not granted.—Canada.

The movement, however, did not cease and on February 21, 1877, a meeting was held in the Bethel Church, London Township, to discuss the introduction of an organ into the church. The motion carried 36-11. Not desiring to cause any split in the congregation Rev. Henry Arnott moved that an expression of the meeting be taken as to whether they would rather (although favorable to instrumental music) have it introduced if it should disturb the harmony of the church. Seconded by Mr. Cameron. The result—yeas 35—nays 0. It was then moved by John Robb, seconded by Mr. Boulton that a committee be appointed consisting of Mr. Grant, Alexander Currier and Mr. Arnott to give a suitable presentation to Mr. McFarlane for his services as leader.

The first organ was placed in the historic St. Peter's Church, Tyrconnel, Elgin County, in the year 1885. This congregation had early displayed an interest in musical instruments. One of the earliest used in the church was the flute, played by Stephen Backus and later by his brother, Andrew, historical records state. The Hol-

Mrs. Holland was the organist. The Patterson family later purchased a melodeon and this was also taken to the church.

Records compiled by Anna F. Docker and J. E. Pearse refer to a singing school conducted by Archibald Duncan clerk in a Tyrconnel store, the class meeting in John Pearse's home. This gentleman also played the organ or flute in St. Peter's Church for several years around the middle of the last century, John Seabury Pearce played the violin and cello and later the two, while Thomas Pearce and T. L. Pearce played the flute. Truly St. Peter's Anglican Church in the Talbot settlement was a church of musical instruments.—London Free Press.

AND IT RAINED

The clown was right, we said. The rain, it rained every day. Noah was making his usual remark to his wife as they sat down to dine. When it wasn't raining we steamed, melted, dissolved in heat. Mugginess engaged blotesably. Then came the blessed change. Toward sundown fiery dragons with wide-open jaws frightened the rain-devils away. The wind came up good and fresh. The long-shoeless sleepers snugly blanketed, felt next morning as if they had slept soundly for forty straight hours. They awoke to a world, new, bright day, to a new world.

Breakfast had a happier taste. Tempers long unangsle put on wings. The demons had been driven out. The comfortable old planet was itself again. The unconquerable, if sometimes intermittent, Dr. Sunglass regained possession of our mental premises. For the days that were dark and dreary, O, the days that were rank and smeary, O, were gone and we all felt cheery, O, rejoicing in nature, some surviving spoil-sport may reply. Well, it has lasted for three days. And why look a gift horse in the mouth? If old nuncle weather is a generous recidivist, all the more reason to be good to him in one of his moments of all interim reform when he is good to you.—New York Times.

INSULT TO GALLUSES

The United States may need a good deal of things, but not a more impersative need is an organization like the League of Men Who Hate to fix his coat and sit on the beach wearing what they call in polite society suspenders, in less formal language galluses, and which the Englishman calls braces. Mr. Edsel Ford, mayor of Long Beach, N. I., which is a bit of a snobbish area anyway, if a man reveals his gallus-es a policeman can order him to put on his coat again or else move away. The absurdity of the regulation is the more manifest because the man who wears the clothing and wear nothing but trunks and he is hotel unwelcome respectable. To march to the White House would seem to be in order to defend the accident rights of the citizens. What Long Beach does today the rest of the country may do tomorrow.

We have never been able to understand why men who think of taking off one's coat when wearing galluses. If a man sits down at the table minus coat and reveals the fact that he is wearing that highly necessary and comfortable device his womanfolk will bawl him out for his ill-mannered act. The modern suspenders or galluses are designed for beauty as well as comfort. The galluses are pretty, the cut is neat and the article of wear which they do not like is hurtful to nothing. A belt is that it has to be pulled taut so that it is not only uncomfortable to wear when sitting but it accentuates even the most incipient of bay windows and makes them look twice the size they really are. The comfort to be had by the suspenders are much more dignified than the belt. There appears to be no valid reason why men should object to men wearing them.

P.S.: Just as we were closing this item we happened to look out on the street and saw a man and a woman go by wearing summer pants and galluses. So what!—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

NOT GUILTY

Goldenrod is coming into bloom over wide stretches of the country and inevitably is being unjustly accused of causing late hay fever. The fact is disappearing alike to botanists and physicians. Botanists know that goldenrod pollen is too heavy and sticky to be borne by the wind to the noses of hay fever sufferers. Doctors agree with them and wish that people would place the blame where it belongs—on the terrible masses of ragweed which also come into bloom at about this time. Goldenrod is ignored because their flowers, though handsome, do not have the bright, attention-catching petals of the goldenrod.—Victoria Times.

SQUARE TOES NOT STOCKED

He was a stout man, with large feet, and although several pairs of boots were shown to him he could not find one to suit. "I must have square toes," he explained to the assistant.

The young man sighed wearily. "But square toes are not stocked now, sir," he explained. "Pointed toes are absolutely fashionable this season."

The stout man gave him an angry stare. "That may be so," he retorted, "but I happen to be wearing last season's feet."

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Rest and Sleep More Important Than Food for the very Active Child.

The youngster may be returning to school after holidays spent outdoors and despite the improved appetite and eating more food, there has been little or no gain in weight. This is naturally discouraging to parents of underweight children. If the youngster has spent his vacation in a boys' camp with the swimming, hiking, rowing and paddling, there may be an actual decrease in weight but an increased firmness of muscles.

However younger children just reaching school age should be gradually increasing in weight; if not, parents should try to find the reason. It will be found in some cases that there are infected tonsils and tonsilla and these conditions should be corrected before the child begins school after the holidays. In an attempt to increase the weight of the youngster parents often try to force him to eat more food which may be helpful in some cases but is more often harmful.

In speaking of he underweight child Dr. Henry Gordon, in Southwestern Medicine, says that the average underweight child should not be put to bed and given forced feedings nor should he be treated with gland extracts.

"I refer now to the child who is mentally and physically more active than the average, who with no infection or physical defects, who is above average intelligence and fails to gain at the proper rate, and sets poorly. The parents, friends, and sometimes the physician decide that the child needs a tonic. In such a case we must know if the activities the child must carry on each day. How much time is spent at school, how much at play, what activities does it have at home and what is its total amount of sleep?"

Fatigue, tiredness, occupies an important place in the complaints of childhood. From 10 to 11 hours of sleep are necessary for the school child, and for children up to six years a noon-day nap of 1 1-2 hours is necessary.

The thought then with the youngster who thinks and eats faster than the average is that his underweight may be due to over-activity—nervous, true treatment is not more food but more rest and sleep, as suggested by Dr. Dietrich.

BEADED BUCKSKIN

Nowhere in the world can a finer display of beaded Indian work be seen than during Stampede Week in Calgary, says the Calgary Daily Herald. During the past few days, visitors who are attracted by any daily street parades or have examined the costumes of the Plains and Woodhill tribesmen, who live in their own tepee village at the Exhibition Grounds, have marvelled at the workmanship and richness of color of these beaded buckskin garments. Instead of seeing specimens of this Indian craft on the walls of a museum, they are worn by the families of the actual makers of the articles on exhibition.

Behind all this display are months of steady embroidery, weeks of careful selection of skins in the preparing and tanning of the deer, elk or moose hide, and in the fabrication.

The hide is smoke tanned if it is to be given the russet tone with its typical scent of wood-smoke. Even more preparation is required if the soft white deerskin is to be produced.

Thousands of tiny colored beads must be sewn on each article of a full-beaded costume. It is sewn with a fine thread of sinew, threaded from the curled back muscles of a deer and rolled between the palm and the knee to make it workable How much even the beads on a single pair of moccasins are selected by pricing the small strings of beads in the class of embroidery. It is safe to say that to equip herself with a complete outfit of ceremonial regalia, a squaw will have to devote more than a year to the task. Lastly, in beading qualities of buckskin allow for a variation in the beaded dress from one generation to another and fashion changes cause no worries to the Indian beadwork artist.

Beads as adornment on buckskin only date, however, from the coming of the first explorers to the plains. A convenient medium o' barter, they to a large extent supplanted the use of grasses and porcupine quills as decoration. The latter, flattened and colored with natural dyes, are still used by some of the tribes, being particularly popular for garments which get hard wear Fine silk embroidery on buckskin also developed, being particularly suitable for the floral design of Cree decoration compared with the geometric patterns used in Blackfoot and Sioux patterns.

Lastly, owing to the encouragement while the Department of Indian Affairs has given in employment to some of the best needlewomen of the tribes to instruct the girls at the Indian schools in the native crafts, the type of handicraft, more and more in demand as tourist souvenirs, has not declined in any way out or deteriorating in workmanship.

LOCAL SAILORS ENJOY CRUISE

W. Finkle, Ted Hinchey and Stanley Holton Journey to Rochester

In a home-made auxiliary sloop, the well-known Electra, which has proved its seaworthiness in local waters, youthful skipper Wm. Finkle with a crew of Ted Hinchey and Stanley Holton returned to the city this week after an enjoyable cruise of Lake Ontario to Rochester, leaving last Sunday from Presqu'ile, the boys managed the trip across the lake without incident, though the crossing was reported distinctly rough. At times the auxiliary engine was called into service to combat the heavy head winds and sea.

"The Electra performed like a liner, and we had one of the best vacations possible," reported the boys today.

The sturdy, cabin boat, equipped with latest and safest aids to navigation was welcomed with its crew to the port of Charlotte by Dr. Prune, wealthy physician who with his two sons, turned the facilities of his large summer camp over to the boys for a brief stay. The boat and family had just returned home after an enjoyable visit aboard an ice cruiser on the Great Lakes, and the Bay of Quinte district during which time they called in Belleville and were entertained by the South End Yachting and Athletic Club. Later the local youths were guests of the Rochester Yacht Club.

It is expected that a second cruise of the Thousand Islands section will be made by the same boat and same crew later in the season.

Oct. 15 Date Too Early for Party Convention

Toronto, August 23—At the meeting of the Executive of the Ontario Progressive Conservatives yesterday, it was decided that the suggested date of October 15th for the Ontario-wide convention would be too early. A statement given out at the close said:

"As it is important that the convention should not conflict with anticipated Provincial and Dominion by-elections, which have not yet been called, the executive unanimously decided to defer the decision as to the date of the Provincial convention until September 12th, when a full meeting, both of the executive and the general council, will be held."

KIWANIS JUNIORS READY FOR TILT

Meet Oshawa in First Round of Junior Play-downs

Going through a strenuous practice at the Exhibition Grounds last night, Belleville Kiwanis Juniors are ready and raring to go, Coach Stub Barrett stated today.

The local youngsters who copped the Bay of Quinte League when they outsteel Napanee on the ice, meet the starry Oshawa Junior nine here tomorrow afternoon in the first of a three game series of the first round of the playdowns.

The Oshawa kids who won the Lakeshore group, when they defeated Cobourg last week are stated to be a hard-hitting, fast-fielding crew who will give the McVeigh-Barrett clan plenty to worry about before the end of the ninth inning.

The locals however are confident they will take the highly touted Oshawans into camp and a right merry baseball battle should ensue when the beardless squads take the diamond here tomorrow afternoon.

MARK BIRTHDAY OF MRS. A. WICKETT

One of those pleasant events which leaves behind happy memories, was celebrated last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Walter Wicket and family. The occasion was the celebration of Mrs. Alfred Wicket's birthday. Probably the largest thrill that all who attended enjoyed was in the fact that Helen never even dreamed that her parents-in-law were preparing a surprise for her on the suspicious occasion of her birthday and her first realization of the evening's happiness in store for her was when the guests began to arrive. The party guests were numerous and in keeping with the occasion. All present expressed themselves as having spent a very pleasant evening.

FASHIONS IN BEARDS

—Perhaps the most curious thing about fashions in beards is the effect which war has on them. The long, flowing beard of yore no beard was brought to an end in this country by the Crimean War. A person seen wearing a beard in London in the middle eighteenfifties was assumed to be a Circassian soldier, for the rigors of the Russian campaign and the cold of the trenches made shaving unpopular. The present generation does not realize the widespread fashion for beards in the eighteen-seventies; weeks during dry spells. Between watering periods the open end of the tile can be covered with an inverted flower pot or a heavy piece of sod. When fall rains start the tiles can be filled with soil.

All spring and early summer flowering vines, which are perennial, should be pruned after the blossoms have dropped. This is done to remove dead or straggling three and to encourage the quantity of blooms next year. Most vines do not bloom on the old wood, so the pruning out of old wood stimulates the growth of new which will produce blooms.

As shown in the Garden-Graph root pruning also aids vines which are not prolific bloomers. To root prune a vine, cut down through the earth with a sharp spade about 18 inches or two feet from the main stem or main trunk of the vine. These roots in turn produce nourishment which results in extra blooms.

Evergreen vines need little or no

Therefore proper watering of trees becomes exceedingly important during times of great heat or drought. When watering a tree, the water, if it is to serve its purpose, must reach well below the surface so the roots underground can drink it in.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, one effective metho.' of watering a tree during a drought period is to sink a four-inch tile (sixteen inches long) into the ground at a point half way between the trunk of the tree and the outer spread of its branches. Do this on two or more sides of the tree. The end of a hose should be placed in the opening of the tile and the water allowed to run into the tile continuously for several hours at a time.

"Underground soaking" should be repeated every two

If the Crimean War, fought on a comparatively small scale, set beards growing again, it might have been supposed that they would have become almost universal during and after the Great War; actually the movement seems to have been in the opposite direction, and we are left

BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THIS SHOULD be an eventful day, in which other devastating conditions are bound up in the cella of a breaking-up of long-stagnant circumstances. While this upheaval may be rather surprising and revolutionary, it should culminate in benefits of a sound and substantial nature. Despite all, the fortunes should be stabilized, and there should be an increase of possessions.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of sudden upheaval, with much drastic action and far-reaching effect in relation to the undermining of congestions or long-frustrating circumstances.

A child born on this day may have a practical and responsible character, with sound judgment and integrity, although it may be somewhat inclined to be impulsive. It may be determined, critical, positive, tenacious and hard to convince. It should be quick and clever, and may be inventive and original. It may be somewhat inclined to be impatient, and should be careful not to be too much inclined to be dictatorial.

Gifts to Take the Hostess' Children

You will be popular with the hostess' children if you arrive on your visit with a gift for each one, or with a gift that is chosen to amuse them all. (You remember how it was when you were a child.) But you will be unpopular with the hostess if you bring the children candy. If you have children, you'll know why—if you haven't, you can easily figure out the reason.

The children will love a new book an engaging toy, a game. A little girl (or a big one, too) will be enchanted to have a small white linen handkerchief with her first name embroidered in it. Either a boy or a girl will welcome a pen or pencil with his or her full name stamped on it, or a scrap-book, or a box of letter-paper or cards appropriate to the age of the child. In the present store you will find a wealth of original and entertaining gifts for children.

In the past few years a trend has happened in the vast world of parties that is worth noting. If a guest to choose a game that will entertain both the children and the grown-ups. The game-thinkers-uppers are full of time tricks now before offer intriguing entertainment for many parties. Sometimes a house party for the family should stand more or less in a group.

If it is to be an afternoon party, the tea-table may be set in the dining-room, and a tea-menu served. At one end of the table would be the tea-service, and to preside over this your mother might invite a responsible relative or close friend. Another friend might preside over the coffee service, at the opposite end of the table.

If it is an evening party, the buffet would be set in the dining-room, all ready for buffet service.

Usually two types of the parties are the bride's cake (similar to the white-frosted cake that is usually served at a first wedding reception) and the toasting of the "bride and bridegroom".

Silver Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My parents would like to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary next month. My mother has expressed the wish to have a reception.

1—Would it be proper for mother to send the invitations, or should I send them?

2—Should the invitations be written or printed?

3—How should the guests be received?

Please tell me as much as you can about this kind of a party as we have never had this sort of an affair, and we are anxious to have it just right.

Daughter

1.—It is the usual custom for the host and hostess to send the invitations to this important wedding anniversary.

2.—If the party is to be a formal one (as it indicated by your word reception) the invitation is engraved in this form.

Mr. and Mrs. David Wells Allen request the pleas of your company at the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage

Thursday, the first of September

at four o'clock

Forty Home Avenue

R.s.v.p.

Or for an afternoon reception:

1913-1938

Mr. and Mrs. David Wells Allen

At Home

Thursday, the first of September

from four until seven o'clock

If the celebration is to be of an informal nature, your mother should write notes of invitation.

Your mother, as the hostess, your father, the host, would be near the entrance of the living-room, to receive the guests. You the daughter, and any other daughters might also receive them. The sons (and son-in-law) would be rather close at hand, to assist in receiving the guests and in making introductory introductions. It's so definitely a family party that the family should stand more or less in a group.

If it is to be an afternoon party, the tea-table may be set in the dining-room, and a tea-menu served. At one end of the table would be the tea-service, and to preside over this your mother might invite a responsible relative or close friend. Another friend might preside over the coffee service, at the opposite end of the table.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Is Poor Cooking Driving Your Husband to Lunch Counters?

? always have the deepest sympathy for, but can never understand, the psychology of a woman who neglects her home to cook. Perhaps I'm wronging a great number of my sex, but to me cooking seems almost intuitive.

Some people are so tender when I get a letter from one of these women (or oftener from her husband) telling me that her husband is leaving her because her poor cooking is beyond the knowledge of the wife.

For goodness sake, why don't these ladies learn. I've asked myself a thousand times as I shoved a tearblotted letter back into its envelope that the Army Relief Aid and Welfare Society established a cooking corporations, to have brought about, back in the closing days of the Congress, a discussion in the senate Committee on Appropriations. The new Army Relief Aid Act recommended that provision also be made available for "Domestic Service Projects."

This item is certainly a novelty in the Government's spending program, but, apparently in the interests of the collective American stomach, it is well worth while.

Mr. Edgar A. Brown, President of the United Government Employees, Inc., told the Committee that there are 400,000 positions in American homes awaiting competent cooks and other domestic workers. Despite the fact that a great number of women are willing and eager to fill such places, they lack the necessary knowledge, and so, no relief.

Domestic workers, especially cooks, must be trained. A high pedestal can't be able to turn out dishes that look and taste well. But the demand is for farsighted, not blind, Army Mr. Brown proposes Federal Project or schools in home economics, cooking, dietetics, marketing and other household arts. At the end of the month, students would receive certificates attesting not only to their ability but their health. They would insure an ample supply of trained domestics, free from contagious diseases, and that the thousands of women would be taken off of relief.

Husbands and children would also be given a little "relief" from the standard culinary efforts of women who throw something in the frying pan and something else in a pot and imagine they've achieved meal.

It is strange the indifference that women show to domestic arts. Not long ago, 150 members of the National Executive Housekeepers' Association were in convention in Washington. Apart from the big salaries many of these women make in large and responsible positions, they all in love with their work, and have loads of fun doing it too.

Take Miss Olive Gunther Meyer's job, for instance. She's head housekeeper for a Chicago hotel, one of the world's largest. She started in 1923 and had her baptism of fire during Chicago World's Fair. Even then, during the Fair, she had 3,185 guests in the hotel, and 2000 employees working in the building, she recalled.

Mrs. Ethel Nesbit, housekeeper at the White House, told of one night when the ice cream failed to appear for a State dinner. She telephoned frantically all over Washington, and everything closed tight as a drum with the ice cream arriving like the delayed heroine of the movie, just in time to save the situation.

To hear these women talk and tell their amusing and close shaves, to realize there's loads of fun and adventure in big-scale housekeeping. And why some women would rather eat off a drug store stool, instead of learning how to cook appetizingly, is, to my way of thinking a mystery.

Give a Child Chance for Gratitude

It's Spontaneous And Cannot be Forced Says Lisa Grenelle

(By LISA GRENELLE)

"EVER SINCE my children were born," Mrs. X— writes, "I have sacrificed everything for them. And do I get any thanks from them or any appreciation? I do not. Being a mother is the most thankless job in the world!"

Sometimes it does seem like that, children don't seem to be appreciated at all by the children themselves. But, remember this: Unless very sacrifices, we made them all right, and sometimes they hurt, but we chose them—the children didn't! Maybe they'd have chosen something else if they'd had the choice. Maybe they'd have chosen some entirely different sacrifice. Of course, if we didn't have been wrong; children like most adults, have little idea of what's good for them. But that doesn't change the principle.

We may be strangled for saying it, but it's really more fun sometimes to sacrifice than to be sacrificed for. I've had considerable experience as both; and although I grumbled and complained about the little luxuries and good times I gave up for my children's sake, I must admit that, looking back at it, I did get some joy from it. It's a full noble, unselfish and dependable.

Don't Feel Appreciated

Mothers don't always feel appreciated, of course—but neither do the young ones. Now I ask you—would you consider it a compliment, would you feel comfortable, would it fill you with gratitude and joy to have it impressed on you day after day that you were an unemployed breath, a necessary evil, a thing for whom Mother must sacrifice things she really wanted? It's no accusing and parental of saying such things, except in moments of exasperation. Once said, they're remembered—and when not said, they may be there, but we can't think a thing constantly and not have it come out sooner or later, in one way or another.

Gratitude, like love, is a spontaneous emotion; it cannot be forced. You can't shame or talk a child into feeling grateful. But he'll be grateful if you give him a chance. Not always for the things you think he should, perhaps—but if you are patient, and understanding, you will get your meed of gratitude from some source.

Still climbing are the new hat crowns, for the new imports are higher than ever. A high pedestal crown is a feature of a hat in steel gray felt with a band and trimming of tiny ostrich tips in coral and gray. The feathers hold a small pigeon wing.

Back to school wearing a dirndl of challis printed in peasant motifs of dark colors, and a white satin wide black velvet girdle with silver metal coin buttons.

Be decorative this autumn and wear color in the accessories of your frocks. A beauty is of black felt velvet, intricately shaped, with a buttine. A lace frill marks the heart-shaped, strapless neckline.

Something new is the three-color homespun in autumn suitings. A new model has the full cut circular skirt of the moment, while the blouse is done in royal blue. The neckline opens with revers faced in beige. A wide patent belt in rust is laced with royal blue.

On the go wearing smart tweeds. A model just from London has a neat two-piece suit in wine red and lime green checked tweed with the top coat in of wine red tweed lined with lime green and is reversible with tuxedo revers of contrasting color.

Not Safe to Take Any Chances On Offensive Moisture of Skin

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

EXCESSIVE MOISTURE of the skin surface, with the offensive odors and skin, therefrom, is a trouble that has kept many a girl from social activities. Even in business girl it is a serious handicap. That sufferers from this condition are not aware of it doesn't seem possible. Nobody can tell them, nobody can refer to it. It is a subject that is taboo.

Ordinarily, the daily bath, a daily change of undies, the free use of a reliable deterrent will keep the skin normal, subdue excessive flow of glands. These agencies do not bring relief, the victim should consult her family physician. There are mild glandular disturbances that defy all but the surgeon. Overactive sweat glands deposit upon the skin surface solid substances, fats, salts and other chemicals. Unless these deposits are washed away, they become offensive. Every woman should use an astringent dusting powder after the bath, touch the armpits with a deodorant. It isn't safe to take any chances.

Nearly eaters, nervous women, those who do hard manual labor, must be very careful concerning personal attentions. Foods that produce intestinal putrefaction in the intestinal tract have an unpleasant effect upon the exudations of the skin. Plenty of water should be avoided. Drinking six glasses of water a day should be a habit.

There's a natural, normal shedding of the hair in late summer or autumn. Only the old must be used in house cleaning, getting rid of dirty dust is the lifting. Every bit of flock of styes will cause havoc to the pretty fingers.

Night and morning bathe the eyes with warm water then with cold. Dry the flesh lightly, touch the eyelids with mineral oil, the best kind is sold in every drug store. Don't dig your fists into your eyes. You will not only weaken the lashes but you may cause injury to the vision.

Don't exercise when you are tired. Don't go in for exhausting exercise if you are on a reducing diet. The best time for a brief workout is when you get up in the morning and the bath is to follow. Try some twisting. Place hands on hips, keep chest up and "turn" left, right, twist and turn at the waistline. That's the beauty ticket for the heavyweight and others too.

X-Ray Useful In Tracing Many Ills

Ailments of Internal Organs and Tissues Are Diagnosed by It

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHEN THE X-RAY was first announced 33 years ago, it was no wonder that few people could grasp its significance. Some thought it would never be useful for anything. Some flatly disbelieved in the idea or a kind of ray which would penetrate otherwise opaque material.

Then it became evident that it was very useful in the surgery of bone, and in the diagnosis and care of fractures and dislocations, but of every kind of disease of bones.

It was never thought that it could be useful in the diagnosis of disease of the soft tissues because these threw no shadow on the X-ray plates. But before long, Dr. Cannon, of Harvard, showed that the powdery looking white salts of such metals as bismuth and barium could be made up into a sort of milk shake, and when swallowed would outline the stomach and intestines. Here was a new field for the X-ray. It was followed by the findings that improvements in X-ray apparatus would allow the outline of the heart and the great arteries of the chest to be seen that even very small areas of diseased tissue could be made out. In this way, the diagnosis of tuberculosis has become very much more accurate and can often be made earlier than previously.

Went Still Further

Here, one would have thought, the radiologist would have been content to stop but no, he went on to other fields to conquer. Diseases of the gall-bladder, white common enough, were known to be difficult to recognize in all cases — and gallstones,— unlike other stones, do not throw a shadow on the X-ray plate as a rule. But Dr. Evarts Graham, of St. Louis, devised a special chemical form of dye that is concentrated by the bile, and which in a normal gall-bladder can be distinguished from a diseased one and gallstones outlined, etc.

Even more remarkable was the introduction of a substance known as thorotrast. This has the remarkable quality, when it is injected into the body, of attaching itself to certain cells, known as the reticulo-endothelial cells. It forms a loose chemical combination with them and casts a dense black shadow on the X-ray plate.

Since the reticulo-endothelial cells are distributed in abundance to certain organs — spleen, liver, bone marrow — and hardly at all to others — kidneys, for instance — we have a way of outlining the size and shape of these organs with an accuracy that could be obtained no other way.

Besides that the reticulo-endothelial cells exist almost entirely in normal tissue and not at all in diseased tissue so diseased tissue will be seen as punched out areas on such X-ray plates.

Even more recent are dyes which outline the heart valves and vessels of the lungs or which mention was made here a week or so ago.

Air liners are to fly between London and Glasow, Scotland, in three hours 15 minutes.

Worms Like to Go Fishing?

Goodnight Stories

By MAX TRELL

HANDI THE SHADOW girl, thought it was very curious that she should be taking a stroll through the garden with an earthworm. But as she was.

"So you'd like to know where the Mole family lives, eh?" he remarked to Handi as they went slowly past the pansy bed.

"Yes," said Handi. "You see, they've built their tunnels under this garden. And Father says they are ruining the whole lawn. If they don't move away or something, Father is going to set a trap for them. So I've decided to warn them."

"A very good idea," said Earthworm. "Traps aren't the nicest things to get caught in. Of course, they don't bother me any. What I don't like are shovels. Some of my best friends have been caught in shovels."

"Really!"

Family Things

"Oh yes. Shovels are nasty things, especially when there is a man or a boy, or even a girl, at the other end of them. Along come these shovels and dig the moles up out of their underground — poof! comes the earth with our homes and furniture. And then, as though all that weren't bad enough, the poor worms are picked up and dropped in a can and taken on a fishing trip."

"Oh!"

"Some of My best friends have been caught in shovels."

"Perhaps the fishing trips they went on were very pleasant. Only — only they never came back. So that's the part of it I don't like. But it's a very good idea of yours to warn the Mole family about the traps."

"And will you take me to the entrance to their tunnel? I can't find it anywhere.

"Of course I will. I know a short cut. Wouldn't tunnel! I can't find it anywhere.

"Of course I will. I know a short cut. Wouldn't tunnel! I can't find flat alone just a bit. Ah that's fine. Now just crawl down a little and follow me."

At that instant Handi said: "Oh, I almost forgot something!"

TRY THESE APPETIZING DISHES TO TEMPT SUN-SEARED PALATES

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

THESE DISHES are calculated to appeal to those who lose their appetite when the weather is warm and sultry.

Salads are always welcome, but not always easy to prepare. So give thanks for this whole-meal salad that looks so nice in its green pepper case. Mix together one can chicken (about two cups), one can of corn, one small onion, one can kidney beans (drained), one-half teaspoon salt, one red apple, (not peeled), two hard-boiled eggs, one-half cup chopped celery, one-half cup whipping cream, one-half cup mayonnaise and about one-half lemon. Serve in green pepper cases on lettuce bed.

Baked Dish

Green peppers do their share to give flavor to a delicious baked dish. The ingredients include one can golden bantam kernel corn, five green peppers, four medium tomatoes, one small onion, one tablespoon butter, six green olives, salt and pepper to taste. Cut off tops and remove centers from peppers. Put in hot water and cook slowly for one-half hour. Brown the onions in the butter, add tomatoes and corn and let cook about 15 minutes. Just before removing from fire, add the chopped olives and salt. Stuff the peppers, cover with bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in oven until crumbs are well browned.

If you happen to be feeling extravagant and want to provide guests with an especially grand bake, then get to work on this recipe. Get together nine eggs, one and one-half cups each sugar and cake flour, one teaspoon each cream of tartar, orange extract, lemon extract and one-half teaspoon salt. Separate eggs, beat whites stiff with salt and cream of tartar. Add sugar gradually. Beat egg yolks with extract until thick and lemon-colored. Add egg yolks to egg white mixture. Add flour which has been sifted once before measuring. Place in floured tube pan. Place in cold oven set control at 300 F. Bake one hour and prepare cake as follows: Line up one cup each of custard and pineapple, one No. 1 can sliced pineapple, one cup Maraschino cherries, one cup green cherries, one-half cup blanched almonds, one cup raspberry jam and one pint whipping cream.

Cut cake in three layers, sprinkle first layer with pineapple juice, spread over this half of the custard then half of the jam. Slice second layer on top. Repeat fillings. Place third layer on top and cover with whipped cream. Decorate cake with pineapple cut in wedges, red and green cherries and nuts. Place in refrigerator for 24 hours.

WOMEN TRAVELERS RESPONSIBLE FOR BETTER TOURIST SERVICES

By TEMPLE MANNING

(Three-Minute Journey)

ANY CRUISE director will tell you that women travelers are responsible for all the special features of even the most inexpensive cruises. The same goes for all the lovely decorations on the new trains. And if you are one of the happy army of pampered women travelers, thank your lucky stars that you travel in 1938 style rather than in that of 5 or more years ago.

Extra Baggage

Picture hats, two-piece bathing suits, high shoes, a raft of petticoats and an assortment of parasols might look very pretty and fashionized girl more alluring to the 1910 "dandy", but they hardly added to her enjoyment as a traveler. It seems that in those days three trunks per person were considered the minimum for a long trip, and, in contrast to Miss 1938, who never often than not takes only hand luggage, Miss 1910 many times paid more for excess baggage than she did for her own ticket. The two-piece bathing suit took up almost as much space as two modern afternoon dresses; hats were the problem-children of packing, and no real fashion plate ever thought of making a journey without a good selection of parasols.

Miss 1938 travels light.

The baggage that Miss 1910 shipped when she went traveling was facetiously named "balloon freight, by railroad men, and when the whole family, including mother and the girls, set out, the problems to be met and faced were many.

Another factor plays its part in making travel a delight for the great American traveler, and that is the disappearance of the chaperon. Unmarried women of the early 1900's had to have one — indeed, if they were nice women and most women were, according to the dictates of that age. The addition of a chaperone put the cost of travel too high for many and cut the clinging-vine school. Fewer women traveled and the period was not one of great pleasure and liner trips, but of summer homes where the entire family went year after year for a vacation.

The woman of 1910 traveled in a man's world, and trains, boats and other travel facilities were designed primarily for men. There was no hotel and restaurant looked askance at the woman who traveled alone and ventured into a restaurant alone. Either she was not what she should Be or she was an eccentric—and in either case, she should be avoided. How times do change!

Here Are More Coffee Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

HERE ARE some more tasty dishes made with coffee.

Coffee cream roll calls for one-quarter cup ground coffee, one-third cup water, two eggs, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, one-third cup sugar, one-third cup pastry flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder and a few grains salt. Mix coffee with cold water and bring to boiling point. Let stand for five minutes, then strain through fine cheesecloth to remove grounds. Add yolks of eggs and beat until light. Add vanilla extract, then add sugar gradually and beat for five minutes. Sift flour with baking powder and salt; fold into first mixture. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Spread about one-quarter inch thick in large jelly roll pan which has been greased and lined with white paper. Bake in moderate oven (325 F.) about 10 minutes. Turn out on slightly-damp cloth sprinkled with powdered sugar. Trim off crusty edges and spread with cream filling. Roll up immediately and wrap in cloth.

Remove cloth, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and cut into slices to serve. To make the filling, add two tablespoons powdered sugar and one teaspoon vanilla extract to one cup cream and whip mixture until stiff.

Coffee Ice Cream

If you have the conviction that coffee ice cream is the best ever then you are just the person to give these directions to. Here is a super-coffee ice cream. Brazil nuts are added in the sort of dish that a hostess uses when she wishes to do her right thing by a group of her favorite friends. And she usually has to have the ingredients for it. She will tell her guests that one cup strong coffee, one cup sugar, two egg yolks, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups cream, one cup unsweetened evaporated milk, and one cup chopped Brazil nuts will serve one quart of cream. Heat milk with coffee in double boiler. Put half the sugar in heavy frying pan and let until sugar melts. Melt brown sugar. Strain coffee mixture through a cloth. Add the caramel and stir over hot water until dissolved. Beat egg yolks with salt and stir into the coffee mixture. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until custard coats the spoon. Add the cream and Brazil nuts and pour into freezing trays and freeze for three to four hours.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today:

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)

Most Brides Have Jitters in First Few Months of Marriage and Fear They Have Made Mistake in Choice of Mate

(Copyright, 1938 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I've been married only nine weeks and I am in a terrible state. I'm not in love with my husband. I knew it when we got back from our honeymoon. I don't know what to do, whether to tell him or to keep it a secret. I don't know whether to leave now or to stick it a while longer. I utterly loathe him now but he loves me and I don't want to hurt him.

E. M.

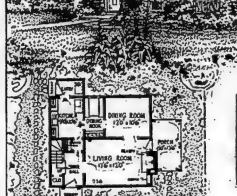
ANSWER:

Your attack of jitters came on rather early, my dear girl, but it is quite a common affliction with newly married. A noted psychiatrist says that almost invariably within the first few years of matrimony husband and wife begin to suspect that life isn't a bed of roses and invariably each wife is sure that in this realm upon the other. The wife says to herself that if she had married the other fellow life would have been much smoother and sweeter. The husband says to himself that if he had to do it over again he would not get married at all.

The truth is that with another male life would be different; but in all probability not much better. So if they just wait until the brain storm passes they are more than likely to make the grade and reach the top together.

Now be a good sport and apply some common sense to your case. Forget about love and ecstasy for the moment and try to make friends with that young fellow whom you don't even know in nine short weeks. Instead of thinking of your momentary disappointment, think of what's in store for you through yourself with household chores and try to make husband forget counting your state of mind: in other words, play the game like a good sport. I believe you'll find that your doubts and fears will vanish as they came. It's worth trying and if it doesn't work then you can confess.

I wouldn't argue that love is not important in marriage. It is vastly important. But there are some other items that must be taken into account; good sportsmanship toward the partner, unselfishness and a determination to make the marriage succeed. Anybody that depends on love alone to put a marriage over will discover that it is a broken reed.



CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Modern Wardrobe Requires Lovely Housecoat or Lounging Pajamas

Above, white crepe pajama suit with a belt of gold leather.

Right, coat of Persian blue, worn over salmon pink crepe.

By ALICE ALDEN

Leisure hour wear is still popular attire. Many a woman just manages to keep going during a busy day because she knows that when she gets home she'll be able to look beautiful and be comfortable in a beautiful house-coat or negligee often a design that she can wear down to dinner. The modern wardrobe just isn't complete without a couple of lovely housecoats or lounging pajamas so here are two new models to assist you when you go shopping for a new negligee.

Olivia de Havilland likes the lounging outfit she wears at right. A coat of Perkin blue with a matelasse stripe is worn over salmon pink crepe. The simple collarless coat fastens at the waist with double frogs of the two fabrics. The sleeves are short and comfortable.

The pajama suit left, is of white crepe. It is belted with gold leather; white and gold is a very popular color alliance just now. The sleeves are especially interesting and the tunic is soft and graceful.

(Homemaking Helps)

By ELEANOR ROSS

SOON IT'LL be quite a problem to find some wood to "knock on"; what with all this glass furniture selling at such modest prices. We may not yet be living in glass houses, but we certainly are doing our share to furnish our homes with glass. Many a housewife never considered glass furniture until she saw one of the modern houses and apartments built with walls of glass brick, or with one wall all windows.

Glass accessories have been growing in favor all the time, and now glass furniture comes into its own as part of the decorative scheme of the average household. Now there are glass tables, glass desks and exquisite new glass screens. Many of these pieces use "knock proof" glass so that there is little fear of breakage. With this improvement, the way is clear for more glass furniture.

Lovely Glass Desk

One of the loveliest desks we have ever seen is made of three huge, horizontal sheets of glass. Each glass sheet is three-quarters of an inch thick. The drawer sections are covered with white leather. The glass sheets project beyond the drawers all the way around so the contents of the drawers can be glimpsed without having to open and search. It is a modern piece full of beauty and immensely practical. Another object of our admiration (and envy) is a marvelous fire screen made entirely of glass. A design is sand-blasted on the lower half of the semi-circular screen. It is of specially-tempered glass, so it is heat proof. It is beautiful enough as is, but with the glowing flames reflected on its shining surface, it is lovely beyond description. The glass rests on a base made of chromium, and silver or brass finish.

Coffee Tables

All sorts of lovely coffee or occasional tables are made with glass tops. The glass is combined with bases in various blonde woods. Many of these tables have provision for a pot or vase of flowers between the base and the glass top. A beauty of a table has a large square of glass mounted on a semi-circle of clear, very thin glass which rests on a blonde maple base. Another table has a thick glass circle mounted on a thin square of glass which is held by two light wood pedestals.

If you want to start a glass scheme, there are delightful accessories to begin your collection. Ash trays and lighters in clear glass make nice centerpieces. Add glass lamps and lovely flower pots. Glass trays are becoming more popular all the time, the glass being free from any trimming. Engraved glass is used for some beautiful wall ornaments that are becoming increasingly popular,

Victory Puts Pittsburgh 5 1-2 Games Ahead of Giants

FELLER BEATEN

Tries New Hurling Style And Gets By For Seven Frames

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

One explanation of why these hot August days are called the "dog days" might be that they are when baseball players' dogs—lest to the uninitiated—begin to give out.

It is a long grind from the start of spring training in February or March to the world series in October, and the boys begin to feel the strain about this time. Pitchers who have been winning regularly begin to blow up. Batters experience sudden slumps. Injuries strike more frequently. More than one pennant contender has suffered from the ill effects already.

New York Giants, with Carl Hubbell in the hospital, Lou Chiozza retired, and the boys begin to get the jitters, Chicago Cubs, who lost Manager Gabby Hartnett and have had various other stars on the shelf have been the hardest hit. Stephen Red Sox lost Lefty Grove with a sore arm; Cleveland's mound staff seems to have worn out and even the Yanks haven't escaped entirely.

Tobin Had "Stuff"

The Bucs had one good spurt left however, and big Jim Tobin had plenty of "stuff" in his pitching as Pittsburgh knocked off Chicago 4-2 yesterday in their last game before opening a home stand against the eastern teams in the National League.

With the score tied at 1-1 in the seventh, the Pirates jumped on Clay Bryant for four hits and broke up the mound duel.

The defeat stopped Chicago back into fourth place as Cincinnati Reds hit hard, as usual, behind Paul Derringer and walloped St. Louis Cardinals 11-3.

Cleveland's Bobby Feller, trying a new pitching style, seemed to have recovered his old effectiveness for seven innings, giving only six hits and fanning eight, but the eighth gave Chicago White Sox three runs and a 4-3 victory.

GOLF PLAYOFF GOES 27 HOLES BEFORE SAM SNEAD WINS

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Slammin' Sam Snead, who gets better every time he slams one, took his Canadian Open Golf Championship, plus $1,000 first money in Rosedale Canadian Golf Association medal and his fourth Gold Cup right in stride.

He left a gallery of 8,000 at Mississauga Club cheering his march to the Canadian title in a 27-hole playoff with Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicago yesterday. And he left them laughing when he ducked off the presentation stand, dashed off a couple of autographs and rode away to the United States tournament circuit.

It wouldn't a' 'ee good enough to beat anyone until I met Sam," Cooper said.

"Gee!" Snead said. "My left foot is sure awful sore from bangin' it with my putter every time I missed a short one."

Cooper's 67 for 18 holes wasn't quite good enough to beat the 26-year-old southerner over Mississauga's par-72 layout. They finished the 18 holes all even, with neyer a stroke separating sparkling them. Then Cooper's game , fell apart before the smashing onslaught of the slammer in nine extra holes. Snead finished the duel with two aces stroked under par, for a total of 101, and Cooper came in with 104.

Sam didn't miss many "short ones" along the way. Superior putting and a sensational eagle three on the rough, tough 12th turned the tide his way in the face of the veteran Lighthorse's dazzling iron play.

Cooper got $600 for his bid. Paul Runyan of White Plains, N.Y., who finished Saturday with 280, took third place and $400.

IN HECTIC GAME KINGSTON TEAM DEFEATS CORBYS

Tanners Win 7 to 5 in First Contest of Playdowns

POLICE ARE CALLED

Inability of Locals to Hit in Pinches Cost Contest

Corby's A. C. took a 7 to 5 trimming at the hands of Tanners of Kingston, in the first game of the Intermediate "A" playdowns for the Provincial football title, in that series at the Coleman Plate diamond last night in one of the wildest contests seen in this city in some years and before one of the largest crowds in the history of softball. The game was apparently terminated at the end of the seventh frame after a free-for-all had occurred in the centre of the diamond but cooler heads prevailed and the game was resumed with Art Cole, first baseman of the Corby's, watching the remainder of the contest from the sidelines.

Hectic Seventh

In the hectic seventh police were called to keep order after play had been resumed and the umpire in chief, Art Twigg, of Kingston, was escorted from the field to prevent further violence on his person. For in the seventh he was badly bewildered. Conveners Rollins at this city and Leither of Peterboro conferred after the contest and the clubs will meet in Kingston on Wednesday evening in the second game with all players being eligible. The trouble in the game was caused, not because of any decision but when the rival squads but because the umpire refused to allow a very poor exhibition of calling plays behind the plate. The climax came when Corby's had a two-run first, two out and Reid at bat. Reid worked the batter to a full count, and two count and slashed a hit over first, that was marked for the circuit clout and the hit that would have scored would have tied the ball game.

Called Hit Foul

Twigg working behind the plate called the hit foul and the trouble was on. The hit was fair, passing over the first base line, but declared it was outside. The players gathered around the umpire but he would not change his decision. Finally, after much argument, he walked to the centre of the field and they declared the game forfeited to Kingston and the umpire and they brought the wrath of the local team and the crowd on his head in full force. Police there were in bedlam and in the melee, it is said, Twigg was struck in the mouth. Finally order was restored but the visiting team refused to continue until such time as there was adequate police protection. The police arrived, and peace reigned.

No Hits In Pinches

Inability to hit in the pinches bat the ball game for Corbys. They had the bases loaded with no runways and even in the ninth, Corbys had a chance to come through with a win, when the bases were loaded and Art Schrieder got wrinkle ready to be scored but Freddie McGuire popped to short to end the contest. Schrieder allowed but one bad innings, the first, when Tanners score three runs and with one down headed Jordan walked, Banks was safe on Reid's error at second and Webber singled with a homer to right. They scored another in the second on a walk, a infield out and a long drive to left on which the fielder erred but who had two bases stroked on the play for a strikeout. Corbyville came into the picture in the fourth, when Kiser walked and was forced at second and Cole hit a homer to centre, another run coming in the same fifth on two hits and a passed ball.

Schrieder Tired

Then came the seventh, when after scoring one run, the play was all set for three winging hits, when bedlam broke forth on a bad call by Twigg on Reid's hit. When the game was resumed Kiser struck slightly and Tanners scored three runs in the seventh and eight but Corbys could only get a lone counter in the ninth. Schrieder struck out seven batters but his defence was perfect in the six innings. The fielding features were contributed by Corbys, Kiser and Barrigar making sensational catches in the outfield. The teams play again on Wednesday night in Kingston.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with Ken J. Colling

Absolutely one of the worst exhibitions of umpiring ever seen in this city prevailed on a baseball here last night when the Kingston Tanners defeated Corbys in the first game of their Intermediate "A" playoff series at Coleman Flats. Umpire Art Twigg, who were out his welcome in this city years ago, was behind the plate and his decisions irked the fans at times to a point of frenzy and had the Corby squad grinding their teeth in impotent rage.

For six innings, feelings gradually rose higher and in the seventh the lid was blown off the pot. Two down and one on with Harold Reid at bat following Twigg's decision that a fast drive down the first base line was foul, and the Bellville player's fielding got the best of him. Twigg was shoved around, and the crew lunged on the diamond. They milled around umpires and players. Flat fights started in odd places and it looked like Donegal.

But the big eruption came when Twigg attempted to announce the forfeiture of the game to Kingston by a 9-0 score. At this fact there was a solid right to the official's jaw from which the smash had been removed. Art Cole, husky first baseman of the Corby squad, jumped on the field from the cellar, that connected solidly with Twigg's jaw, and he rolled over like a log. Pandemonium again broke loose. Excited fans and players again milled around the official. For a moment it looked as if a riot of considerable had broken out. Wiser heads intervened and after a long delay the game was resumed and Kingston went on to win 7-5.

Cole's action however, can hardly be condoned. In spite of the fact that his squad were the recipients of bad umpiring this does not excuse any player from striking an official no matter who he is. A player acting in this extent, only weakens his team's chances for ultimate victory, as his act inevitably draws expulsion from the game if not for the season. As it was Cole's big bat is missing for the remainder of the pastime, that, in view of his recent hitting spree, is a serious loss to the offensive power of his squad.

Jimmie Arnett's Kingston "Lacos" passed quietly out of the Bay of Quinte League picture yesterday at Napanee, as an inspired Picton crew, led by a rookie, Glen Burley in some guys, pasted the pill for six runs, as a wobbly field faltered behind Chief Williams and the best they could do with the hickory was to send three runners across the pan.

Coming back after a couple of hours rest, the Chemical Squad-ders' uncovered another spot of brilliant baseball against the second place Napanee hickaroos. Loose errors again told the story and they bowed to the Cerow gang by a 5-2 count in the first of a three game series to decide second place, and who will meet the Belleville Ortuns for the loop title. The squads meet in Picton tomorrow in the second game of the series.

"And when the years speed by,
And their telling eyes go bad,
And their feet slip on those banks,

Ah, that's the time it's sad."

And so with the passing of the "Locos" another intermediate edition of once proud names passing into the limbo of forgotten men for this year at least. Bill Bain, Bill Webber, Bonham, Jamieson, Joyce, the Arnells, Compeau, all byproducts with Kingston and Eastern Ontario Baseball fandom established on the diamond and were the fear of opposing batters and pitchers. Bain and Webber will take Hal Schumacher and Hank Leiber in the Giants' nursery Oshawa Arnett again, cocky as ever.

ERRORS AID NAPANEE IN BEATING PICTON

Napanee, Aug. 23 Special)—Collapse of the Picton infield in the eighth inning paved the way for two Napanee runs that gave the homesters a 2 to 1 victory here last night in the first game of the Bay of Quinte intermediate semi-final. It was a tough defeat for Abbott, Picton pitcher, who held Napanee to two hits. Hodgins, Picton second baseman, misused on three successive plays, and First Baseman Wright capped it off by heaving high to the home plate as Gavins came in with the winning run.

Picton scored their counter in the sixth when Leevens led off with a double, reached on Hodgin's error, right, and easily came in on Dalgard's bounder to left.

DROUILLARD MAY UPSET THE DOPE

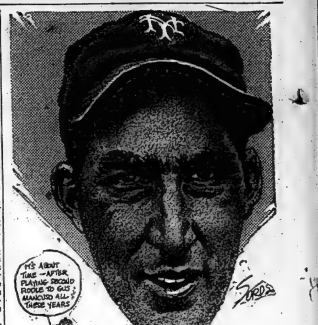
Windsor Boxer Meets Pedro Montaine in Title Bout



(By William R. Dunaday, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Aug. 23 (CP)— The campaign of Pedro Montanes toward a titular meeting with Henry Armstrong reaches a critical stage tomorrow night when the Puerto Rican lightweight opposes Orville Drouillard in a 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Few, if any of the experts figure the Canadian has much chance of defeating the little Montanes, but Orville plays true to his habit of turning in the unexpected he may blast Pedro's hopes for keeps.

Al Buck, writing in the New York Post, thinks so little of Orville's chances that he says: "There is nothing to stop Montanes Wednesday night's bout, for all that can be said of Drouillard is that he comes from Windsor, Ont., and will afford Montanes a chance to test his equipment . . ."

But Drouillard's record is replete with victories over good boys, and Tommy Spigel in Miami last year, Spigel was one of the most feared lightweights in the business. Lou Ambers, former champion, received a meeting with him. But Drouillard outpointed the classy southerner with the odds 10 to 1 against him. In Milwaukee against Larry Greb, Drouillard won despite the fact he was 1-4 underdog. Shortly after Phil Baker had battled the sensational Baby Armstrong to a draw, Drouillard met Baker and trounced him handily.

ABERNATHY NIGHT HOWLING SUCCESS

On Ball Field, However, Syracuse Chiefs Were Best

(By The Associated Press)

Charity is a worthy sentiment, but it should be extended to baseball games. That's the attitude of Syracuse Chiefs, especially now that they have a chance to take second place from Rochester Red Wings in the International League.

The Chiefs gladly did their part toward making Woodley Abernathy night a success at Buffalo last night, contributing their share of the receipts to the fund for the benefit of the Bison outfielder, whose skull was fractured in a game at Syracuse three weeks ago. But they wouldn't extend their sentiment onto the field whereby Abernathy onto the field where they defeated the Bisons 8-6.

Johnny Cox, whose pitch felled Abernathy, started against Bob Kline, the stricken outfielder's roommate, and gained credit for the victory after a tough battle. He was removed for a pinch hitter in the sixth, with the Chiefs trailing 5-4, but Syracuse scored two runs before George Miner stepped in to hold the Bisons safe the rest of the way.

The victory left Syracuse only a half-game behind the Red Wings who, paired with Newark, took the day off.

Reigning Johnny Hubbell made fifth place temporarily safe for Jersey City Giants when he pitched them to a 6-2 victory over the sixth place Toronto Leafs. Montreal Royals, in seventh, walloped Baltimore for third straight time, 13-2, and wrung up a half-game behind Toronto.

BROOKLYN DODGERS FINISH 1ST WINNING HOME STAND OF YEAR

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Burleigh Grimes, unshaven boss of Brooklyn Dodgers, muses like a creaking ancient of the team more or less directly to the fact that his father used to be noted as a mule-tamer down in Missouri.

Old Ol' Burleigh, revealed the other day, could take a long-eared, mean mule that had kicked the brains out of three previous owners and within 18 months have the brute pulling the family carriage.

"What he did was curry 'em and comb 'em," the Dodger pilot reflected as he admired his circular hair-cut coach, George H. Ruth. "As I remember it always took about 18 months. That's roughly the length of time I've had this club.

"A mule likes currying, and so do ball players. Now these boys of mine are getting a little better all the time. They're getting more spirit, and they're going to be hard to beat by the time the season ends."

The Brooklyns are looking better, They've just finished their winning home stand of the year. They trimmed Boston and Cincinnati at Ebbets Field. They trimmed arch-foemen, the Giants, two out of three at the Polo Grounds. They are sixth now in the National League, but they think they will soon be up higher than fourth.

Getting apparent every day that Babe Ruth has found a happy home with the Dodgers, The big fellow is enjoying himself, and he says he is going to stay with the Dodgers as long as they want him. He hasn't lifted a golf club since Larry MacPhail signed him to a coaching contract.

England has 20,000,000 fewer acres of farm land this year than in 1918.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

They went out that night and, the next, and others which followed. For a week or two he was careful. Then one evening he came into her hotel room rather irritable and barely able to stand.

"Sorry, old girl," he said thickly. "Had a few of the old crowd. Got to drink it up before Prohib—Prohibition comes back."

Then his knees slowly buckled under him, and he went down like a stone.

She got him home as soon as she was demobilized. Holmes was at the door, and the father in the hall. Luckily it was one of Jerry's good days, and he passed Blaine's son's scrutiny fairly well. But that night he drank the better part of a quart of whiskey, and he lay in a stupor for twenty-four hours. Toward the end she became frightened and sent for Chris, but Jerry was coming out of his coma then.

"He'll be all right, Beverly," was time anyhow. But of course he can't go on like that."

"He's been through a lot, Chris. He doesn't talk about it, but I can guess."

"Yes," he said absently, "But it's not easy to talk about, is it? How about you?" he said abruptly. "You look tired. Better send you something to pick you up, while I'm take it?"

"Of course, but I'm all right, really."

Doctor and patient, he thought as he went out to his car. All those months of remembering that last night and trying to find out what was sending her cod-liver oil! His mouth was tight as he drove through the city. They were much closer when he could dream of her in France than now they could ever be when face to face. Yet driving down the hill that day, he knew that the bond between them was as strong as it had ever been. Stronger, now that they were man and woman, and the romance of the early days had developed into something much deeper and controlled and carefully concealed but passionate, as two people who were innately decent.

He groaned inwardly. What did people do under such conditions? They went on, he supposed. And Beverly, who had been her sole vigil by Jerry's bed, was thinking much the same thing. She sat down quietly, watching the man on the bed. She did not blame him. She felt toward him as she might have felt toward a wayward son, and when at last he stirred and opened his eyes, she leaned forward and put her hand on his forehead. That roused him, and he lay looking up at her out of sunken, bloodshot eyes.

"I'm no good, Bev. I never will be. Why don't you leave me?"

"I'm not leaving you, Jerry. We're fighting this out together."

His face relaxed and he reached out and caught her hand. She slept after that, a normal sleep. He was still holding her hand, and she was cramped and stiff before he wakened. But she did not move. This was her place, beside him, standing by. She would never leave him.

Again, she went to the window and looked down over the city lights. How often she had stood there, starting down at the silent!

thus tree was gone, and with the end of the war something like a peace of death had settled over the mills.

She and Chris. She and Jerry. Writing Chris and getting no answer, slamming Jerry in the garden below and determinedly smiling into the camera. She turned back to her room, and in the mirror of the dressing table, she saw her face, tired and strained. She was beginning to look like her mother, she thought. Then, still dressed in case Jerry needed her, she threw down a self fag downward on her bed. This was to be her life.

She was still lying there in the darkness when Jerry came into the room, a shaky and pallid Jerry, but with determination in his eyes. He came straight to her and stood looking down at her somberly.

"It's like that, is it, Bev?"

She turned, sat up. "I'm tired, Jerry. That's all.

"You weren't sleeping?"

"No."

"Then let's have this out." He sat down on the side of her bed, feeble but entirely sober. "I'm like this, Bev. You know it. I haven't a camouflage left. I'm stripped to the skin. Do you want to go on with it, or do you want it quit? Don't think about me; think about yourself. You're young. If you get rid of me, you'd be better off, and you know it."

"I told you I was standing by, Jerry."

"I don't want that," he said roughly. "I don't want a nurse. I'm not so terribly old myself, as far as that goes, and I've paid a price already for something that's over and done. I want a wife, not a sister of mercy."

"I've told you—"

"I'm not blaming you. Maybe I'm excusing myself, and you know you've been tolerant enough. I suppose I don't want toleration; that's all.

"Jerry," she said steadily, "I want you to tell me one thing. Just one thing. Do you care for me at all? Really, I mean. I've never been sure. I'm not sure now."

"Certainly I care. I always have cared."

"You care, but you've not been faithful, Jerry. I don't understand it. I suppose no woman ever does. Perhaps it is different with a man. I don't know."

"Different?" He shrugged his shoulders. "Technically, yes, my dear. A woman is still a good woman if she marries one man while she is in love with another. That's it, isn't it? While a man—"

"I did not finish, and a consistent later date. The door closed and knew that he was gone.

CHAPTER XLI

A few days later Jerry was drunk again, and Chris was on the experiences of this sort Beverly sent for Chris and told him the story.

"I don't know, Chris. But there's killing himself."

"What can I do?"

And then suddenly all her reserves were down, and she was leaning against his shoulder, sobbing. "I can't bear it, Chris. I've reached the end. And now to have to call on you!"

He brought Jerry home some days later, unsteady. Sometimes he confused him with the military father, and there were several severe blows before he was subdued. And it was Chris who sat the rest of that night in the chair where Jerry lay in a stupor. He sat there, his head in his hands, thinking. Not hypodermic to take effect and watching the man on the bed. It was a long night. It was irony, he thought, that the best he could do for Jerry was to give him a few hours of release; and to try to save for her a man whom she had never loved.

It was only the first of several such episodes. Sometimes Jerry was missing only a day. Again he would be lost for a week, and Beverly came to the city for him. He was a pathological case, a psychopathic drinker. Chris knew it, Jerry knew it, in time even Staunton Lewis realized it.

It was only one addition to Staunton's rapidly mounting troubles, however. He had been expanded during the war, and with its abrupt termination he found some of his plans entered prize dangerously near the rocks. Late at night Beverly, waiting for Jerry to come home, would see the light under the study door and know that her father was there. In the morning his waste-basket would be filled with scratch paper, covered with his small neat figures. He had built an empire, and now it was crumbling about him.

His lasted however, through that first year after the Armistice and well into the second. Then one morning the butler tapped at his door and found his room empty. He went into the bathroom, but Lewis was not there, and he was notified Beverly. It was not until the house had been searched that she found him. Apparently he had been standing beside the bed, because when his heart gave out he had fallen across it.

She did not ask for Chris. She saw at once that he was dead. Jerry had been dead three hours, and so for a little while she left him there on Chris's bed. It was as if Chris's own, so long installed in his life, were now united again. Propped on the bed pillows, often slipping in at night when the house was quiet and standing beside that bed, perhaps even wandering about the room as he had while her mother still lay there.

Beverly stood by the bed looking down at him. Strge, she thought, that he had allowed death to unmask him. In his own queer fashion he must always have loved her mother, even built his success in order to be important to her. It had been his compensation for his smallness of stature, his early poverty. And this he had failed her.

Beverly leaned over and put a hand on his arm. "I think she knows now, Father," she said quietly. "Perhaps she always did. She knows."

She was still very calm when his will was read. It had been made during the great days of his empire, and what with bequests, the endowment for the laboratory, and a still larger sum to build a new and modern hospital on the site of his house and grounds, she learned that there would be little left.

It did not matter greatly to her. Money never had been important to her. But when a day or two later Chris came to Washington and he refused to go, she wept for the first time since her father's death.

"I'm staying, Miss Beverly," Holmes said stoidily. "They'd have liked to know that, both of them; that I'm looking after you."

All those years of living, and now only Holmes was left to her! Jerry was dead, and Chris was dead, and Staunton Lewis was dying. Her world was crumbling about her, and she was left alone.

Then Chris came, carefully filling his pipe. "Take care of them, Ted. That's all. Most of them are friends of mine, I'll miss them, I suppose. Surgery's a detached sort of thing; now you are there, and now you don't. It's a plumber's job."

He retained his offices in the house, but only out of sentiment and for emergencies. His work as consultant was done in the downtown office, where he had a secretary. She sat at a desk in the waiting room, handling the telephone, watching his appointments, a spinsterish young woman who brought her lunches in a box and who kept his books and sent out his bills.

He was becoming an important local figure, and his reputation was spreading. Doctors called in the country began to send him cases, and now and then he went himself to some remote spot when the patient could not be moved.

Sometimes the cases came to him from the outlying districts; a stretcher flat on the floor of the baggage car, and some one's darkened doctor sitting on a box beside it. One day Chris stood on the platform and saw a gray-faced man getting out.

"Ted, my son, Ogden," he said, "and my wife is praying for you and Jesus."

It was touch and go, that case, but Chris fought it doggedly. The woman died in the operating room, behind everything he did, and in the end he—or she, was left indefatigued after it, but triumphant.

"Well, I guess we've turned the trick!"

He left with the help of God."

He went to the train him-self when they started back. father was grateful, but he wanted to give the boy back to his mother again. It was on the way he wondered, not whether he had given that particular case more than he had to, if it was the case which flowed into him from an unknown source. Was there, in all some thing else? Something he had denied, and that old David Mortland had called impiety? And when he needed it? He did not know, but always after that he had a phrase in it. He called it working better than he knew how. It was a car going at high speed. Now he drove himself through the gates and into the hospital, cautiously his new shining car among the others. It seemed a long time before the orderly came he had watched Bergman and Grant and the others doing the same thing.

He had not greatly changed. He still kicked the car tires when he got in his way, and fought inanimate things such as collars and shoe-laces.

"Hell and damnation," he would say, and tear off the collar and fling it on the floor.

Katie, however, had learned his distant battles, would tighten her mouth and keep out of his way. But he was still good to her, and was usually indulgent with her.

Sorry for the row, my dear, but if you will give parties—!"

For Katie was now carefully building up a life of her own. He did not blame her. He had less and less time to offer her, and in the end he had little or no home life. He would go back to the house to find her out, or to find a party there, the inevitable clinking upstairs in the nightfall and cocktail glasses and ice, and the loud sound of voices. When he appeared, he was sometimes glad he never accepted him. Once again throwing his past overboard, and he could not play their light game of give and take, the casual love-making and irresponsible quipping after the war.

Yet there was nothing in his face or carriage to suggest that he dealt in life and death instead of stocks and bonds.

CHAPTER XLII

Chris belonged to clubs now, although he had little time for them. When he could get an hour or two, he played golf, and after his late rounds at the hospital he joined the men there downstairs. He was a member of the College of Surgeons, belonged to their meetings, listening intently to the Mayos, to Crile, to Cushman, to all the big men. The war had seen the final end of the isolation theory.

Once or twice, too, he went to a convention of the American Medical Association, standing some of the older men there, he knew, by their philosophical rather than eager, as if, having failed to rationalize the human race as to cure of the body, they had finally recognized its supreme idiocy and lost hope. And he knew that most of them were still practical idealists, dedicated to what was at once a profession, an art, a science, and a career of service, often without hope of reward. What other profession labored so constantly to put itself out of business, he thought? Or paid so high a price? And this was the road he himself was to travel.

It was the next year that he took off Scott's arm at the shoulder. He had tried to save it, but the time had come when there nothing more to be done. He sat by the bed until the anesthetic wore off, and Scott's first words were characteristic.

an impulse to go into Katie's room and find the truth out of her.

It was at that time, three years after his return from France, that Jerry Lawrence, acting by then in internal medicine, went to New York, and Beverly went with him.

"He can't go on like this, Katie," he said. "How long is it since he's had a vacation? Why don't you talk to him?"

"I've tried," she said. "Try it yourself. He wouldn't listen to me, anyhow."

But she was unconvinced. Chris was strong, and if he chose to put his work before anything else he could. Besides, Ted Bergman was her short hair, her cigarette, and her revealing legs no less than her slender.

"Leave her, Katie," he said. "Chris isn't happy. He isn't even comfortable. You know why, probably. Don't let her hold him! She's the faithful sort, if you give him a chance."

She laughed shortly. "Faithful! I don't believe it. What about the war? What about those months he shut in his office with all sorts of women? They fall for him, you know, and he's human enough to attract them. All women fall in love with their doctors more or less, don't they? You ought to know!"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Bob Barrett," Ted said grimly. "Chris is a one-woman man. Don't make a mistake about that."

"And I dare say I'm not the woman," she flashed back.

Ted was thoughtful when he left. He wondered, getting into his car, whether Chris was still in love with Beverly Ames. In that case, should Jerry's wife ever run common property by that time. Those disappearances and returns of Jerry's were a local scandal. Although Beverly still carried her head high, Ted knew that Staunton Lewis Child recently Jerry had been picked up in the street and taken to the hospital by the police and had been later found by a nurse on a bench in the park, about an hour after the inevitable climbing up-stairs and removed him into a room with barred windows after that. The hospital, going about its business as usual, could not help Beverly there beside the bed. Ted wondered, seeing her there quietly while he slept, like a woman beside her dead. But Ted knew that Chris was not dead to Jerry. The war had left him to Beverly, but Chris, in a way, had been maimed, and she would look after him.

She had plenty to think of. The panic was still on, and the settlement of her father's estate had left her with huge debts and an uncertain income. The mills had been closed, and she would have to leave the big house soon, and find something smaller. But she told Jerry none of this, sitting there beside his bed and holding to his hand, and feeling more and more that she had ever known she could feel.

Now and then Chris passed along the corridor. She could hear his voice talking, and she liked the lighter steps of a resident, the sound of their voices. But he seldom went into the room. After those first days when Jerry disappeared. It was not fair to him, busy as he was; and she knew, too, that it was not fair to any of them. Their lives were fixed, settled for all time, and the only safe thing was to leave them so.

One day Chris learned through some medical underground that Jerry Ames had been committed to an institution in a distant city. He called Beverly at once, but she was out of town, and he knew what that meant.

He hung up the receiver with a sense of defeat. She was going to take him there, as she had gone through so much. She had built without him—with a vengeance, he thought; and he went about his work half-heartedly for days.

Actually Jerry had committed himself. He came through in another bout to discover once again that in the dark he was no longer controlling. Then, and he had called Beverly in and told her.

"I've made choice," he said, "and I can't make it myself. That's the fact. Besides—" he smiled at her ironically, "some day I might let go of a fire escape, and that would be a mistake."

She could hardly believe that

She Might Have Explained

By ALICE DUANE

When Mrs. Hanford managed to get Terry alone in their hotel sitting room, crowded almost to overflowing with handbags, cameras, golf bags, magazines, boxes of candy, flowers and books, she looked at her daughter intently and suggested firmly that she had an altogether too much rouge. "You know your father and I don't object to a little, but you look positively theatrical".

Terry assured her mother that her face was rouginess and rubbed the flawless skin of her pretty cheeks with her handkerchief to prove her innocence.

"Then you must have a fever," decided Mrs. Hanford.

"Just excitement- Terry told her and dear Mrs. Hanford believed that the excitement was due entirely to the fact that now after all these years of anticipation they were finally going abroad. Not just going for a few summer months, but for over a year of gorgeous adventure, made possible by the fact that Terry's first year out of college coincided with Professor Hanford's year's leave of absence.

And as they hurried out of the stateroom to rejoin their friends who had come to see them off, Mrs. Hanford reflected that among all the good people who had come to wish them a "Bon voyage" not one had come on Terry's invitation.

"I'm sorry," she told her daughter, "you didn't have some of your own friends here."

"Oh, well," said Terry, "you know father doesn't like to have young people around very much, and there's hardly anyone here in the city anyway."

"But you expected Bob Taylor—didn't you?" Bob Taylor was one of Terry's friends of whom her parents entirely approved.

Terry was about to explain away her disappointment at Bob Taylor's nonappearance when they reached the deck and found the young man in question in the circle assembled around the beaming professor. Seeing Terry, he broke away, greeted Mrs. Hanford and accepted Terry's invitation to make a tour of inspection.

"We'll be back—soon," she called back. "There's half an hour more before people have to go ashore."

Terry hurried Bob in a secluded corner of the writing room. "Some- rather terrible has happened." she told him. "I left my passport and ticket at the hotel. I wouldn't dare tell father. He'd be furious. But if you'll take a taxi I can go to the hotel and get back."

Bob insisted at first on going with her but yielded to her second plan.

"I'll have to go at once. You stay here and explain. Tell them everything will be all right. And if it comes time for visitors to go ashore you come ashore and wait for me. Don't let them come ashore, whatever else you do. Tell them you'll arrange to get me at the last minute."

Once on the dock Terry sped with all haste back toward West street.

Bob made some unsuccessful attempts to explain to the Hanfords who were too absorbed in their daughter. It was not until the first friends to think much about their signal for visitors to go ashore that Bob managed to make them understand.

An hour later Bob watched the last glimpse of the liner going down the bay. And then quietly, from somewhere, appeared Terry, looking entirely serene and unhurried.

"Here I am," she told him. "But don't do anything about it till I explain."

"But maybe we can charter a tugboat or something," he said. "I promised them I'd—and it's all right about your passport and ticket. Your father had them all the time."

"Of course he did," Terry told him. "I didn't go to the hotel. I just stood out on West street until the boat had gone. It was just out of the question any way you put it. Father's a dear and I admire him, but being together, morning, noon and night for over a year would be unthinkable."

"Well, of course Im glad, Terry—that is, I couldn't endure the thought of not seeing you for so long, and I wouldn't be able to get over even next summer—But what are you going to do? I mean, you'll have to send a wireless as soon as possible to let them know you're safe and what you are going to do—"

"Maybe you better figure that out," Terry told him. "You tell them I'm safe and everything is OK and I'll write them so they'll have a letter by the time they land."

Bob drew a notebook from his pocket and scribbled with a pocket pencil. "How's that?"

Terry said, We have decided to be married at once. Letter following".

Producing Good Hogs

Some farmers in every district are producing good hogs and should receive top market price plus their grade premiums when they sell them. However, unless the other farmers with poor hogs receive all the deductions to which their grade entitles them, their hogs will not get full returns. There is no magic in it—if one man receives more than the market value of his hogs, another one gets less. Consequently, the producer of good hogs has a very personal interest in seeing that the Grading Regulations are effective in his community so that all hogs will bring exactly what they are worth—no more and no less.

Some good lots of hogs for the week ending August 13th, and for the week ending August 20th, 1938, are as follows:

| Name and Shipping Station: | No. of Hogs | GRADE A | GRADE B | C Premium |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| H. Porter, Tweed | 7 | 5 | 2 | $5.00 |
| D. Benson, Foxboro | 6 | 4 | 2 | 4.00 |
| F. Allen, Belleville | 5 | 3 | 2 | 3.00 |
| E. Patrick, Frankford | 4 | 3 | 1 | 3.00 |
| G. McMaster, Wooler | 4 | 2 | 2 | 2.00 |

Little Change in Produce Prices

Toronto, Aug 23.—Little change occurred in prices on the local produce market yesterday, although cheese was firm, with the strongest quotations reported on the Ontario cheese boards over the week-end.

The butter market opened the week quiet. Traders were not showing any particular desire of purchasing in any large volume, but fresh receipts were not excessive and no accumulation was in evidence. While reports are still vague, it is understood by local sources that 4,500 boxes of Western butter are to be shipped from Montreal to the United Kingdom, some of which are already sold and the rest for consignment. Meanwhile, the English market has eased off to 130 shillings for New Zealand butter, with present supplies in Great Britain said to be sufficient for domestic needs. Yesterday, Ontario solids were quoted at 23c to 23 1-4c for No. 1 grades, 22 1-4c to 22¾c for 36 score and 21 1-2c to 21 3-4c for 37 score. Prints moved at 24¼c to 26c for top grades and 23 3-4c to 24 1-4c for 38 score.

Fresh receipts continued to arrive in limited quantities on the egg market, and fair demand effected a ready clearance at the prices quoted. Cracks and shipments were selling at 28½c to 29c for grade A-large, 27½c to 28c for medium, 23c for B's and 20 1-2c to 21c for C grades. Grade C eggs were still dragging.

Sales were light on the wholesale cheese market. New, large packed fined were offered at 14c to 14 1-4c, twins at 14 1-4c to 14½c and triplets at 14 1-2c to 14 3-4c. The average price paid to shippers f.o.b. country points strengthened in sympathy with the higher boards to the range of 13¼c to 13 3-4c for new, large paraffined and 13 3-4c to 14c for triplets.

Produce Quiet at Montreal

Montreal, Aug. 23 (CP).— Open produce markets remained quiet today, with prices showing no inclination to change, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports.

Cheese sold at 14c to 14 1-8c a pound for Ontario white, 14 1-4c for Ontario colored, 13 7-8c for Quebec white and 14c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 307 boxes, of which all are for export.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 25½c a dozen for A-large, 25c for A-medium, 24c for B and 21c to 21½c for C. Receipts: 725 cases.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

A sustained market rise cannot materialize until such time as business has definitely proven that it is on the upgrade. As yet, a considerable amount of the optimism prevalent is based on expectations of a good crop which should materially help every line of business. Consequently the betterment will not be felt as much here as the Western farmer has been able to dispose of his crop, which should be in the latter part of the Fall.

The market has always discounted improvement a few months ahead, which affords some why so many quarters have taken an optimistic view of the immediate market prospects. It is pointed out that if stocks are purchased on weakness and held for a speculative period, good profits should accrue. In the meantime, there is still a pledging of funds seeking good investment outlets.

The announcement that production in the Turner Valley had again been increased to 51 per cent from 46 per cent, due to an increased demand for oil from the Valley is quite bullish. Activity in the Turner Valley conditions undoubted and indications are that within a comparatively short time the potential production of the Turner Valley will double, in other words, will increase from present output of over 50,000 barrels to around 100,000 barrels daily. These figures, of course, do not take into consideration the matter of prorration.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 23.—(AP)—The stock market took a rallying cue from motor and tire company shares today and leaders added up fractions to a point or more.

Activity broadened considerably over yesterday's dull session at the openings. Transfers were about 1,000,000 shares, substantially above the final hour, but quotations were around the best of the day.

A number of issues made the year or longer were in evidence and gains ranged from fractions

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—Base metals withstood softening tendencies on Wall Street today. Exchange today but gold issues sought bids on levels in a narrow list. Industrial list was mixed with oils, utilities and steels showing soft-ened strength, western oils were irregularly lower. Transfer approximated 200,000 shares.

Through most of the day trading actions totalled only 171,000 shares. With no outstanding news, the market plodded along and price changes were light. The industrial list was thin with Nickel about the most active issue. It improved 1-2 at 40 7-8, British American and Imperial Oil also were stronger.

Base metals held firm in the face of generally lower London prices. Smelters and Sherritt kept to the upside while Noranda held steady. Shoco and Powell made gains among the golds, chalked up slight advances.

C. A. BONISTEEL SERVES 43 YRS. WITH THE C. N. R.

Completes Service With Last Run From Brockville Monday

WELCOMED HERE

Passengers and spectators raised their eyes at the North Canadian National Railway station yesterday afternoon, when they saw the engineer of a fast passenger train, that had just come to a stop, step down from his cab holding a beautiful bouquet of flowers. They stared when a party of nearly fifty C.N.R. employees surrounded the smiling giver of the flowers, "Iron Horse" and to the stirring music of Joe Ingram's bagpipes, escorted him to waiting automobiles and whisked him away on a parade through city streets to his home.

For when the engine whistled to a stop shortly after two o'clock it marked the end of forty-one years continuous service with the C.N.R. for Colonel A. Bonisteel, 23 Chatham Street, one of the road's most popular engineers. For thirty-seven years he steadily hand has guided passenger trains of the company. And it is his proud boast, that not once during that time has there been a charge in the engineer of the "Iron Horses".

His Last Run

Leaving Brockville on his last run yesterday, Mr. Bonisteel was surrounded by Brockville employees of the road, who showered him with congratulations and wishes for enjoyment of a well-earned rest, while the ladies presented him with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Met at the station by his Belleville colleagues, he was taken to his home, where over fifty enjoyed a "farewell" party.

Mr. Bonisteel was born in Sidney Township sixty-five years ago yesterday, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bonisteel. When twenty-four years old he entered the employ of the railway as a wiper in the shops. In 1901, he was thrilled at his first appointment as an engineer. From that time he has given meritorious service to the company with which he started his career.

In Good Condition

"I am in the pink of condition," he told the Ontario Intelligencer when interviewed this morning. "I have worked hard all my life, and am now going to take a rest. I don't mean that I am going to live a life of idleness, for there is plenty I can do."

An ardent fisherman, Mr. Bonisteel feels that now he can indulge in his favorite sport to his heart's content. "I am going out to get the big ones, for I will have all the has lived here all his life and has no intention of leaving his native city, he said.

Veteran Dairyman Soon to Retire

Regret is expressed by dairymen and cheesemakers of this section, as well as elsewhere throughout the Province over the expected announcement soon of the retirement of Mr. Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying for Ontario, and veteran in the service or dairying in the province.

Through no official announcement has been made as yet, Mr. Barr is expected to be succeeded by Lawrence Lakner. His appointment, it is understood will be made official following the next meeting of the Ontario Cabinet. The retirement of Mr. Barr has been pending for some time since he has reached retiring age.

The new director of dairying is a native of Ontario and has been connected with the Ontario Dairying branch for the past twenty years. He was graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College with the class of 1916, and had previous experience in dairying at his father's creamery in Chesley.

For some years he had been creamery instructor in the Western policy or "numbers game" started

Came From Games

"From the numbers game," Weinberg answered.

The witness, a brother of the slain "Dutch" Weinberg who reputedly lies at the bottom of the East river in a barrel of cement, told of meeting "the Dutchman" in 1929 and becoming involved in the numbers-game racket.

Weinberg, a one-time petty gambler, taxi driver, race-track bookmaker and cigar store operator, testified in a poker face. It was Weinberg's second appearance as a state witness. Last week he testified he attended a meeting at which time, 81-year-old power in New York politics for the past quarter century, accepted a $1,000 tribute for supplying political "protection" to the policy racket.

Former district attorney Dewey began, Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora announced that all testimony by "big Joe" Ison, alias "spasm," relating to his alleged "rat" by Schultz mobsters was stricken from the record.

Ison, a West Indies Negro and former policy "banker" in Harlem, had testified that in 1931 he was forced into an automobile by "Bo" Weinberg and "Abe the Killer" Reles, who drove him to death

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Meteorologist

Soaring! Soaring like a bird is just as possible for the skilful operator of the motorless plane as it is for the bird. Both the aviator and the bird must depend, if they soar, upon upward currents of air, or winds which blow upwards. These are found (1) on windy days in a hilly country, where the air is forced upwards on windward slopes; (2) under cumulus clouds (those big white ones) especially when they begin to form; and (3) where a light air mass blows over a heavier and therefore a denser one.

Little Entente-Hungary Agreement Hailed as Important Event of Year

London, Aug. 24 (CP) — The British press today hailed the agreement between Hungary and the Little Entente — Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania — as one of the most important and satisfying events of a year marked by continuous anxiety in Europe.

Emphasis was placed on the fact Hungary primarily has been placed on an equal footing with the three members of the Entente, which was retained originally for defense against Hungary.

The Times (independent) said the communique issued at Bled, Yugoslavia, last night on the new understanding with Hungary more than offset the state visit of Admiral Nicolas Horthy, Regent to Hungary, to Germany.

"German power and influence are growing in Hungary and the Reich is Hungary's most important customer buying over one-fifth of her exports and three-quarters of her agricultural products," the Times said.

"Hungarian statesmen perforce admire the might and ruthless energy of their new neighbor and many of her citizens have been drawn into sympathy with the land progress and anti-Semitic performances of National Socialism.

"That Hungary is not, however, as some commentators imagine, a vassal state of Germany is demonstrated by the harsh treatment which has been meted out to Nazi parties in Hungary and by the German discomfort which has been evident in halting efforts over the mass frozen credits that are piling up at Budapest. Without doubt she will among the questions to be discussed during the visit which, as the presence of the Hungarian Prime Minister and Foreign Minister shows, is not merely ceremony."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) predicted the pact would react favorably on the negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and that country's Sudeten German minority. "The enlargement of the Little Entente can be counted among the influences in Europe that make for peace," it declared.

"TURNED HEAT ON"

Name of Guard Who Turned on Heat Secured by Officials

Philadelphia, Aug. 24—(AP)— A picture of death among convicts driven "stark mad" by steam heat in an "air-tight cell" has been drawn today by two officials investigating the deaths of four hunger-striking prisoners of the Philadelphia county prison.

Director Charles Hersch said autopsies disclosed that the four—described by Warden B. Mills as "agitators" in a strike of 600 prisoners —died of suffocation in punishment cells where their nude, battered bodies were found early Monday.

The conclusion was reached by the Philadelphia Record in a copyright story as saying the four, along with some 20 other prisoners, were placed in the cells Sunday night, that the windows were sealed, and steam

Paris, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Japanese Embassy said today the Tokyo foreign office was "investigating reports" that France had made a loan to China in exchange for a lease on the strategic island of Hainan, dead French Indo-China.

Embassy officials also said work had been under way for several months on a narrow-gauge railway between Nanning, Kwangsi Province, and the Indo-China frontier at Nancham with Chinese labor and French equipment, engineers and money.

GUNMEN INVADE HEADQUARTERS, FIRE FIVE SHOTS

Condition of J. S. Moffat is Reported Critical

2ND OFFICIAL SHOT

Visits to Tomb of Rachel Banned by British Authorities

Jerusalem, Aug. 24 (AP)—J. S. Moffat, British Assistant District Commissioner at Jenin, was seriously wounded today when two gunmen, later identified as Arabs, invaded British district administrative headquarters there.

The attackers fired five shots point blank at Moffat who was rushed to hospital at Haifa where he was given a blood transfusion. Hospital authorities stated his condition was critical.

He was the second British official of the same rank to be shot during the past year as a result of the strife between Jews and Arabs in Palestine.

Previous Shooting in 1937.

The other was Lewis Yelland Andrews, killed at Nazareth in September 1937.

Before the incident at Jenin eight gunmen raided the police station at Lydda and stole rifles and ammunition after overpowering policemen on duty.

Airplanes and troops with blood-hounds hunted the raiders.

It was stated officially fourteen Arabs were killed in an engagement with British troops last night near Kefr Kenna, identified by tradition as the village where Jesus lived and where Christ turned water into wine. Because of the troubled situation, authorities banned visits to the white-domed tomb of Rachel, revered as all by Jews, Moslems and Christians.

JUDGE DEROCHE PRESENTS REPORT AT PETERBOROUGH

Apparent Lack of System in Disposing of Seized Liquor Shown

POLICE BALL INCIDENT

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 24—(CP) —Judge G. E. Deroche of Belleville, Ont., today presented a report on the findings of a commission which inquired into activities of the Peterborough police department. The report said there appeared to be a lack of system in disposing of confiscated liquor as required by the Liquor Control Act.

The report, made to city council, said it was a matter for the discretion of the Peterborough Police Commission whether any disciplinary action should be taken concerning the policemen's ball in October, 1936, in which members of the force probably left themselves open to prosecution for an illegal act in dispensing beer in a house rented for the ball.

Wheeler's Charges

The inquiry followed charges made by Joseph Wheeler, a former constable. The report stressed most of the charges made by Wheeler concerning disposal of confiscated beer and liquor. The report said there was a lack of adequate accommodation at the police station for the ordinary duties of the force.

Judge Deroche expressed hope that the police commission would make it known to Police Chief Samuel Newhall and members of the force that repetition of "the situation which arose at the ball in 1936 would entail some punishment, possibly dismissal.

Members of Force Complimented

Judge Deroche, who headed the commission hearing into the charges by Wheeler, made praiseful comments on Chief Newhall and members of the force and complimented members of the force, and paid tribute to Chief Newhall.

"While the commission has no personal particulars regarding matters of discipline within the force, it is evidently a very clever and a very kindly chief of police," the Judge said.

14 TO 17 PERSONS BELIEVED KILLED AS PLANE CHASED

Japanese Airplanes Force Passenger Plane Down

OCCUPANTS FIRED ON

Hong Kong, Aug. 24—(AP)— The pilot of a Chinese airliner reported today Japanese warplanes had forced him to set the plane down near Canton and then machine-gunned it, killing or wounding at least 14 of the 17 persons aboard.

H. K. Woods, of Hays, Kansas, the pilot, reached Macao unhurt. All others on the plane were Chinese. The forced landing was made on a small river between Canton and Macao, Portuguese colony 50 miles to the south.

Woods sent his message to the China National Aviation Corporation, owners of the plane.

"Landed on river okay. Japanese machine-gunned us. Killing wounding 13 passengers, also copilot and steward. Radio operator, Loh, one passenger and myself survived. Other 14 unaccounted for. Sinking fast on river."

Other reports said C. N. Lou, the Chinese passenger who reached Macao with Woods, also had a bullet wound and was rushed to a hospital for an operation.

Fled For Safety

Earlier it was reported some of the passengers had disappeared when they fled for safety in the fields.

The airliner encountered the Japanese planes southwest of Canton and was flying from the British colony of Hong Kong to Wuchow, in Kwangsi Province, enroute to Chungking, present seat of civilian branches of the Chinese government.

Officials of the C.N.A.C. said the Guelph, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP)—A seven-year-old buck, the leader of a herd of deer on the farm of Judson Lake, near Ospringe, Lake, is causing so much trouble that game and fisheries department officials have been approached. The buck has gored one of Lake's cows, has been chasing his calves, and causing other damage. Lake has cared for and fed the deer for some time. He has protected the herd, and watched it grow over a period of two or three years. He is afraid that the buck's misbehavior might result in the departure of the herd.

TIMING DEVICE FAILS TO WORK ON RETURN TRIP

Driver Explains Morning Caused Electric Eye Beam to Fail

HUNDRED IN VAIN

Outward Mile Registered at 317.74 Miles Per Hour

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 24—(AP)—Captain George E. T. Eyston pounded his big automobile through the measured mile at 347.155 miles per hour today, the fastest ever attained by man on land, but failure of an electric eye timing device on the return journey cost the Englishman of a new record.

Eyston drove his seven-ton "Thunderbolt" at lightning clip down the 13-mile salt flats and back again for the two runs necessary to establish an official mark.

The eye apparatus, which functioned perfectly on the first run, failed to register on the second just as Eyston roared into the measured mile in an effort to better the mark of 311.42 miles per hour he established here last year.

Run Not in Vain

Eyston's time for the outward mile was 10.37 seconds, for about his fastest previous single run, 11.33 seconds at 317.74 miles per hour.

Eyston narrowly avoided an accident as he drove the second time when the 13 mile road, a specialor car which moved onto the track apparently caused the speed driver to swerve his big machine suddenly about three miles after he had covered the measured mile.

Instead of following the slight curve in the track, Eyston drove straight on toward the embankments. Apparently he did not lose control even momentarily, however.

Officials said Eyston travelled over the return course at about the outward spring, possibly approximating the 300 mile per hour or nearly six miles a minute, but failure of the timing device frustrated them.

"I don't feel the run was at all in vain," Eyston said. "The new Thunderbolt ran perfectly. I'll run again just as soon as the timing eye is fixed."

Eyston explained that the bright morning sun caused the electric eye beam to fail. It clicks when the sun's shadow passes through the beam.

Failed to Cut Beam

Because of light refraction from the blazing white salt, "Thunderbolt" failed to cut the beam, Eyston said.

Eyston said he felt his speed on the return run was 'approximately' the same as on the first run.

Eyston disagreed, however, saying the retired British army captain had lost considerable speed.

Another Briton, John Cobb of London, is expected in Utah soon to better his compatriot's mark.

Cobb, with a shark-like car gushing only 1000 pounds— half the weight of Eyston's—has next week the grinding course all to himself, sending another run.

Officials said the electric eye trap failure could be overcome by shading it.

FRANK M. HAWKS SPEED PILOT IS KILLED IN PLANE

New York Sportsman Also Succumbs When Plane Crashes

HOLDS MANY RECORDS

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 24—(CP)— Death today removed from the role of aviation's great the name of Commander Frank Monroe Hawks, internationally-famed speed-plane and glider pilot who won one of the early pages of Canada's aerial history.

The 41-year-old flier, who only a year ago turned from speed flying to "take it easy," died after being taken from the flaming plane in which he and his companion crashed at the end of a brief trial flight last night.

The companion, J. Hazard Campbell, New York sportsman, also was killed when the small plane ran into a high-tension wire near a pole field a few miles from Buffalo and burst into flames.

Hawks, whose 214 point-to-point speed records included the first transcontinental non-stop flight in Canada, set in 1929 between Toronto Kingston, Ont., carried to his death a four leaf clover a friend had given him for "good luck" a few minutes before his takeoff.

The flier's death brought sadness to Canadian airmen as well as to American flyers who recalled today his prediction a few years ago: "I expect to die in an airplane."

Friends, who had watched the take-off from the small field, heard the plane crash behind a clump of trees. They saw a flash as flames shot high in the air.

They pulled Hawks from the wreckage of the blazing ship and dragged Campbell from beneath a crumpled wing.

Hawks was flying a small Cessna Airear plane designed for private flying.

Edmund P. Rogers, from whose estate Hawks and Campbell took off, described the crash:

HOUSES LEVELLED BY TORNADO AT FORT WILLIAM

Two Families Lucky to Escape When Homes Demolished

COVERS 10 TOWNSHIPS

Port William, Ont., Aug. 24—(CP) —Residents of the Thunder Bay district south and west of Fort William were busy today with clearing away the first tornado in the history of the area swept three houses and several barns to the ground, levelled telegraph and telephone poles and terrified communications Monday night.

Two families—those of Urho Pillo and Matt Allanen—were homeless, but considered themselves lucky to escape with their lives intact. Injury, the brief but fierce storm levelled their homes and barns, rolled an automobile over five times, killed cattle and carried an iron bedstead from a house to a hay yards from the Pillo home.

The tornado struck most heavily in the Whitefish River district, about 20 miles south of Fort William but seemed to touch Lake Superior itself out across the international boundary.

Clothing of Mrs. Pillo and her daughter was picked up six miles east of the Pillo farm, while a corner of the from house in which they lived was the only recognizable took refuge was the only part that was not flattened.

Building Is Levelled

Another two-storey building was levelled at Rosslyn, a mining town that was unoccupied at the time. Other buildings in the district were damaged and shaken, some being moved from their foundations.

Woman Obsessed With Idea of Sin Chops Off Hand, Gouges Out Eye

Merced, Calif., Aug. 24.—(AP)— Her self-inflicted wounds healed with the idea she had sinned, chopped off her left hand and gouged out her right eye was told court in jail cell here today by Woodrow Hall, 30-year-old Texas cotton picker.

District Attorney F. S. Silveria quoted Harwell as saying he and his two young step-sons knelt in prayer yesterday afternoon in their room cabin while his 26-year-old wife read from the Bible.

She read Matthew 18:8,9:

"And if thy hand or thy eye or thy foot offend thee, cut them, and cut it off, and cast it from thee, it is good for thee to enter into life maimed or halt, rather than giving two hands or two feet to be cast into the eternal fire."

"And if thine eye causeth thee to stumble, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is good for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eye to be cast into hell fire."

Mrs. Harwell rose from prayer, her husband related, saying her left hand was "dead" and that she wished forgiveness for her sins.

She went into the cabin, Harwell said, and gouged out her eye with a pair of scissors. Then she picked up a butcher knife, severed her pipe and hacked it off with an axe Harwell said. He added that at three times before she severed the offending hand.

The cotton picker said his wife came back into the cabin "apparently without pain." He dusted her wrist and two hours later summoned officials to the cabin. At Merey Hospital doctors said the woman was in good condition and would survive.

Silveria said the husband was held for questioning because authorities did not believe it was self-inflicted.

WAR-TIME FRIEND, JENNY MORRIS, SHOWN SIGHTS IN CAPITAL

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—(CP)—Veterans of the princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry today proudly showed Jenny Morris, their war-time friend and counsellor, the sights of their capital. Tonight they will be guest at a dinner given by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and attended by Lord Stanley, British Secretary for the Dominions.

Miss Morris, who presided with her mother over 24 Bedford Street, London, England, where hundreds of Canadian soldiers made their home while on leave, arrived in Ottawa last night and was royally received in the home town of Princess Pat Regiment.

On Thursday she will leave Ottawa for Toronto and later Montreal, to Vancouver and then south of the Patricia veterans who cherish the memory of her kindness during the war years.

She was presented with a key city last night by Mayor Stanley Lewis at an enthusiastic reception and also given the honorary title of honorary life membership in the Canadian Legion.

Major-General L. R. LaPierre, Legion and Deputy Minister of National Defence, in presenting the key said that veterans of the Great War remembered only the things that were good and that was the reason they spanned the 20 years since the war and found Miss Morris' kindliness and hospitality as

PLEA FOR UNITY EXPRESSED BY HON. EARL ROWE

Leader in Ontario Gives Reason For His Retirement

LATE CONVENTION

Toronto, Aug. 24.—(CP)—A purge of Communists in the Ontario party was urged by Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservating Leader yesterday as he announced his intention of his retirement from that post.

Considerable pressure was being brought to bear on him to stand again for the leadership when the convention is held, he said, but he insisted his decision to retire would not be altered. As soon as a new leader was named by the convention, he would be out.

"Disloyalty to our party" was the chief reason for his decision to retire, Mr. Rowe said.

"The disloyalty to our party that was reflected at the difficult interest of some of those closely associated with our party organization in the last election, but particularly the disloyalty to our party itself" were his reasons for retirement, he said.

Mr. Rowe said he decided to retire when it was made clear to him that if the party hoped to be successful at the polls it had to have a leader, not one of the old, whole-hearted support of both the rank and file and leaders of the party.

Pleads For Unity

The essential thing was that the Conservative party in Ontario unite its forces, he said.

He endorsed the attitude of the Provincial Association Executive yesterday that, if it was too late for the holding of a representative convention,

PIGEON BELIEVED OF CARRIER VARIETY

Distinguished by a red band on one leg and a white one on the other, a pigeon, believed to be of the carrier variety, has been noticed in the vicinity at the rear of 213½ Front street for the past ten days.

State-ogized, the pigeon, which is full-grown, appears to be weak in one wing, but in spite of this foils any attempt to catch it, according to Mr. Alfred Legault, who has been feeding the bird for the past ten days.

The letter "S" is plainly visible on one of the leg bands, Mr. Legault stated, but inability to catch or even approach the bird prevents the deciphering of letters and figures appearant on the other band.

The bird may be one of the many loosed here some time ago by a Toronto, Pigeon Club, it is thought.

WORK-SEEKERS TREK TO EAST

Hope to Find Work as Canaller at King-ston

A new wave of transitory hopefuls has been passing through the city during the past several days. Unshaven, patch-carrying hitch hikers who have been making the city a brief stop over in their search for purposeful hike, tarrying but a short while to solicit the odd dime or nickel for coffee and doughnuts, the men are on their way to Kingston where they hope to obtain work on canallers tied up at the docks there, and rumored to be almost ready to slip through the locks and move out to take ports to transfer cargoes of grain!

At about this time of the year sailors have formerly congregated at the head of the lakes where grain are transfer points for grain cargoes. It was explained by one part time lakes sailor who visited Belleville yesterday. This season Kingston is being favored due to the many boats which are tied up there. The present year has been a poor one for the fraternity, it was reported. The only trade was in grain earlier in the season many lake boats have tied up, and crews have been laid off. But a few have work altogether has been provided.

JUDGE DEROCHE

Judge Deroche considered that Chief Newhall might have laid a charge of selling, or at least of keeping for sale, against Max Vincent of Peterborough. Vincent was charged with illegally keeping for sale liquor after 23 bottles of beer were seized at his home.

Officers' Report Cited

Judge Deroche quoted an officer's report to the effect that in which the Constable said he saw a man in the yard of Vincent's home Vincent coming to watery and obtain three bottles of beer. The buyer was arrested and made a statement as to what he paid for the beer."

No charge will be convicted on the greater offence, incurring the greater punishment, the sooner he is likely to be convicted of the offence," said Judge Deroche.

Fine, the original charge was given, and still feel, that it is not often as strong a set of circumstances can be obtained in order to lay a charge of selling or keeping for sale as is found in this report. I would see this an error in judgment on the part of the chief".

Judge's Comment

At another time on March 26, 1937, Constable Wheeler and Sergt. Thompson arrested two men for having three bottles of beer which they obtained from Mrs. Max Vincent. The beer was confiscated and Mrs. Vincent arrested.

"After his wife's arrest, Max Vincent came to the police station and offered to plead guilty to having liquor in his possession if his wife was liberated" Judge Deroche wrote in his report. "Then I find in the investigation by the police force under the date of March 27, 1937. "11:50 a.m.—Mrs. Vincent liberated on orders from the Chief Constable" and signed by Inspector Reid."

Judge Deroche called this "very irregular" and something which should not have been done "under the circumstances." He believed the evidence sufficient to charge Vincent with selling, and also to charge Max Vincent with having for sale.

WRECK OF BOAT IS A PROBLEM

Means Being Devised to Remove Wreck of Grace M. Filer

Beached many years ago in twelve feet of water in the Bay opposite the present location of the civic bathing beach, the old wreck, Grace M. Filer, still presents a baffling problem to navigation in the Bay of Quinte.

Her oaken bones sturdy as ever in spite of long immersion in the water, have so far defied dynamite and other methods of displacement and are again being studied by Department of Marine officials attempting to find the best way for their removal.

Yesterday the Government steamer Grenville again made a call to the bay and visited the scene. A Mr. Poland, diver employed by the Department, descended and made a careful investigation of the location. It was discovered that one of the bars it was impossible to bring the steamer into position to attempt towing the wreck away in sections. A second shoal or bar between shore and the wreck precluded the possibility of the setting up of a capstan or winch on land with which to haul the wreck to shore. Dynamite would only shatter it into sections, it is believed.

As yet, it is reported, no definite arrangement has been made for the removal of the obstruction to navigation, but it is stated the matter is being studied. Application for its removal had been made some time ago by officials of the Quinte Bay Boats Association, stated by Mr. C. A. Cameron, M.P., of this city.

Exploding with the shattering detonation of a heavy bomb, a sudden electrical discharge which occurred over the western section of the city late yesterday afternoon, unpreasaged by any alarm or advance warning, rattled dishes in west hill homes and formed a corona on electrical wires in that vicinity.

A reporter of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer seated at his roomer desk in the editorial office ducked unconsciously as the sudden surge through power lines leading into the office crackled in blue flame in the fuse box just above his head.

The sudden bolt from a sky which carried but a few dark clouds was followed by a sudden but brief deluge of rain. Seated on a bench on Victoria Park, a woman grabbed his possessions and made a hurried scamper to cover.

No damage to system was reported by the Public Utilities office.

For selling immersion water heaters which have not the approval of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario, a man at Perth was fined ten dollars and costs when he appeared in court up all the heaters that he had sold.

This is of special interest as it was stated this week by an inspector of the inspection department of the Hydro that in Belleville and districts of this part of the province, there had been a number of heaters installed and in use, though they do not bear the approval of the Commission.

From rules and regulations respecting electrical equipment, the rules distributed by Hydro are:

MOST THRESHING IS COMPLETED

Apples, peaches, pumpkins and watermelons have ripened on trees and vines, but the bulk of the larger part of it, is about over in the section, and fall plowing on some farms has been started. This agriculturgi has picked his crops and reaped his harvest weeks ahead of time this year, a condition which has not been experienced for years past. All of which has given rise to considerable speculation on the part of many rural residents—as to whether to make his appearance this season also ahead of time?

GRENVILLE PAYS VISIT TO PORT

Capt. M. Barry of Prescott Tells of Work in Late Autumn

One of the oldest and most experienced navigators on the Great Lakes, Captain M. Barry of Prescott, Master of the Government steamer Grenville, was again in local port yesterday surveying the site of the old wreck of the Grace M. Filer in the bay just off the civic bathing beach location east of the city.

Under custodian of navigation aids from Coleau Landing to the head of Lake Ontario, Captain Barry and his picked crew of the staunch Grenville are charged with the care/of 180 lights over the course. These include lightouses, buoys and range lights. Added to these are 116 spar buoys or "sticks" marking dangerous waters or shoals.

The Grenville, starts her work in the rough waters of late autumn and gathers in all these aids navigation aid, it is hard and perilous work. Lighthouse keepers are brought in for the season from their lonely isolation. Red buoys are hauled onto the decks with her hoisting gear and s/s added to the heavy iron buoys which are also heaped forward. Through it all is the uncertainty that heavy seas during the season have shifted many of the markers from their location. All must be recharted again in the spring.

One of the troubles with the blinker lights each year come from the flies which crawl into the metal pipes which feed the acetylene gas to the flame. Screens now placed over the pipes end this trouble. The old style buoys have been replaced by new ones, which carry sufficient gas for a year. All the buoys which formerly had white or red lights have now of the blinker type, most readily distinguishable at a distance than the steady light.

Some of the markers it is recalled, are ancient. Some come comparatively new on the lakes. One of the most dangerous spots in Ontario, the Main Duck had no light until 1914. As early as 1828 a light was placed on the Duck. But in 1848 a range light was set on Colborne Island and in 1902 the first gas buoys were laid.

One of the finest equipped boats in the service, the Grenville was built by the Dominion Government in 1915 for service on the Great Lakes. She looked after navigation aids in Georgian Bay until 1931. Some years ago she was brought into Lake Ontario and has since proved her worth as this risky job of charting shoals and setting buoys for sailors and their craft.

Red Cross Field Day At Coe Hill a Success

Though some of the sports and parades were cancelled, a heavy downpour of rain failed to halt the annual Red Cross field day held at Coe Hill. Races, parades, horseshoe pitching and baseball games were held over due to the wetness of the day but a large crowd turned out in spite of the condition to support the organization in its regular drive for funds. Dr. A. Caldwell of Toronto, one of the old members of the day, gave an outline of the great work carried on by Ontario's 96 affiliated branches of the Red Cross and paid tribute to the work of the Coe Hill branch. Other speakers were Rork Perrygon, M.P., Hastings-Peterborough; R. D. Arnott K.C., M.P.P. and Geo. Reid, Belleville.

A closely contested ball game between the Coe Hill and Eldorado ended with the latter victorious in a 6-4 score.

FRANK M. HAWKS

Campbell Climbed In

"Commander Hawks landed on our field about 5 p.m. and offered to take myself or any of our guests for a ride. Campbell climbed in first.

"The plane lifted in the air and Hawks lifted it 50 feet above the ground to enable it to pass between two tall trees. As he passed out of sight it looked as though he had not been able to gain sufficient altitude and was trying to bring the plane down.

"Just as the plane disappeared we heard a loud crash and a flash of flame shot up behind the trees. We knew he had struck the electric wires and telephone poles.

"We ran to the plane and found Hawks inside the burning machine on the seat. His clothes were on fire so we stripped him and pulled him away."

Rogers said Campbell was thrown from the plane and pinned under a crumpled and blazing wing.

Ripped Down Lines

The crash had ripped down all telephone and light wires serving the community and Rogers and his friends had to go several miles to summon aid.

M. H. Carlin, a transport pilot of New York City, had flown to Buffalo with Hawks, in their small plane.

"He said he'd rather fly one of these than any other plane," Carlin said. "He had given up all other pilot ratings but the one he used on the aircar."

Hawks was vice president in charge of sales for the Gwinn Aircar Corporation.

Joseph M. Gwinn, president, said Hawks had been making demonstration flights for the company during the past year.

Hawks established himself as a great speed pilot about ten years ago, when he set a record for non-stop flight from Los Angeles to New York.

Blazed Trail of Records

Then in five years he blazed a trail of records across the United States and Europe, that gave him claim to no less than 216 point-to-point records.

A love for aviation led him to far corners of the world, promoting flying.

He was an accomplished glider pilot, but was never happier than when at the controls of a speedy ship.

Hawks lived in Redding, Conn., and had planned to return home last night. His wife was notified of the accident and left Redding immediately for Buffalo.

Hawks retired from speed flying a years ago, when he accepted the post with the Gwinn Corporation. His announcement followed a crack up at Newark, N.J., shortly after he had made a record-equaling flight from Miami.

At the time he explained, "I've had my day. I passed the 40-year mark the other day and I've decided to take it easy now."

Held Glider Marks

Besides his speed records, he had a number of glider marks to his credit, towed by a plane, he once piloted a glider from the west coast to New York.

Fast airplanes, he once said, promoted the primary value of aviation—speed; gliders and gliding, he explained, contained all the fundamentals of flight and provided all the necessary stimulus for flying as a profession or sport.

He said he made his coast-to-coast glider flight to focus attention on gliding as a logical first step for training airmen.

Campbell was a director in the Gwinn Corporation.

Hawks was born in Marshalltown, Ia., the son of Charles Monroe and Ida Mae Hawks. As a boy in Long Beach, Calif., he used a rope to reach the airways. He posed as a newspaper reporter, offering publicity to get a ride with a barnstorming flier.

CANADIAN DERBY ADVOCATED BY KIWANIS SPEAKER

Cleo B. Colling Believes it Would Bring Revenue to City

SPEAKS ON AKRON

A plea that arrangements be made to hold a Canadian Soap Box Derby under the sponsorship of the General Motors of Canada in this city, was made by Cleo B. Colling, president of the Kinsmen Club, and chief man in staging the derby under the Kinsmen Club in this city at the Kiwanis luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen Hotel. Mr. Colling gave a detailed account of his trip with other members of the Kinsmen Club to Akron, Ohio, where Bobby Wilson made such a creditable showing in the International race at that point. The speaker was introduced by George Lee and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by James Cowan.

Eddie Logan presided at the luncheon but he failed to keep decorum, especially during the introductions and had to pay a fine and it is just doubtful if President Albert Royston will call on him again. The boys were bound to sing songs not asked for by the song leader and even the appointment of several song leaders did not bring the desired results. George Forhan was booster for the day but he was called out of town and the prizes left by distribution were won by Eddie Shapiro and Jack McIntosh. George Griffin, secretary of the Club, gave an account of the recent campaign, stating that about $370 would be the net result but the secretary reminded the members for not working harder, believing a better showing could have been made. Frank Domenico chairman of the committee pleaded for greater co-operation in campaigns put on by the members to raise funds and notified the members there would have to be more co-operation if he was chairman of the next carnival.

Cleo Colling, a native of this city, has made a study of soap box racing and is an authority on how meets should be conducted. He told his listeners of the large crowd that attended at Akron and the publicity and revenue the city derived by the holding of the derby in that city and believed the same thing was possible in Belleville if proper arrangements could be made. He believed a Canadian Derby would go over and attract probably 50,000 to this city on the day of the race. The speaker explained how the cars were constructed and had on exhibition a pair of wheels with extra bearings, showing exactly how cars were made to attain high speed. He also detailed the track at Akron and the accommodation provided and discussed many incidents prior to and after the race. He praised Cleveland as a vacation city and also the Kiwanis Club in this city for the help that had been afforded the Kinsmen in their enterprises and stated the Kinsmen were ready when called upon to assist in any way any project sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

FIRE WATER FOR OLD DOBBIN

Old Dobbin here, couldn't wait for his driver to catch up with a drinking trough so quenched his enormous thirst from an open fire hydrant.

Drolet Family History Tells Of Dynamite's Part in Lives

Little Current, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP) —The Drolet family here is "kind of afraid of dynamite"—two have been killed and two escaped in explosions in the last few years.

Dick Drolet, caretaker of the Dodge lodge here until just before the explosion which took Daniel Dodge's death two weeks ago, mused today that "dynamite seems to play a big part in our lives".

He missed death in 1930 when he went to get his teeth fixed instead of staying on the yacht Playboy when it blew up, killing his substitute. His father escaped that explosion, to be sole survivor. In the recent explosion at the Dodge place, Lloyd Bryant, who replaced Drolet, was injured seriously, he recalled.

Back 30 years one of his father's brothers was killed in an explosion in Vancouver harbor and another brother was killed in a blast in Victoria Harbor, Ont., in which his father escaped uninjured, he said.

ADMITS FAILURE TO BURY BODY

Former Undertaker Says He Intended to Bury Body

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 24.—(CP)—Kenneth Brown of Sudbury, a former undertaker, pleaded guilty today to a charge of failing to bury a body and was remanded until Saturday for sentence. The charge was laid after discovery of the body of a prematurely-born baby girl in a little white coffin at an old, disused barn.

"The only thing I can say is that I intended to bury the body all along," said Brown, recently employed as a truck driver. "I would have done it, but financial circumstances prevented me. I haven't worked all spring and I just could not get the money."

Crown Attorney E. D. Wilkins said it was a last-minute decision on the part of the parents to have the child buried by one of their own religious faith that sent the body of the baby, which died 15 hours after birth January 28, to Brown's undertaking establishment. Brown was arrested late yesterday.

Accused "in Poor Finances

"Brown was in poor financial shape," said the Crown Attorney. "He kept the money paid for the funeral and left the child's body in the coffin in the barn."

Magistrate J. S. McKessock told Brown, who appeared in a sweater and working clothes, that it "is a crime which provides for a jail term." The Magistrate ordered the remand until Saturday to study the case.

At the order of Coroner P. E. LaFlamme, the body of the child will be buried this afternoon.

FIRED 3 SHOTS AT A TAXICAB

Shooting Follows Unsuccessfull Holdup Near Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 24 (CP)—A tall, "wild-looking" gunman of approximately 40 years was sought by city and provincial police today as the thug who fired three shots at a taxicab driven by Geoffrey Reade, 26, Windsor, following an unsuccessful holdup attempt last night. Reade escaped injury, although two of the bullets lodged in the cab.

"The Jones Family in "Borrowing Trouble now playing the Capitol.

Reade told police he picked up the "fare" on a Windsor street and was told to drive to a secluded wood in Sandwich West township where he was forced to stop the car because the road came to a dead end. The passenger, he said, then ordered him from the cab, saying "this is a stickup."

As he left the car, Reade picked up a crank lying on the floor, but, seeing the pistol in the thug's hands, he fled to the woods, the gunman in pursuit. He outdistanced his pursuer, and circled back to the car and started it.

As he drove away, the gunman opened 10 feet to the side of the machine and fired three shots. One bullet entered the hood and lodged in the motor, and another buried itself in the partition behind Reade. The third apparently went wild. The "wild-looking" assailant ran back into the woods, Reade said.

BUSINESS TAX ON LIQUOR STORES

Hepburn Refuses Municipalities to Tax The Property

Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced today that the Ontario Government would agree to the imposition of a business tax on all Liquor Control Board stores throughout the province. He refused, however, to permit taxation of property owned by the Liquor Board.

His announcement was the result of a reminder from Mayor Ralph Day that some time ago the Premier had promised the municipalities the right to tax liquor stores. After consideration of the problem along with Chester Walters, Deputy Provincial Treasurer, today, the Premier said that municipalities would be allowed to impose a business tax only on the Liquor Board.

In the case of Toronto, the Liquor Board Headquarters and the Central Warehouse may also be assessed for business tax.

Mr. Hepburn explained that he could no more allow taxation of property owned by the Liquor Board than he could the Provincial Savings Offices or the Parliament Buildings themselves.

GLENDALE EDITOR DIES

Glendale, Calif., Aug. 24.—(AP)—Winfield Scott Ingram, 55, editor of the Glendale News Press died yesterday. Ingram was editor of the Oakland, Calif., Tribune at the time of the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, in which emergency he acted as editor of the San Francisco Call-Chronicle-Examiner, published in Oakland while the fire raged in San Francisco across the bay.

TRAFFIC INCREASE EXPECTED

Opening of two new bridges between United States and Canada will have traffic reactions which are already being prepared for, and has already opened up discussions as to the means of handling the expected huge development in travel and other forms of highway traffic.

Next year will be one of the banner years of visiting across the border, because new avenues of travel, new sights to see, have excited the interest of the people and they will travel far to satisfy the demands of pleasure and of business.

In four days over eight thousand cars have crossed the new Thousand Island bridge, a fair index of the popularity this bridge will have among motorists as it opens up so many possibilities of travel.

Traffic engineers are considering what requirements the increased traffic will make on cities and highways. Already Toronto and Hamilton are talking of the increase in volume. One newspaper speaks of the enormous developments of the tourist traffic and Toronto is now hearing of a proposal to widen Yonge Street.

If these forecasts are true then Belleville being on the King's Highway No. 2 is sure to feel the increase in travel over the front highway. The expectation is that a large volume of traffic will follow the line in Ontario between Niagara Falls and Ivy Lea.

There is no doubt that the people of Belleville will do some thinking on this new angle of touring.

Next month there is to be opened a new bridge, that at Port Huron, Point Edward and Sarnia, which will pour another stream of traffic into Ontario. A large share of it will feed into the northern highway and through into Belleville.

Clearly this city and other cities and towns on the front will see an amazing development next year with the two new boundary bridges available to handle the new traffic. Next season will probably be one of the heaviest if not the heaviest in traffic ever experienced as new tours will be organized and many thousands of persons will desire to make use of the routes over the two bridges.

The relation of the highways to this new traffic is also of importance. Already complete modernization of the front highway has been made in places in Ontario where most needed in the form of four lanes with boulevard between.

DROWNINGS

Two thirds of the accidents which were reported in Eastern Canada over the week-end were drowning deaths. Summer is the season for bathing and swimming, and unfortunately there are so many deaths in that happy pastime, through getting beyond depth or through such causes as cramps or underflow.

Summer with the heaviest traffic on the roads finds fatalities in motoring in the height of the season fewer than drowning deaths. That is the paramount fact at this period of the year. Motoring is hedged in by natural restrictions of road and place, and also by laws and regulations so that the motorist knows what to do in any given situation. But with the bather it is different. There is great freedom given the bather, one may take a chance in bathing and yet not be subject to any law. There are thousands of places in which bathing is possible. Indeed outside of supervised beaches, the bathing place which carries no risk to many bathers may bring death to other bathers. No law can mark them and subject them to regulation. Bathing places are not like highways.

But there are common sense rules as, not to bathe in a place which is not generally known, not to bathe alone, not to take long swims unless a boat is close in the event of help being required by the swimmer on account of exhaustion or cramps, not to rock a skiff or canoe. In short not to take chances.

These are some rules but another is the chief one—to learn to swim, not learning necessarily in the summer for it is possible to learn to swim in the winter months in such institutions as the Y.M.C.A. Then too one may learn to swim in the summer and there ought to be enough persons able to instruct those who would learn.

Deaths by drownings are saddening in the extreme. The bather is always in a sense in a sort of danger wherever water is, yet drownings seem so unnecessary. The fact that water is dangerous should have a restraining influence but the enjoyment of splashing and wading and swimming is so great, that loss of life seems all the more tragic.

Accordingly the public appreciates and owes a debt to those who like Sir Frederick Banting and his associates seek to save lives of persons, who have been recovered from the water. Discoveries have been BLIND FOLKS ARE SENSITIVE, although some people evidently think a blind person deaf and dumb besides more or less blind. We have a friend, who is so blind that he can barely see shadows passing before him and can not distinguish anything, while his sight is steadily declining into total darkness. He receives twenty dollars a month pension which the government pays to those who can not see. From this he tries to pay rent and support his family, augmented by efforts as a salesman of various articles. He does not mind his affliction as much as the flippant remarks of people who evidently think he cannot hear such as "He can see as well as we can" "He is not blind" and more along the same line. Folks are funny that way, fortunately funny folks like that are few, and those wise ones who make the tremendous discovery that some one is not as blind as they make out to be might better keep that fictitious knowlege to themselves, for if their auspicions were correct that fake blind person might conceal considerable strength and hitting power and just resent the slur enough to hand out a knockout punch or two. However, here is little danger of the eternally suspicious ones exposing themselves to possible bodily injury as long as their lungs and feet are in good operating condition.

'GOOD OLD DAYS' A MYTH

The "good old days"? They never were. That, at least, is the opinion Donald Hough, American author, sets forth in the current Rotarian Magazine.

"Men change, but time goes on," he says. "Texts prove that the apple of today is a better apple than that of 50 years ago. The Weather Bureau finds that over a period of 50 years there has been a change of a small fraction of one degree in the mean temperature of a certain small area in the Southeastern part of the United States, otherwise all is the same as before. The snow lies just as deep, the winters are just as cold, the summers are just as hot—or vice versa.

To this, Hough adds the verdict that the best cooking is found not on the farm of yesterday, but in the restaurant of today. Cooking in America—once enslaved to the frying pan and boiling pot—is one of its newest arts, he indicates. The food is better now, perhaps the appetites aren't.

"Not all the people in America live in three-room kitchenette apartments, most politicians are honest, the average policeman cannot be bought, the country is full of young people who really do know more than their elders, money as a barometer of human worth is losing its grip, the cooking is getting better, people live longer, the whole history of man still can be summed up in one short word: "advance." So says the author.

"The 'good old days'!" he asks. "Which ones?"

"Little homes, little bank accounts, little educations, are all very well in themselves provided they don't drag you with a false sense of having reached the end of the road of achievement instead of merely being at the beginning of it, and provided we don't allow those who have ceased trying, to rob us of the "divine unrest" of which the poet speaks . . . Let us enjoy the things which we have, but let us not be content with them. Let us love every inch of the tiny mental homes which we now exhibit, but at the same time, let us dream of intellectual dwelling places bounded only by infinity and roofed over by the limitless sky. Not contentment but aspiration is the food of the giants of our coming generations," so writes an observer.

"Well, you're no son of mine," the old man warned him, "if you fight with your feet; it's your jacket sleeves that ought to be wide at the bottom."

Mr. Harry Barnum has returned to the city after spending the past two weeks at the boys' camp, Jones' Creek.

Mr. R. V. Ilsley, manager of the Standard Bank, Belleville, and formerly of Belleville, is spending his vacation with friends in the city.

Belleville market prices: Eggs 45 cents per dozen; butter 50 cents per pound; corn 15 cents per dozen; potatoes 35 cents per peck; tomatoes 40 cents per peck; chickens $2.25 per pair; huckleberries 20 cents per quart; oats $1.80 per bushel.

Joe Goyer has accepted the challenge from the Old Timers to play baseball and a game is being arranged. It will be interesting.

The Coleman's Plate baseball team went to Plainfield and played the team of that locality. The result was victory for the former team, the score being 15 to 8. H. Pringle and Jarrold were the battery for the Plate team. A. Horton made a satisfactory umpire.

Things are looking up industrially in Belleville. The Belleville Hardware Company has more orders than it can fill, and the Belleville Rolling Mills people report that today they received orders for two carloads of horseshoes, one from Winnipeg and one from British Columbia.

Mr. George Cornish of this city spent yesterday in Trenton.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. and family have returned from the Sand Banks where they passed most of the summer.

Dr. Edward Howard, formerly of Belleville, now of Buffalo, accompanied by his wife, is visiting his brother-in-law, Mr. S. Haight, caretaker of the government building.

40 YEARS AGO

AUG. 24TH, 1898

A terrific storm struck here at an early hour this morning. Rain fell in torrents and the lightning was almost continuous for over an hour.

The Chess Club organization meeting which was held at the home of Mr. George E. Fax, John Street, last evening was well attended. The following officers were elected: President, Geo. E. Fax; Vice President, J. R. Conow; Sec. Treas., R. Muir; Executive, Sec. Treas., R. Muir; Executive Committee, W. F. Jones, J. W. Dafoe and W. Ormond. Suitable club rooms will be engaged as soon as possible.

Mr. Thomas Davis has accepted a position on the staff at the Call Hall Clothing House.

Two Belleville boys who have been camping in Hickory Grove had an unpleasant experience for two hours early this morning. About two o'clock the tent in which they were sleeping and the major part of their clothing, bedding and supplies were carried away by the wind during the severe storm which was raging at the time. The tent was carried up and dropped in a tree and the other articles were scattered right and left. The boys finally made their way to a neighboring farmhouse where they were made comfortable until daylight.

50 YEARS AGO

Stuart Hooey has lost a terrier pup. He would be glad to have it returned.

The steamer Quinte brought a large excursion party from Napanee to the city today.

Ladies, lay your boating shawls at Hennessey's. A nice stock just arrived.

No fish were taken yesterday, the water was too rough. The party on the yacht Islanite had four fish hooked early in the morning, but they escaped. Over 67 wish were caught in about ten days and twice as many were hooked and lost. This will eclipse the record of any other maskinonge fishing ground in the province.

The final reading of the bay bridge bylaw was given its reading yesterday without opposition by the Ameliasburg Township Council.

A resident on North Front st. has chickens which lay eggs which has been freely signed by College Hill residents and which will be presented to the council on Sept. 3rd. The petition prays for the removal of the overhead bridge on North Front Street and the lowering of the roadway to a level with the tracks.

Breathlessness Should Be Investigated

A patient consulted his physician fearing he had heart disease because his heart beat was slow sometimes at other times fast, and he thought that it also skipped a beat sometimes.

The physician had him lie down and outlined the size of his heart by tapping on the chest with his finger; he then had him take some exercise—hopping on one foot 30 times—after which he had him sit down for a minute, and finally he had him hold his breath (after taking in a full breath) and again after breathing out the air in his lungs. He then told the patient that his heart was normal in size that if he cared to spend the money for examinations which would be necessary to make sure that his heart was normal.

As a parting remark, the physician stated "You do not get out of breath easily which is a good sign because the first sign of a failing heart is getting out of breath doing work or taking exercise that heretofore has not caused you to get out of breath."

The patient went home, not completely satisfied, but determined to watch for the "shortness of breath sign". Sure enough, he found that he did seem to get out of breath sooner than he should, but he failed to notice that he was so interested in watching for the breathless sign that he was not breathing properly really holding his breath to a considerable extent. It was only after this was pointed out to him and he had the fluoroscopic and electrocardiographic examinations that he felt satisfied about his heart.

If there is a defect of the nose that prevents enough air getting to the lungs, breathlessness will come on sooner. Also the eating of too much of the acid foods—meat, eggs, fish, cereals—may render the blood less alkaline and call for more oxygen—therefore the need to breathe oftener.

However, Dr. F. A. Wilkins in Proceedings of the Mayo Clinic says: "The complaint of breathlessness should always be investigated. If it comes on while at rest and is relieved by a few long

SHOWS HOW BURGLAR CAN PICK LOCK IN 10 SECONDS

Roy Post, New York criminologist demonstrates here a trick whereby criminals like love, can laugh at Locksmiths. The panel at Top LEFT shows how any one of a hundred and one persons to whom you open your door each day can give that little screw holding the cylinder in place a few turns with a screw driver. As the screw has only a one-eighth inch hold, it takes but a slight turn. After that (second from LEFT) it is a matter of just eight seconds to unscrew the entire lock cylinder. Then, lower LEFT, the thief slips a finger through the hole and flicks the lock back. It takes 10 seconds for the entire job from start to finish, and here's the remedy. At lower RIGHT, you see a door where the head of the little screw has been filed off. Do that to your door and your lock will be as safe as it was intended to be in the first place. Mr. Post is presented at RIGHT.

WORLD'S ONLY SINGING ROOSTER VISITS IN CITY

Two Year Old Fowl Entertains Tourists at Camp

BIRD ACTS, DANCES

Halliday Forman, Owner, Admits Chuck Jealous of Other Roosters

"Sing, Chuck, Sing for the gentlemen."

Chuck, vigorously spurred and beaked rooster of healthy and doubtful ancestry, though with traces of game bird forbears readily apparent, blinked with shutter-like precision of eyelids, gaped, and then without even preliminary flapping of wings, emitted a combined whistle and crow of the first bars of a song indefinitely identified as the opening strain of The Star Spangled Banner, and a tune reminiscent of former auto horns which proclaimed the thirstiness of the owner.

"Only singing rooster in the world," modestly admitted Halliday Forman, owner of the precocious bird who entertained visitors at the city tourist camp last evening.

He "Plays Dead"

"Had him since he was a chickabird. Taught him all he knows myself," said Halliday with a flash of ivory teeth. "He's two years old now."

Placed on the ground between acts, Chuck stalked, walking-over-eggs fashion the length of the flag pole mound on the grass, returned to gaze open-beaked at his owner and small audience.

"Play dead, Chuck," commanded his owner. Whereupon Chuck promptly collapse in a deflated pile of limp feathers and remained motionless.

"Dance, Chuck." And Chuck, revived, arose and entered into the leading steps of a Commanche dance.

"Nothin' Chuck can't do," again modestly declared the proud owner.

From Detroit, Halliday Forman and his singing rooster, one form of entertainment which is declared "a specialty with the bird, are on a tour of the province, "just looking things over." Whether the owner supports the rooster or the rooster supports his owner, Halliday fulsomely explained or admitted, he did not know.

"Chuck" Passes Hat.

"We kind of work shares. Chuck sings and dances, and after we've pleased the gentlemen and ladies, we pass the hat. (Another accomplishment of Chuck's. For suiting the word to action, a cap was passed to the rooster who solemnly made the rounds while nickels and dimes were tossed into the cap by amused bystanders.)

"There's just one trouble with Chuck. He's awful jealous. And he'd rather fight other roosters than dance or sing," confided Halliday.

"I got to be careful of Chuck. Nearly lost him twice. Once on a whole chicken yard. And the second time when someone tried to steal him while I slept. Chuck woke me up by cackling at the top of his voice. He doesn't like strangers."

SHOEMAKER 113, WORLD'S OLDEST

But Some Lean to Belief African Negro is 140 Years Old

London, Aug. 24—(CP)—Oldest man in the world, says Dr. Maurice Ernest, was Quebec a modest shoemaker, Pierre Joubert, who died in 1814.

Joubert, 113 years and 100 days old when he died, has gained considerable publicity here through publication of a claim from Ramchodwana Senan, an African Negro in Bechuanaland, who is believed to be 140.

Senan claims to remember a lot of things, including a ferocious battle in which he took part against the Basutos in 1815. The old African says he was military tutor to Lobengula, the chief who opposed the northward expansion of British Africa by Cecil Rhodes.

Sir John Harris of the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protection Society suggests that a scientific examination be made of the man's reputed age.

Dr. Ernest, founder of the Centenarian's Club and authority on old age, claims from examining a picture of Senan that the African is in "the middle life." He has offered £250 (1,250) to anyone who can establish that the old fellow is as much as 130 and does not believe he is within 10 years of that great age.

Dr. Ernest pins his faith in old Pierre as the proven champion of the human race's longevity, even though Pierre attracted attention by claiming he was only 106.

GERMAN PLAN IS CRITICIZED BY DR. TOMBER

Economic Self-Sufficiency Only Applicable in War, He Says

Berlin, Aug. 24—(CP—Havas)—Criticism of Germany's drive for economic self - sufficiency was voiced in Der Deutsche Volkswirt, financial mouthpiece of Reichsbank President Hjalmar Schacht, in an article contending that the nation's "war potential" is gravely threatened by the present system.

Written by Dr. W. Tomber, the article said that "if Germany had had an autarchic regime in 1914, it would not have been able to hold out as long as it did."

Dr. Tomber concluded that while war economy must be prepared in time of peace, its application should begin only after a declaration of war.

Treasure of Gold Important

"The economy of a sound and organized peace," said the writer, "constitutes the primordial condition for the functioning of a war economy. On the contrary, an autarchy which is too absolute, because even the expenditures it entails, leads naturally to the weakening of the economic force of the nation in time of war.

"A war treasure in gold has the same importance today as it had centuries ago. And since Germany cannot nourish itself from its own soil, it must think of accumulating gold and whatever else it needs in case of a conflict."

Dr. Tomber noted in this connection that the United States, part of the Britain and France together possess 76 per cent of the gold reserve of the world, Russia also has enormous reserves, while Germany, he observed, does not possess even one per cent of the world gold stocks."

HUSBAND TOO KIND WIFE REBELLED

Now He is Held by Police After Death of His Love Rival

Chicago, Aug. 24—(AP)—A husband's "extreme kindness" toward his wife was cited by a prominent alienist as one cause of the marital discord that led to the slaying of his love rival.

Rudolph Sikora, 31, the husband, was held by police after the death of Edward Solomon, 36, shot on a street corner Monday.

At police headquarters Sikora said his wife, Margaret, 22, was "the perfect girl, the best wife a man could have." In turn Mrs. Sikora called him "a perfect husband" and a "model man" but one unable to make her happy.

To Dr. Harry R. Hoffman of the Cook County Behavior Clinic she offered her explanation for the paradox.

"Because he was a person so easy to get along with," she explained, "I think I love more him than I love than a husband. He used to clean up the house, wash the dishes and do the shopping—woman's work. I rebelled against his extreme kindness."

Mrs. Sikora and Solomon worked at adjoining desks in a firm of accountants. The romance that came to them, said Dr. Hoffman, is a risk that all husbands in this office wives must take."

Mrs. Sikora, the alienist said, "was forever undergoing an inward rebellion against her husband's extreme kindness. She resisted, as many women do, some spirit of domination by her husband."

Girl Screams And Bites Snatcher

Toronto, Aug. 24—(CP)—A purse-snatcher clad in cream flannel and a blue blazer was put to flight by the struggles and screams of a young woman yesterday as he made an unsuccessful attempt to grab her purse.

Miss Dorothy Faloon was walking home on Quebec Avenue when the youth approached. When he snatched at her purse, Miss Faloon held on firmly. When he hit her in the face, the girl screamed. Then the youth tried to smother her screams by putting his hand over her mouth. She bit him. The attention of neighbors, one of whom gave chase in his bare feet, scared the snatcher off.

Eye Disease Study Advanced by Biochemistry

Montreal, Aug. 24 — (CP) — A "widespread advance" in the science of ophthalmology through use of biochemistry was forecast by Sir Stewart Duke-Elder, surgeon oculist to the King.

Here to address the first annual meeting of the Canada Ophthalmological Society, Sir Stewart told newspapermen the advance probably would take place during the next few years. "For the past 50 years ophthalmology has been making use of methods of investigation and treatment which depended on the microscopic study of tissues and pathological changes," he said. "But within the last year or two the position has been more or less revolutionized through the more subtle methods of biochemistry. "A great many of the diseases of the eye are, in fact, problems of chemistry—such as cataract and glaucoma. While these major diseases, responsible for the majority of cases of blindness, have not yet reached their solution, the progress which has been made during recent years leads one to hope that the day will come when the problems which they now present will be solved."

Train a Child To Attract Friends

Not Natural For Him to Have Only a Few Chums, Says Writer

(By LISA GRENELLE)

FREDDIE, EVEN as a little boy, was one of those faithful souls. For years his only friends and playmates had been Albert and Anne.

His sister, Frances, on the other hand, was quite the opposite, forever changing friends at such a rate that no one but Frances could keep track of them.

Pickle Frances, faithful Freddie—the world is full of them. We all know dozens. As they start, so too, they often finish.

Freddie, now middle-aged, has few friends and makes few more. He doesn't like to forgotten how. Not even if they forget everything upon him can he adapt himself to them any more satisfying affinities.

But even these rather intense tendencies really an essential part of Freddie's and Frances' nature! Only to a very slight and harmless extent. Freddie might normally have been a little slow to make friends. Frances might have been normally inclined to be carried away by her enthusiasm for a newfound acquaintance, but, if carefully handled, neither tendency need have been handicapping. With a little guidance, both faults in both could have been rectified.

Afraid of Them?

The child who has only one friend is either pitifully afraid or does not feel the need of them. If he does not feel the need, he is not developing properly, has an unnatural lack of initiative, seems afraid to reach out, to experiment, to learn by trial and error from experience. Usually the man with only a few old friends has never matured.

We all need new friends, more and more, as stimuli to growth. We need them to satisfy natural, growing needs and qualities. It is unnatural for us to outgrow some friends, but quite natural to drop an occasional old friend, but not too frequently.

Not to fly from one intimate to another in rapid succession is also abnormal. Constant gadflitting is significance. Such a tendency also sometimes indicates fear, a subconscious sense of inferiority, making our Frances uneasy, insecure, ready to take offense.

If you have a Freddie or a Frances, don't reproach them for their nonconformity or lack of stability, but try to help them overcome their handicap. In these cases, Freddie, while still young, might have been sent to a new environment, a new school where he would have been forced to make friends, while Frances might have been protected to fewer friends early in life.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

May You Be Hostess to Your Hostess?

I am often asked by a prospective guest, if it would be proper for her to invite her hostess to be her guest for some special occasion during her visit. It is proper, it is thought full, and it can be done with exquisite taste.

Let's say, for instance, that you are visiting a hostess who lives in the city, or are visiting a friend who lives in the country and with whom you are going to the city to shop. There are many times such happy plans that you can generously make. Your suggestion may be luncheon, either with your hostess alone, or with one or two friends of your hostess whom you have met and especially like or with one or two of her friends who may have been making her some time. Otherwise offered charming hospitality. Or the party can be made to include either a matinee or movie, or a matinee or movie followed by a "dish of tea." Or it might be possible for you to invite the host to join you and the hostess and Frances.

If your visit is in the country, keep your eyes open as you drive about for a delightful wayside find or a picturesque tea-room to which you may suggest going with your hostess and the children.

If you are familiar with the surroundings and the city where you are visiting, or if you are socially adventurous, you may suggest, in such a way to have the menu ordered and the check paid before the guests arrive.

In any event, make your invitation definite. Maybe like this: "Mary, when we go to town on Tuesday, will you be my guest at luncheon and the movies? I'd like to give a party for you, and I'd like to ask Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Graham to join us. Let's go in early and get our shopping done, have lunch and then no hurry about picture at the Central."

It's a pleasant gesture for a guest to make especially when her visit is a rather long one.

Quiet Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in a few months, and am having a very quiet wedding.

My fiancé is to be announced in the local newspaper. Do you consider that fine, would it be proper time before the wedding to announce the engagement?

S—I had intended sending announcements only to out-of-town relatives and friends. However, I have been told that it is proper to send announcements to relatives, friends and acquaintances in town. Would you kindly advise me if this is correct?

S—How soon after the wedding is it proper to send out the announcements? I can have them ready to mail immediately.

M.

I—There is no rule about the time to announce the engagement. It depends entirely on your choice and convenience. Five weeks before the wedding is proper, although it is also thoroughly proper to announce it before this, if you choose. Those you are to be invited in a few months, you may announce it today, unless but they are about to say you prefer to wait.

2—The friends who tell you that you should not announce your announcements to relatives and friends who live in town are incorrect. The point about sending these announcements is that they are sent out and the recipients are not invitations and friends, in town and out of town, but they are sent only to anyone who was invited to the wedding whether or not the person finally attended the wedding.

3—Announcements should be sent out, if possible, directly after the ceremony has been performed. This means that the people in town will receive the announcements in the next morning's mail . . . in the proper idea.

"You suggested a course, including shorthand, commercial English and some bookkeeping. I could manage all three. This I did.

"Well, Miss Fairfax, I've still long way from being a John Rockefeller, Jr., or one of the Astor boys but I succeeded in getting a job which pays $27.50 a week. And on this I am getting married. Theirs is a rare risk. And my girl agreed.

"We have three rooms in the suburbs, and as Mary is no cleanliness in the house, we have to depend on oil lamps, which didn't cost much. And the better air and well-kept gardens around us make up for keeping the lamps filled and trimmed.

"Not very long ago, kerosene was 10 cents a gallon. Improvements, improvement, replacing the handmade candles and the old whale-oil lamps. Indeed, we love the soft light and find it easier on our eyes.

"And here's thanks for your hint. I would never have thought of taking such a course if it hadn't been for your suggestion.

"Remember of us, myself among the number, are just dumb; they, including myself, make me think of Rip Van Winkle. Others, fortunately, rally and never stopping to look at the past, are waving and encouraging them to stop. Well, thanks again. From a

It has been the good fortune of this column to receive letters from young people, from time to time, saying that our suggestions worked, and they were grateful for it, feeling me beg you to take advantage of the opportunities that you have to make a little more money. But you can see for yourself its results.

House Flies Don't Like Blue

How many times have agricultural scientists announced after lengthy research, now new method, or at method or some profound discovery, and when extension men in the field have begun putting it into use of this idea for a dozen years, it has finally occurred to some lady in Family Herald representative ran across this windows in the dairy barn among several letters from the producers of the Lachute area. No one could say what she started the idea, but they knew that painting the cow stable and milkhouse windows blue definitely kept the flies in nuisance down to a minimum. Apparently recently Rabbi of Montwellion Farms near Montreal, were noticed to have blue windows. Questioned about this, the rabbi said, "Our city milk inspectors insist on it. They say flies don't like it. I'm funny at first but I'm all for it now. It does discourage the flies."—Family Herald Weekly Star.

How Lighting Changes Drastic

(Homemaking Helps)

By ELEANOR ROSS

DRAMATIC CHANGES in new distinctly noticeable in home lighting. Today we find concealed lighting, the new traditional used to illuminate small, unpretentious suburban homes and we are also becoming aware that light holds many amazing possibilities for new decorative effects in the home. Like sculptor's clay, it is flexible. It can be subtly blended into the decorative scheme of a room.

The man or woman pouring over a book in the library may have a

of an older house, should all investigate the interesting lighting treatments available at surprising cost. They will learn that light, in its most advanced artistic expression, may be successfully used from built-in panels in walls and ceilings, from doors and from windows, from windows in inside walls, from panel mirrors and from other surprising places. In order to plan these lighting installations, cleverly-handled lighting effects and depth and spaciousness to a small room. For instance, a mirror panel behind a lounge reflecting the opposite side of a room adds depth and beauty. Built-in book shelves with their own line of concealed lighting add color and interest to the wall. Built-in ceiling lights add height. Such an installation is truly an addition to space. A single trough conceals the bulbs, and this is also recessed in the ceiling. The light is directed to the rounded ceiling surface above the trough and reflected smoothly down on the entire length of the lounge.

Never, never should abundances of light be used for decorative effects except where it is needed for eye tasks. Your lighting man will see that there is adequate light for the scientific standards will be maintained and the kind of light required smooth well diffused and without glare.

Another thing else that is coming into vogue is the glass brick window, soaking lighting in the bath, inside wall. It is particularly beautiful when a mirror is placed behind it, as in the powder room. Wall brackets of plaster in various designs are also used to hold the bulbs and give a soft, diffused light that is most pleasing.

Another thing to be caught on quickly is the mirror with its line of concealed lighting. This is now sometimes, all around. This is charming above a fireplace and also for a bedroom or dressing room. None of these installations is at all expensive, and lighting fixture manufacturers are thinking up and putting out new ideas all the time.

Good Posture Aid to Charm

PRISCILLA LANE

Could give lessons in correct posture

(By HELEN POLLEY)

IF YOU bump your shoulders, let the spinal column do a slump and lower your chin, you won't get far in the movies. Those curves that will look as if they came out of an attic, even though they were made in Paris last year, simply won't feel gingery. The world will be back in style for that, but it won't be in it. The freshness of life will have departed.

Good posture is hard on muscles. Like the joints of the body, muscles were designed to operate in a certain manner, each one working as nature intended. When muscles are used otherwise than as nature intended, then the nervous system sulks and the feminine face takes on expressions. Look at the line of the hips, not from the waist. Hold the shoulders back, head full, head properly balanced, neither forward or back. Stand, walk, sit correctly. There will develop a pendulous outline suggestive of laziness or sadness.

If you are flirting with the idea of having a hennia pack to put red glints in your hair, don't do it. Don't even think yourself. The paste must be put on quickly and evenly and left on just so long. Amateur hair coloring is nearly always a disappointment.

When bathing in the ocean, do not attempt to rinse the hair with clear, soft water. It is a waste of time. Salt is good for the hair or the scalp; it isn't. It dries the delicate shafts, causes them to break.

It's best to wear a snug bathing cap, long hair, when in contact with the waves. The cap is a protection from sun, wind, water and from casual grief for pretty

Celebration for Janie

By GEORGE GROGAN

Jane Rainey looked across the lamplit living room at Jim, who sat relaxed and lowly, gazing sadly from the window at the Hudson river.

"She's beautiful," thought Jane. "I don't wonder he loves her." Jane, too was beautiful with the maturity of forty. She, too looked somewhat sad.

Mrs. Rainey Clarkson, rustled his paper nervously. Tension was in the air. He gazed over the tops of the glasses at his wife and his daughter. "They're beautiful," he thought. "It's a darn shame that young whippersnapper has to spoil it all."

"Well, Janie," he said, "you're not- by any chance grieving the family circle with your presence tonight are you?"

A little sarcasm, but a lot of affection, Clarkson Rainey was very fond of his daughter Janie. And so was Daddy, she said.

"Daddy," she said "—and mother: I'm going over to Molly's for the evening. Don't wait up for me there. But I want to tell you and mother something before I go. I'm going to marry him."

Impulsively she spoke with an effort, guardedly.

"I don't like that Janie," he said. "You know that."

"Yes," she said, facing her father bravely "I know that. You and mother don't like Bert. But I—love him."

"Oh, Janie," said her mother. "It isn't that we don't like Bert—he's a nice boy, but—"

"Father was a dear boy once—he'll outgrow that: I mean Bert will" said Janie,

Then Janie's mother talked all evening. "I won't have it," Clarkson stormed. "I won't have it. He's just a boy, he's no more fitted to take care of Jane than—well, it just wont do."

Jane raised objections, But she knew that her twenty-two, stunning at his first job awkward, boyish.

They went to bed that night without seeing Janie. While they were dressing for breakfast they decided they must make the best of it. It's Janie's life. They finally admitted Clarkson, "I guess we've got to make the best of it. I'll tell you—I'll get four tickets for that show Janie wants to see, and we'll take dinner and the show. Then the child to bring her boy along for our inspection."

But there was no chance to tell Janie, that morning or the next change of heart. She had gone, before breakfast, to Molly's.

Jane Clarkson had arranged to get in touch with Bert by telephone.

"Well, naturally," said Janie, when she came in at six. "I told him not to call me at the office. I'd seen how things were. But I'm fearfully sorry, dear, that your father was sporta."

"Yes," said Jane, conitrely, "I said the message was from you."

It was a radiant Janie who got out her mother at the gay hotel at which Bert had taken them to dinner and the show. Clarkson had changed his mind and had insisted on the best. Bert had straightened out and under a worn coat and battered hat, a handsome young racket.

"What ever did you do that for?"

"I had to see Janie—she telephoned," he explained, "and I had to meet her here at seven. Well, I had to get a good name, to impress her. So I paid five dollars to a fellow I know, flowers for his coat and hat—gave him the flowers, and I've been hanging around the lobby pretending to come out hoping to get a chance to see Janie. Pretty clever, eh, flower seller."

"Bert," said Janie's mother "you're such a baby. Here get by here with us. We're glad you're going to be responsible for Janie's ring."

Clarkson slammed the taxi door as he crowded in on the little seat across from his wife. His face was beaming. "Bert," he said, "I'm going to take you to Tiffany's. Get that ring—they'd have two children, now, in-

AT THE SELLE

"Always Goodbye"

Barbara Stanwyck has completed another colorful cycle in her amazing career, oddly enough, she's back where she started—once more the leading lady of a screen love story. Her alluring star has been appearing in roles of dramatic depth and punch but seemingly she was subordinated to character portrayal, in "Always Goodbye" at the Selle, in which she stars with Herbert Marshall, she reverts to the type of role in which she first flashed across the film horizon as one of the screen's queen glamour queens.

Then, Ian Hunter heads the feature cast. Long a film favorite, the actor's last 20th Century-Fox film was the romantic drama "Mary—With love." Next, it offers the debut of Bill Johnson Russell, the five-year-old Brooklyn tot who, reports have it, plays the focal role in the story around which all the growing up lives weave their destinies. Following the motion picture audience will meet again the newest of the "exponents of the gangster era" Barton MacLane who in one amazing role with Sonja Henie several months ago, took the cinemaddicted by storm with his humor technique. And what is claimed to be a record is the introduction into the dramatic story of Hollywood's most photographed baby.

The beautiful Barbara Stanwyck prepares for the assassin's bullet in Belleville' feminity an array of more than 200 gowns, which is more than two dozen of Pinelatta Montgomeries and Joan Crawfords. She is a girl who gets a break of luck when a sympathetic physician (Herbert Marshall) finds her a job in a fascinating shop. On the strength of a name for the gowns worn by Miss Stanwyck.....and seven of Hollywood's most beautiful players. Based on a story by Gubert Emery and Adela Rogers St. Johns, play by Kathryn Scola and Edith Skouras is a witty dramatic treatment of romance and mother love.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Great Guy"

Once again the screen is showing a great comedy in one of the lovable, two-fisted, rugged roles which have endeared this dynamic player to millions of screen followers. This time it is against a background that is familiar to all the common run in screen stories—the Department of Weights and Measures of a large city—but it gives Cagney the best chance he has had in a long day to display his admirers the wide range and versatility of his dramatic talents.

"Great Guy"—Cagney's first Grand National picture which is coming to the McCarthy Theatre is based on the popular Johnny Cave stories in the Saturday Evening Post by James Edward Grant. It depicts the efforts of a young graduate of the powerful political ring, who have organized a "phoney racket" that is defrauding every housewife in the city. In making the rounds Johnny Cave, played by Cagney, nearly loses his life, his girl and his good name, by a narrow margin through in typical Cagney fashion, rounds up the crooks, exposes his reputation and wins both the girl in a series of breathless thrills that leaves the audience panting.

The girl, by the way, is played by Jean Arthur, of Mr. Deeds fame, who was teamed with Cagney in "Public Enemy" and "Lady Killer" and who was the heroine of the famous grape-fruit scene in the former picture which has become a Cagney classic.

A better vehicle than "Great Guy" for the popular star's return to the screen could not have been selected. Cast as Johnny Cave his fellow workers and friends call him "Cagney to a T," and his admirers not only the action and suspense which they have always demanded of him but also something more—a new Cagney, in some ways, who creates a sympathetic and heroic atmosphere around his part with definite but subtle finesse and without the rough edges and cruelties of "Priscd Kid" for instance, or the other gangster characters he has so ably and successfully portrayed, but it is equally effective.

The exceptionally well-balanced cast is seen in support of the star. Miss Clarke, who has the featured feminine role, provides the romance and is fully adequate in the dramatic scenes. Edward Brophy, the former bootleg baron, who is a friend of the young deputy of the Weights and Measures Department, gives a splendid characterization. Donald Meek, Henry Mahey, the deputy's faithful and loyal assistant, lends a picturesque background around the development of the story. Henry Kolker as Canning the head of the crooked weight racket, as might be expected, gives a finished performance. Among the important parts are Robert Gleckler, Bernardine Hayes, Zeffie Tilbury, Granville Bates and Spencer Tracy.

"Great Guy" was produced for Grand National by Douglas MacLean. John Blystone directed it and has imparted many human touches, which add measurably to the picture's appeal.

Polly Moran, well-known screen favorite, who has been seen in Belleville many times in the past, cast opposite Marie Dressler, returns again to the two reel comedy featurette to the screen, after many months absence entitled "Sailor Mail" which you can be assured of a real treat as it is acclaimed to be one of the best comedies made this year. Little Sybil Jason is also presented in a delightful technicolor production entitled "A Day At Santa Anita" and "The Story Book of Holland" all color musical cartoon, offering will precede "Great Guy", Thursday, Friday and Saturday when an expect a splendid program of entertainment.

"Music For Madame"

Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine and a splendid cast of supporting players in the romantic musical comedy "Music For Madame" Chico Marx and for those who enjoy melody laughs and excitement in abundance, should not fail to see this splendid production, as it may be seen for the last time before another outstanding musical treat like "Music For Madame" is presented to Belleville theatre audiences.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Borrowing Trouble"

When Dad becomes the leading citizen of Pumpkin Center, movement it spells trouble for Bonnie's wedding. The planned quiet garden ceremony becomes a nine-minute procession with cops and firemen, and Dad Jones is the associate of a couple of amateur crooks.

The thieves steal the key to Jones's drug store, which had been entrusted to Dad and he returns to tell what he knows of the substitution—and Dad goes to the jug. Circumstantial evidence points to Roger Jones' brother and they are charged with the crime.

Determined to prevent any more postponements of her marriage, Bonnie persuades the judge to conduct the ceremony in the careening car, not in pursuit of the fleeing bandits.

Advance News On New Fall Coiffures

The new hairstyles are in, and the trend is the same upward sweep with the curl and fancy effects on top, varying but little year or more, hairdressers have been educating their patrons to adopt this style, and so far the majority have, but there are a number who are going to defy it, the more youthful soft waves about the face.

Some of the girls and women who favor the "up" style know the effect is unflattering but feel they are at least smart with the lines that conform with the new hats. There is a satisfaction in wearing the latest styles, but now we are going to look for a combination of style and becomingness, and some clever Hollywood screen stars have made this definite change in their hairdress, & nearly all of them are careful to keep the hair in a rather long bob. Long bobs may be dressed in a dozen any style, and when the hair is worn in these informal modes it will look smarter when shoulder length.

The "up" styles, however, do reveal the neck and ears, and when these are an asset, there seems to be an excuse for the vogue. It is not hard for hair, either when one has a good permanent but the best way for the amateur is to separate and secure the top hair; then simply comb up the back and sides, each separately. When it is a bit damp or slightly moistened with a liquid or cream wave set, the wave line can be placed with the fingers. The top section is arranged to suit your face line, and if one has time to first set it in curls it will be easy to comb them out in separate rolls or large ringlets.

The new vogue for curlettes with the simulated curls on the ears are "worn". The smooth well-groomed quality of the hair itself is important with these styles.

The sun in small doses is a good thing for the body as it helps to form the Vitamin D, but in large doses it is a real irritant and has a tendency to make red and coarsen the skin texture.

Songstress Offers Chilled Pear Mask

With all the fine cosmetics we have on the market, you would hardly expect the modern girl to care much for homemade beauty aids, but there are few who do not have one or more special formulae for personal routine.

You will be interested in the following, which we found in a printed treatment of radio songstress Doris Rhodes.

Miss Rhodes thinks keeping the skin fresh and cool is just as important for one to look perfection as the practice and rehearsing for the frequent broadcasts, and the special recipe she has given out is said to keep the skin perfectly lovely.

Chilled Pears

It is a chilled pear facial. To prepare it, take a half of an alligator pear, peeled and mashed fine (a silver fork is the masher), and to this she adds a half teaspoon of powdered boric acid powder. It is then thoroughly chilled in the refrigerator. When she is ready for the treatment the chilled pear is whipped up with the white of an egg which has been beaten to a stiffness.

The face is cleansed with an application of cleansing cream, and when this is removed the pear mixture is spread on the face and left on for about ten or fifteen minutes. During this time, Miss Rhodes tries to relax on the bed with closed eyes, with a little pad of absorbent cotton saturated in boracic acid solution placed over the eyes.

When the mask is removed with cool water, the skin will be fresh and smooth with a natural glow from the mild stimulation.

Masks of this kind are always good for the skin, and that one has the oily pear substance along with the astringent action of the egg white and boric acid, so it will be effective for the dry or oily skin.

It takes time for all packs and facials, but the active, busy girl needs them for the relaxation they bring as well as the exhilarating feeling they always impart to the skin.

If we are determined to be the life of the party, let us be sure it is not at the expense of other's dignity. You know there is no bore quite so obnoxious as the practical joker.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

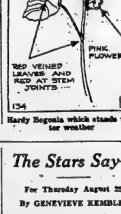
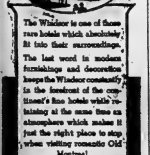
Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian



Many gardeners deplore the fact that their lovely begonias are not hardy, for the begonia, indeed, is one tuberous-rooted begonia which is not even frightened by zero weather.

Not only can this begonia stand zero weather, but it is exceedingly attractive, although not quite as showy as the ever-blooming tuberous foliage, shown in the Garden-Graph, is unusually attractive. The plants grow about a foot high and the large leaves are a light, fresh green. The new foliage is red as the veining of the leaves, and their undersides, are red. The flowers are a lovely flesh pink.



To grow happily begonia evansiana requires a rich, moist soil. It does especially well in the shade of tall trees.

Does Earthworm Carry a Headlight?

GOODNIGHT STORIES

By MAX TRELL

"MY BROTHER, Knarf, wants to come along with us, too," Hannibel, the shadow girl, said to Earthworm.

"Oh, glad to have him. Where is he? the earthworm asked, putting on his glasses and gazing around the garden. "I don't see him."

"I'll call him. He went to look over by the garden wall for the entrance to the Mole family's tunnel. I'll fetch him here in a minute. Knarf! Where are you?" she called loudly.

There was no reply from Knarf. "I guess he didn't hear me that time. Knarf! Then she called again. Still no answer from before, "Knarf! Knarf!"

Still Knarf didn't answer.

"You don't suppe he's gone off somewhere alone, do you?" Hannibel said, turning to the earthworm.

Wandered to Sleep?

Earthworm thought about this for a moment or two. Then he said: "Well . . . I have heard of people wandering off in their sleep sometimes. But what I really meant was that I wondered into his bed, and wandered off to sleep."

"And now we want a light, don't we?" the earthworm said.

Hanid sighed. "He shouldn't have done that. He promised to warn the Mole family that unless they moved out of this garden by tomorrow, Father was going to set a trap for them. And now he's gone to sleep and left me all alone."

"All alone!" the earthworm exclaimed. "Hufnph! I supposed I'm nobody!"

"Oh, I didn't mean that!" she said quickly, not wishing to hurt his feelings. "I just meant—I don't know!" she exclaimed suddenly. "You come with me to the Mole family. We'll tell them together about how important it is for them to move out of this garden right away."

Knows Short Cut

Earthworm smiled. He felt quite pleased again. "Fine," he said "There's a short cut to their tunnel right under this flat stone. I'll crawl under it first and you come right after me."

So the worm crawled under the flat stone and Hanid, after making herself small enough (which isn't the least bit of trouble for a shadow to do, you know), crawled right after him.

Finally, she heard him say: "Ah! here we are at the bottom!"

The next instant she came down with a little bump.

"And now we want a light, don't we?" the earthworm said. "I'll switch it right on."

Hanid couldn't help wondering what sort of light the earthworm was going to turn on, down deep under the garden.

This Corded Rayon Dress Can Go To Wedding Or Club

By PRUNELLA WOOD

The dress sketched today is a perfectly simple affair, but one the well groomed type, which depends on extra special cutting and finishing for its good looks. Such a dress can go to the country club, the country wedding, the Sunday morning services during a rural week-end and generally pass the tester who picks it up as a late summer tonic for a much-washed and worn hot weather wardrobe.

The fabric is a corded rayon with a dull finish. The skirt is gored and pleated comfortably, the blouse trig and becomingly built for almost any type of figure. The belt is wide and made of vari-colored striped ribbon. It is swell in white or pastels.

"Sew Up" These Tasty Recipes

(The Home Kitchen)

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

"SEWING UP" the cooking situation may sometimes involve basting and embroidery and zigzag, but never, never any hemming (or hawing, we hope). Basting, in cookery sense, means to pour or drip some succulent or savory liquid over it as you are cooking, while embroidery in the kitchen means the fancy touches we give our meals to make them distinctive. Zigzag, to the cook, means the things you "whirl" with a pastry gun. So be a seamstress in your kitchen, to your own success!

Rosy bananas is the first of the "sewing-up" recipes. Ingredients include one cup cranberry sauce or jelly, one tablespoon cold water, three large, firm bananas, two tablespoons lemon juice. Beat cranberry sauce or jelly until smooth.

If you're looking for a real value in cereals, ask for Kellogg's Corn Flakes. There's no substitute for true Kellogg flavor and crispness.

Order Kellogg's Corn Flakes for breakfast tomorrow. Ready to serve with milk or cream. Always oven-fresh in the exclusive heat-sealed inner bag. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

MADE BETTER - PACKED BETTER TASTE BETTER

Stir in tablespoon cold water. Cut peeled bananas lengthwise into halves and sprinkle with lemon juice. Place in baking dish. Pour cranberry juice over bananas. Bake in moderate oven 10 minutes or until bananas are tender. Serve hot with meats or thoroughly chilled as a dessert. This recipe serves six.

Baked Peaches

Baked peaches is the next dish. Peel ripe, fresh peaches and cut in halves. Put and place in shallow baking dish. Dot with butter, a few gratings of nutmeg and a few drops of lemon juice. Pour in a small amount of dark corn syrup to fill cavity of each peach. Bake in 350 F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes basting occasionally with juice. Serve hot.

Cool cucumber salad is a delightful luncheon dish. It requires one package lime gelatin, one cup hot water, three-quarters cup canned grapefruit, teaspoon vinegar, one-half cup grated cucumber, one-half cup diced cucumber, dash of salt, teaspoon gelatin in hot water. Add vinegar, salt and grated cucumber. Strain and chill until slightly thickened. Season diced cucumber with dash of salt and fold into slightly-thickened lime gelatin. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and embroider with a piping of creamy mayonnaise.

Almost a uniform is the dress of black satin, sheer or jersey, with straight and pleated bodice, a fetching surplice neckline and an all-round pleated skirt. Good looking, it is worn with a change of belts with as a black patent, gold kidskin, or red leather, and is correct from luncheon on.

They are asking for more of those nice long fitted coat and dress ensembles, done in prints in small, neat designs. A typical model is in blue with a white geometric print. The full-length fitted coat has blue velvet collar, blue velvet buttons and blue velvet pipings.

Yellow Fever Problem Is Unsettled

Fumigation of Planes from Danger Areas Advised by Doctor

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

TRY WEST all started a few months ago when Dr. Victor Heiser wrote in a popular magazine that we might be on the verge of a new epidemic of yellow fever. He had thought that this was a public health problem that was completely settled. Simply do away with a certain kind of mosquito and the danger is ended. But Dr. Heiser points out that yellow fever may be carried by other things than the mosquito.

One of the arresting things about the idea is that yellow fever may be carried to the United States from the jungles of South America by airplane traffic.

In South America the principal ports do not have yellow fever at present. Brazil is an example of a country where extra efforts are being made to keep the seaports free from all forms of mosquitoes. The yellow fever in Brazil is the jungle type, spreading slowly from community to community, and also places visiting such communities may easily bring it north. Several insects are suspected of forming an animal reservoir of the disease.

What Might Be Done

Considering the preventive problem as a whole, an airplane might conceivably carry into the United States (1) mosquitoes, infected with yellow fever; (2) other species of mosquitoes that might become acclimated here and later become infected by a new importation because, serving as a new and efficient vector for the spread of yellow fever in this country; (3) human cases of yellow fever; (4) human cases infected with yellow fever but arriving here during the incubation period; (5) infected animals.

On the assumption that yellow fever is most likely to be introduced into the United States by airplanes, the one great protective measure that can be applied is to make all of our southern ports on arrival free of the Aedes aegypti.

In such an Aedes-free port, granted that infected mosquitoes were landed and that it bit and infected one or more persons who subsequently developed yellow fever, there would be no mosquito vector to pass on the virus to other individuals and thus start an epidemic. The fumigation of arriving airplanes to prevent introduction of infected mosquitoes is the measure of choice.

BIRDS FLY onto smart hats. An advance model is a tricorne in eggshell felt with a bird on each wing, and a wine colored lace veil with velvet ribbon edge.

First prize for beauty goes to Talmadinge's slim dinner gown made entirely of white lace, with a long black cashmere appliqued on black chiffon over a fitted foundation. The working of the bands creates a high waistline but a tailored black belt is placed low.

Soon sold to his private clients was Paloma's model of black satin cami-made with two loose panels from the shoulder giving a jacket look. The dress has a sparse panel of large black rabbits, the print resembling an appliqued. A wide black patent leather belt holds the panels.

A strong dash of a vivid color marks many of the new black hats. A brimless model of black straw has a trimming of an orchid colored veil which draws around the hat and ties under the chin.

Correspondents Speak Their Minds On Use of Term "Office Wife"

(Copyright, 1938 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CAROLINE CHATFIELD etc ANN,

A month ago I printed a sharp letter from a correspondent taking exception to my use of the term "Office Wife," in this column. At the same time I invited readers to speak their minds on the subject. The results are interesting and the opinions are about evenly divided. Ironically enough, on the very day that the original protest was printed, side by side with it, in several papers, was a syndicated picture of a weeping wife bidding goodbye to her husband on his way to the penitentiary, for murdering or shooting his "Office wife." Several wives clipped this picture and sent it along as Exhibit A. I admit this dashed me a bit.

Here are some excerpts from letters received: "It makes no difference who uses the expression 'Office wife,' it isn't fit to be used by decent people. It originated in unclean minds, was first in the relations between businessmen and their employees" . . . "There are people who smear every relationship in life by the misuse of words. 'Office wife' is a case in point. It's an insult to the type of businessmen I know and also to the business girls who are my friends."

"I've been a stenographer for more than a quarter of a century and frankly I have a sensation of nausea everytime I hear the words 'Office wife.' Our national press and magazines have lower and lower every day. The suggestion in this term doesn't tend to raise them."

"Evidently these violent objections to such common slang as 'Office wife' come from jealous wives who are playing a losing game with their husbands and are consequently sore on life in general." . . . "Why should wives wring their hands and tear their hair because somebody coins a humorous expression to describe a man's dependence upon his secretary or stenographer?"

"This is a liberal office wife and will be proud to have my daughter follow in my footsteps; no reservations, no regrets; a clean slate." . . . "The term is born of loose morals, condoned by the cohorts of Satan to ensure others sin with it." . . . "I cannot put into words the hot resentment I feel when I overhear uses the term 'Office wife' in my presence. My own wife is sacred and I don't think it should be defiled in this way."

"Here's my okay on the term 'Office wife.' Where's our sense of humor?" . . . "Please remember when the term 'private secretary' was one of the opprobrium but that prejudice passed away. 'Office wife' implies is one cog in the big business woman is capable of running a man's office as his wife runs his home."

Thanks for the buggy ride, readers, and for the reminder that there are two sides to every question. We'll help me—I think twice before I write those words again.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Letters unsuitable for publication will be answered personally provided they contain stamped, self-addressed envelopes. All names are held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, in care of this newspaper.

Nail Beauty Reflects Careful Diet

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Canadian Writer

Nail grooming is a part of every girl's beauty routine, and there are few who are careless about it. So it may be a bit discouraging for many to find that our nails never continue to look coarse, rigid, short and unattractive even though we may be quite fastidious about every little grooming detail.

We all want nice long, smooth nails and will do everything we can to make them that way but the first won't grow to the distinguished length. Well, you need not blame yourself so much, as there may be a good reason for this condition. According to the authorities in the field of dermatology, we may attribute the cause to sub-acidity, nervousness, poor digestion, repression, need of dental attention, poor circulation and insufficient sunshine and exercise.

The woman who does housework knows she must keep the nails protected to restore the natural oils that are dried with too much submersion in water and the usual effects of cleaning. But when one is in good normal health, the nails are likely to be just as we would have them.

Diet Necessary

You need foods rich in calciums. Cheese (particularly cottage cheese), butter, oranges, lemons, limes, radishes, strawberries and carrots are rich in calciums. Milk, as you know, is an excellent source of nutritional value as a protective food.

Mineral foods also are necessary to nail health, for those parts did should include plenty of leafy green vegetables. Raw vitamin C is lettuce, watercress, asparagus, cabbage, carrots, celery, chicory, romaine. Add to these all citrus fruits, bananas and apples.

Be moderate in all your food consumption, exercise regularly, have your daily period in the sun, and your nails will be sure to improve. The polish should be removed about twice a week and it may be well to make a practice of using the smooth nail wax protection. This is applied before the polish and will coat the nail fiber with a nice protector.

RECIPES TO MAKE YOU ICE CREAM CONSCIOUS

(The Home Kitchen)

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

MARCO POLO is said to have originated it, although King Solomon sometimes got the credit. Dolly Madison introduced it into the White House. It's called the great American dessert, and we patriated citizens cry over it in foreign cafes. Ambrosia (not especially in cocoas), and you can make it in a flash in your refrigerator tray. The answer is ice cream.

If you find that you are a bit weary of the old recipes, then here are some new ones to make you ice cream conscious.

Macaroon Ice Cream

Macaroon ice cream is a dish that can be set proudly before your most distinguished guests. The recipe calls for one cup mashed, fully-ripe bananas (two or three), two tablespoons lemon juice, one-quarter cup sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half cup milk, two cups whites, one cup whipping cream, two egg yolks and one-half cup coarsely crumbled macaroons. Mix together bananas and lemon juice. Combine sugar, salt and milk and stir until mixed. Beat egg whites until stiff beat cream until thickened but not stiff and egg yolks until thick. Combine bananas, egg whites, cream mixture and macaroons. Turn into refrigerator freezing tray. Freeze, with indicator at coldest point, stirring every 30 minutes until mixture begins to hold its shape, adding crumbled macaroons during final stirring. Then freeze firm.

Ice Cream Cocoa

Ice cream cocoa is a dish that is a meal in itself. Scald one quart milk in double boiler with one tablespoon cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon salt, three cups cup cream and a teaspoon vanilla. Add ground coffee to three cups milk. Scald and strain through double thickness of cheesecloth. Combine coffee, sugar with cornstarch and salt, and stir in remaining cup milk, slowly, blending well. Give egg to make a smooth paste. Stir in scalded milk and coffee mixture. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture has thickened somewhat and is smooth. Cook longer, stirring occasionally. Beat eggs with remaining quarter cup sugar and add about cupful of hot mixture slowly, stirring in as added. Return to double boiler when well mixed and cook two minutes longer, stirring. Remove from heat and cream. Chill thoroughly. Stir in vanilla and freeze.

Caramel, first cousin to ice cream, is especially refreshing during warm weather. Grapefruit sherbet is the thing to serve when you want to keep your family with something new and different. One tablespoon gelatin, one-quarter cup cold water, three-quarter cup sugar, one cup boiling water, a No. 2 can grapefruit juice, one-half cup lemon juice and one egg white will make eight large or 12 small servings. Soak gelatin in cold water dissolve gelatin and sugar in boiling water; cool and add fruit juices. Freeze to a mush. Fold in beaten egg whites and continue

Boston Red Sox in Second Place in American; Empson Best Batter

Homer With Bases Full and Two Out in Ninth by Foxx Helps Boston Beat Cleveland

Red Sox Move up Into Second Place Over Indians

DETROIT FOURTH

Greenberg Hits Homer to go Eight Days Ahead of Ruth's Mark

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

It's hard to imagine any real danger for a club that has an 11½ game lead and doesn't know what a slump means, but even though the Boston Red Sox haven't much chance to overhaul New York's Yankees, they're in a good spot to make things tough for the rest of the American Baseball League.

The Sox took over second place from Cleveland Indians yesterday when Jimmy Foxx pulled off the perfect play—a homer with the bases full and two out in the ninth. Actually Boston walloped Cleveland twice, 13-3 and 14-12, but the first game was little more than batting practice.

They hammered out 21 hits mostly in the first three innings. The second game was different, saw Cleveland gain a 6-1 lead. Then Foxx hit his 34th homer of the season and added another double-header to produce a 10-10 tie going into the ninth.

Almost Saved Day

Ken Keltner almost saved the day for the Tribe when he hit for the circuit with one aboard in the ninth, but Dick Bartell and Gerry Coming up after Wilis Hudlin had crammed the corners with two of the first pitch outs of the park.

Meanwhile the Yanks, who can but breeze home by winning half their remaining games, maintained the necessary .500 pace by splitting with Chicago White Sox. The Pale Hose hopped on Wes Ferrell to take the opener 11-3, with the aid of four homers and Thornton Lee's seven-hit pitching. Then Red Ruffing gave only four more blows in the nightcap, but Bill Dickey hit a homer and Lou Gehrig's 25 productive enough runs for the Yanks to win 3-1.

Giants Shoe Lead

New York Giants sliced a half-game off Pittsburg's National League lead as Carl Hubbell and Larry French and Jack Russell for seven hits apiece and a 7-3 victory over Chicago Cubs. The Pirates barely managed to break even with Boston Bees, absorbing a 5-0 shutout from Johnny Sain in the opener and then going 14 innings to pull out a 4-3 decision on an error after having 22 runners left on base.

Cincinnati Reds gained a two-game margin over the Cubs by trimming the Phillies 2-0 on Whitey Moore's five hit flinging. Terry Moore's homer with the bases full netted St. Louis Cardinals off to a 9-7 victory over Brooklyn.

Detroit Tigers captured fourth in the American League by 9½ small-set possible margin—a .5041 average to Washington's .5042 as they whipped the Senators twice, 13-5 and 8-3, while the Senators took a single 6-4 14-inning decision from Chicago White Sox. Hank Greenberg's 43rd homer keeping him eight days ahead of Babe Ruth's 1927 record, and Rudy York's 28th marked the second Tiger triumph.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Briela)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The only time that some baseball Tigers who haven't been going so hot will have cause for some real roaring will be when they get 1939 contracts . . . . Those gents with the far eyes look in their eyes are the Tennis barons . . . . Reasons: Le Moody's withdrawal . . . and there goes the Pirates' Bill gate, boys . . . Grapevine from Memphis says Carl Hubbell will chuck no more screwballs this season—and for the first time since he became manager of the Giants Bill Terry finds himself without a pitching staff . . . Two big league clubs are making passes at Mickey Cochrane for 1939.

The other day a New York columnist broadly hinted Bert Stand, secretary of the Boxing Commission, owns a slice of Lou Ambers . . . This excited Chairman John J. O'Phelan . . . Yesterday he put Stand and Weill (Ambers' manager) under oath and gave them what is known as the old eye . . . both denied everything . . . Case dismissed . . . Kid gloves are off in the Dick Bartell-Bill Jurges feud and you can look for fireworks when the Cubs come here next month, if indeed, they don't pop at Wrigley Field today.

Horton Smith, the putting star and Barbara Bourne (she's the bowling machine heiress) have about decided on New York for their merging spot this fall . . . We are still worried as to what is the matter with our Anglo-Saxons in this fight game . . . Clemson students must go to school two days early if they want to see the football opener . . . Classes start Sept. 19; the Tigers play Presbyterian College Sept. 17.

Wrestling Last Night

Indianapolis—Buck Weaver, 181, Terre Haute, defeated Ernest Battan 179, Indianapolis, two out of three falls; Juan Humberto 234, Mexico, beat Jim Coffield 218, Topeka, Kas. (Coffield winner of first fall, unable to come back after Humberto won second).

TEAMS SHOOTING FOR SECOND SPOT

Rochester Only Leading Syracuse Chiefs by Single Game

(By The Associated Press)

In the next 10 days or so the champion Newark Bears probably will clinch their second straight International League pennant but that battle for the all important runner-up position looks like it will continue right down to the wire.

Right now Rochester Red Wings are leading the third place Syracuse Chiefs by a game with the Buffalo Bisons 2 1-2 games further astern. These three teams along with the Bears are almost certain to make the playoffs.

But it's second place spot these three teams are shooting for and for more reasons than one. The second place club split a $2,000 pot at the end of the season and even more important, meets the fourth place club in the first round of the playoffs. The team that finishes third will face the Bears in the playoff series.

The Chiefs lost a chance to move into second place last night when they took a 2-0 whitewashing from Buffalo Bisons and Ken Ash. At Rochester Red Wings were rained out of their game with the Bears, a victory would have moved Syracuse behind Newark. Baltimore Orioles also were rained out in Montreal but Jersey City Giants swept a doubleheader from Toronto 5-1 and 2-1.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Whitey Moore Reds: His five-hit pitching shut out Phillies 2-0.

Thornton Lee, White Sox, and Lou Gehrig, Yankees: Lee set down Yanks with seven hits and clouted homer as Sox took opener, 11-3; Gehrig's four-bagger with man on won night-cap, 3-1.

Terry Moore, Cardinals: His home run with the bases loaded paced 18-hit attack that trimmed Dodgers, 9-7.

Johnny Lanning, Bees and Mace Brown, Pirates: Former whiteshirt Bees' ace, Yesterday he put

"We have ascertained that one of the guards said, 'let's give—heat,'" Hersch was quoted. "A short time later orders were given to 'turn on the heat.'

"We knew the guard who turned on the heat. What we want to establish now is who gave him the order."

Like Black Hole

Similar stories of how they said the deaths occurred were given by Hersch and Assistant District Attorney John Boyle, who said that "interrogation of witnesses" revealed conditions little more like the black hole in Calcutta than Holmesburg, rather than a modern prison."

Boyle declared that "nobody went near the place unattended only all night."

"All night long," he said, "the prisoners were screaming and crying to have the steam shut off.

"They pounded incessantly. There was only one way to get water, and that was from the toilet hoppers. So those who had cups ran to tore them off and soaked them in the toilet water, and ran back to

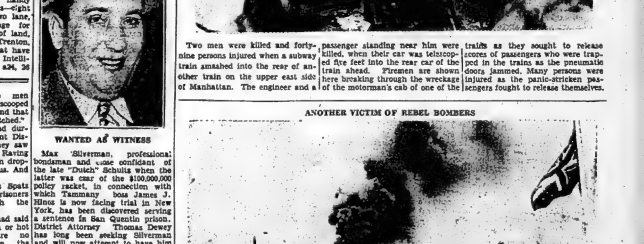
HITLER WATCHES GIGANTIC WAR GAMES OF GERMAN ARMY



With nearly a million men engaged in the manoeuvres of the German army, which are at present giving European chancelleries many, un-easy moments Chancellor Hitler personally inspected many phases of the war games. Der Fuehrer is shown, left, conferring with General Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the Reichswehr. All civilian activities have been subordinated to the exigencies of "war" as the huge army demonstrates its efficiency. Sappers are shown, right, building a pontoon bridge across the River Elbe.

TWO KILLED, 40 INJURED IN SUBWAY CRASH

Two men were killed and forty-nine persons injured when a subway train smashed into the rear of another train on the Interborough Rapid Transit line in the east side of Manhattan. The engineer and a motorman's cab of one of the passenger standing near him were killed, when their car was telescoped five feet into the rear car of the train ahead. Firemen are shown here breaking through the wreckage to get at the trapped motorman and passengers fought to release themselves.

A C.N.A.C. official said:

"There is no doubt that the attack was entirely premeditated. The plane was clearly marked and was on a regularly scheduled run.

William Harris, station master at the Silver Mountain station of the Canadian National Railways said there was no rain, lightning or thunder. The tornado came like a big, dark cloud that came down close to the earth. It came with such great speed that it was not until it was almost upon the station that

He ducked deeper into the cockpit, away from the fury of the wind, and pulled up the nose of the plane. It climbed up and up. The sky above him was a vast bowl. He had no helmet, and the wind tore at his blond hair gleaming in the sun. Up and up to the rim of the world.

Near the rim. Those poor devils far below in the trenches, what could they know of this freedom? Down in the mud and dirt, with the guns booming and the nuts quarreling about them. For the sheer joy in this new freedom he put the ship into a roll. Ah, this was flying—flying indeed, for now her had no ship. He was in the air, and small clouds like angels.....

He never knew that he had fallen.

CHAPTER XLIII.

For weeks Beverly lay in her bed, a thin, white figure with enormous eyes, and hands which seemed to have lost their clutch on life. Chris, sitting beside her, was frightened at times. She seemed, like old Letitia Mortimer, to be slipping away from the sheer burden of living. He would have liked a consultation room, knowing that his being there gave her support, but grasping for words or comfort which she seemed hardly to hear.

"I did it, Chris. If I had cared more—"

"You did all any woman could do."

"I can see him all the time. I can shut my eyes and see him."

"Try not to see him, Beverly. That can't help anyone."

"But he loved to live, Chris. He loved life. He didn't want to go."

"Listen, dear. He's asleep—and God knows we all want sleep—and he's busy and safe somewhere else. It's one thing or the other, darling."

He never touched her, save now and then to stroke those lifeless hands of hers. Sometimes it seemed not to know that he was there. When he moved to go, however, she would look up at him.

"Can't you stay a little longer? I don't want to be alone."

He would stay as long as he dared.

"Are you there, Chris?"

"I'm here. I'm here as long as you need me."

One day, however, he told her that she ought to rouse herself, to see people, and she obeyed like a child. She would sit up in her bed in that flower-bedecked room and see her visitors: the decorous women who had been her mother's friends, the younger ones who had been her own.

"Bev, darling, is there anything I can do?"

"I'll be all right. I just need time."

On the first day she left her bed she made her pitiful journey through the closed door to Jerry's room. It was as he had left it, his clothes—his innumerable clothes—hanging in his closet, his collars and shirts in the drawers. They were all there, the household possessions of his "old Bev." It matter now that it had cost Beverly her She had wanted something to him. And toward the end he had tired. Poor dead darling!

In an upper drawer she found those wings of his which he had worn through the war. They were in a small satin-lined box, and she stood with the box in her hand, looking down at them. Suddenly she was on her knees by his bed, the box in her hand.

"Oh, Jerry, Jerry," she said. "You wanted me, and I hadn't time to back. I didn't mean to hold you back, Jerry. I didn't mean it."

It became clear after that that she asked Chris about Jerry's child.

"I am afraid I don't know, dear. If I could have this boy—"

"That's morbid," he told her sternly. "Put that out of your head and cared for. Loved, too. Let him alone, my dear."

That was the last day he came. She was well now, he told her, and didn't need him.

"Besides," he said, smiling down at her, "it's getting to be a habit. And all habits are bad."

She let him go without a protest, but for a moment she held his big hand between her two thin ones.

"I'll miss you, Chris. You know that."

"Yes, I know that."

And that was that. When he left, he shaved and kissed her lightly on the forehead.

"That's for being a brave girl," he told her, and went rather briskly out into the sunshine.

X X X

The city had changed. If the war and the postwar deflation had reduced and even wiped out some fortunes, it had made new ones. The result was a new social order which discarded the old and set up its own standards particularly of speed.

In this new and rather mixed realm Katie was highly popular. No hour was too late for her to dance, no extravagance too much if it suited her mood. She made and kept her place by sheer vitality, and Chris, watching her, admired her endurance. She spent hours at beauty parlors, and other hours in arranging parties, picnics, and what not. Then in the evenings she would saunter downstairs, short skirts over legs she was trying now to reduce, short hair carefully curled and waved, breasts flattened to conform to the new boyish figure, and glances at him in the office.

"Don't expect me until you see me, Chris," she would say, and wave like a flippant goodbye.

There were days when he never saw her at all. The new society asked only to be amused, to go places and do things. Katie always was always ready to do either. But she was ambitious to go further. One day, a year after Jerry's death she came to tell Chris that Janet Orcutt was putting her house on the market, and suggested that they buy it.

"It's cheap," she said, "and you ought to put up some sort of front, Chris."

"Nothing succeeds like good hard work. And I've got the downtown office, 114 at the curb."

She persisted, and one day he found himself inside the big Orcutt house, with Janet showing them around and Grant's ghost at his elbow. Katie was fascinated. Before they left she was planning the rooms, seeing them in chintz, revising the wide staircase, giving dinners, giving parties. But in the car going home Chris flatly refused to buy it.

"I can't afford it," he said. "And besides, it killed Grant."

He held out for three months, with Katie alternately sulking and cajoling. Then one day out of sheer desperation he went to the bank, drew out his entire balance and signed the necessary papers. By the time Grant had moved in and Katie had done it over, he was obliged to borrow money. For weeks and months decorators were busy, Katie, lying in her bed, would be almost completely obscured by fabrics, by samples of silk and chintz, by drawings of this and that.

It was only by main force that he kept her out of Grant's old bedroom and installed there the shabby but substantial furniture from the old house. But she managed new carpets and curtains, and one day he came home to find her very busy doing over his old desk. He stood gazing grimly down at it, remembering the grime which once had covered it, seeing Lily flicking at it with a feather duster, recalling Annie Lewis looking across it at him with her handsome, haggard face, and seeing Beverly standing beyond it.

He was working feverishly now. Sometimes he did half a dozen operations in the morning, emerging from the operating room exhausted. Now and then he would fall asleep in his chair, or beside some bed. Once he even dozed in the car while he was driving himself, and narrowly escaped an accident. But he needed money constantly, although he was earning comfortably. Sometimes he did not think spring he raised his prices in a desperate attempt to get even with the game.

Scott spoke to him one day about it. He was in his one arm but two clear-seeing eyes.

"What's wrong with you, Chris?"

"Wrong? Nothing that I know of. Of course, a specialty is always a little disturbing, and it's his people I used to know them, and they have me. Have you heard about me. That's different."

He was almost stunned one day, about that time, to hear that Beverly had taken over his old house. Kate told him, watching his face.

"Your old love has taken the house, Chris. Did you know it?"

"What house?"

"Our house."

"I hadn't heard. No."

So she was there, she was in that house they had hoped to share. Her life was to be lonely however, and her old jealousy of Beverly would be increased by the difference in Chris. For a few weeks after Jerry's death she had been unbearably uneasy. Then, nothing happening, she had gone back to his new and enthralling life of hers and dismissed the whole matter from her mind. But Chris could not dismiss it. And after a month of indecision he went to see her, stepping into the hall when Holmes opened the door and once more seeing Lily there, and Mary, and an old little slattern of a girl called Katie. He drew a long breath. Strange to feel more at home here than in Grant's house!

The old offices were still there, but the double doors had become an arch between them. The rooms themselves were gay with chintz and Beverly's grand piano sat in the back room where his desk had been. The washstand had gone, there were old mirrors over the mantels, a few of the smaller pictures from the big house hung on the walls, and here and there were scar he had left from a forgotten cigarette. He was standing eyeing them when Beverly came in, holding out her hand, determinedly smiling.

"Well, Chris," she said, "and what do you think of your house?"

"Why did you do it? Why did you come here, Beverly?"

She hesitated. Then she looked at him with her direct gaze.

"I had to leave the cabin, you know. They were getting ready to build."

She sat down, but Chris did not sit. Here by the register Caesar had lain on cold nights, or had waited for the sound of his master's key in the door.

"I have a dog buried in the yard," he said abruptly. "I'd be glad to think—"

"I'll not disturb him, Chris."

"Why didn't you tell me, Beverly? After all, to meet here—it's no escape my girl. If you want to forget—"

"Perhaps I don't want to forget. After all, Chris, haven't I a right at least to my memories? They hurt nobody. Not even Jerry."

It was dangerous. Too dangerous. He brought himself up with a jerk, and his next words were carefully casual.

"Of course you have, my dear. So have I. And now—how are you?"

"Quite all right, or as right as I can be."

He stayed for a while after that, but the talk was careful surface talk. Was he busy? Didn't Katie look a holiday? When had he taken a real rest? And how did it go with Jimmy Samuel? He answered, but the constraint was there, heavy between them, like a pall.

She was smiling when at last he left her, and she held out her hand away with a feeling of finality and loss. She was living in his house. He had taken her herself out of his life as carefully and as completely as he could. Driving away, he knew that the last page of that book had been closed. But since the day Katie had come Beverly was standing in front of the old mantelpiece, staring blankly at the brown scar on it.

CHAPTER XLIV.

That year Chris undertook the education of Ursula's boy, now a tall lad of twelve. Things had not gone too well with Hiram following the war, and Chris spent a week-end with him and Amy. Young Noel took to Chris at once.

"I've got a puppy in the barn."

"Fine. Let's go see it."

In the barn Noel, sliding down with the puppy in his lap, looked up at Chris and said shyly,

"You're a doctor, aren't you?"

"I'm a surgeon. That's a sort of doctor."

"I'd like to be one, like my grandfather."

Chris leaned down, and picking up a rather grubby hand, examined it carefully. "Look like good hands," he said. "Maybe you'll make a surgeon some day, and when I get old, you can help me. How about it?"

The boy flushed with pleasure, and Chris himself felt happier on his way home after the visit; he had some one to watch now, some one to train and care for, and eventually to carry on for him. After that he wrote to Noel regularly and that fall he spoke to Katie about having the boy there that winter and sending him to a good day school. Hiram and Amy were worried about his education. Katie, however, was not interested.

"Don't be ridiculous, Chris dear. If they chose to adopt the boy, that's their business."

"We have plenty of room here. He could spend the winters in town and the summers at the cabin. Not enough to look after himself. Just enough to keep him busy. There are more than we need of both."

"You must be crazy, Chris darlin', she said flatly. "If you think I'm going to take on anybody's illegitimate child, you can think again."

He tried further, arguing patiently, but she was in a fury now and resentful, and at last he left her on the verge of tears.

It was the first of many such scenes, for Chris found that he needed the boy. He was finding his life to whittle and play about the house, something to come back to after the day's work. Not that the house was quiet, even now. There was a new cook, and that he was running a hotel. He would stumble over Ursula's feet in the rugs turned and the people dancing and even once or twice to find Beverly herself angrily and relieved in his office when he turned in late at night. Sometimes he felt that did not even know him, for Katie's tastes were young and liberal.

"Chris, dear, is Bev—"

"Unfortunately I belong here and I need this room."

"It's the doctor!"

New, bad and casual manners, new clothes, new ideas. He did not belong among any of them. Nor, he began to see, would young Noel belong there either.

"I should like to have the boy here," he wrote to Hiram, "and to see that he got his winter schooling at least. Then you and Amy could have him during vacations and the summer. But for a number of reasons this is not feasible, and so I make an alternative proposition which I hope you will consider."

The alternative proposition was that they accept an annual sum from him until times were better.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation

OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people's are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up dull, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why fierce purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralising power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy in which the mineral mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water sweeps through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. The acid is neutralised quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And the bright sparkle of poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, surely, and passed out of your body. Take do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your drug-gist—and if you like wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight!

He sat for a long time over the letter, heavily depressed. In sent In The idea of youth in his house died hard; and young Noel, if he studied medicine, could not hope to be left off. Medicine was moving on, working hand in hand with science now.

Prime Minister Indisposed

Ottawa, Aug. 24—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, suffering from an attack of sciatica, was unable to attend the funeral in Kitchener today of his old friend and colleague, S. W. Jacobs, member for the Cartier division of Montreal.

Returning Sunday from a series of public functions the Prime Minister was considerably fatigued and a slight attack of sciatica prompted him to remain at his home.

The Prime Minister hopes to be sufficiently recovered to attend a cabinet meeting today.

Faith alone is curing his seven-year-old son, Carl, said Rev. James Winstead, as health authorities at Beaverdam Creek, order a court action to force the father to allow medical treatment of the boy. According to state and local doctors the boy is suffering from a serious bone infection that will prove fatal over their afflicted son.

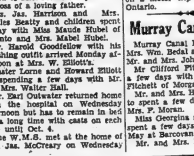
It's No Surprise That You're Constipated!



If constipation has you bogged down as you feel tired, weak, and played out—it's time you asked yourself some questions!

What have you had to eat lately? Just toast, bacon, eggs and potatoes? It's no surprise you're constipated. The chances are if you don't get enough "bulk" and "fruit" in your diet you will be. Don't mean a lot of food—it's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but serves as soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps them in bowel movement.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfast and ma said, This is the day you're going to bring Mr. and Mrs. Hammer home for dinner, Willyum.

Mr. Hammer being pop's boss and pop said, Have you got your menu arranged? and ma said Indeed I have, down to the last deteiled eyes and teas. The only bothersoms fly in the ointment is wheter or they expect after dinner coffee, because if they do I dont see how I can avoid serving it in my new Widgiware demmy tass set, and the very thought of leaving those beautiful delicate cups and saucers for Nora to wash makes me sit on pins and needles, and yet just supposing I offered after dinner coffee to the Hammers in big cups and then they found out afterwards that we're the proud possessors of a set of Widgiwares demmy tasses. Well, I'll let nature take its course, she said.

Meaning she wouldn't decide till she had to, and Mr. and Mrs. Hammer came and we had dinner, Mrs. Hammer not eating as much as Mr. Hammer on account of fanning herself all the time because of the weather, and I don't seem to be able to find a fan as good as my Japanese fan, but I absolutely refuse to use it because of my position, as chairwoman of the Japanese Boycott Club. Ice cream for dizzert, that'll be nice on a hot day, she said.

Wish it was, and ma said, And now how about a little black coffee?

Mr. and Mrs. Hammer both saying yes, and ma said, I have some lovely English Widgiware demmy tasses, at least they're marked Widgiware, but I've been told on accurate authority tat they're really Japanese in diskise.

I shouldn't be a bit surpziad, the stories that of kind I've heard, my dear Mrs. Hammer said. For pity sakes cast forsality to the winds and serve the coffee in ordnerry cups; she said.

Wich ma did trying not to look at pop so he couldn't wink at her.

Scores of rare pieces, treasures of the Odell and Bliss families, both of which left their mark on the pages of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia history, were placed on the block at the auction which disposed of the personal effects of Miss Mary Odell, the last of the family, who died several months ago.

One of the highest bids was that made on an early American porringer, wrought in 1727. It brought $300. A small silver tray on a tripod, dated 1771, sold for $55.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—For the first time this week mines had to share some of the spotlight with industrials on the Toronto Exchange. A feature of industrial trading was the activity in Ford, said to be inspired by bullish earnings reports and rumors of the 1939 model. It hit as high as 20¾ in early trading for a new 1938 high and Ford transfers up to the third hour reached 1,476 shares.

Base metals held their prices well, although metals in London were mixed. Nickel was strong throughout the day. Steels also showed up well.

There was no outstanding strength displayed in the gold list but most issues held up fairly well. Volume in the first three hours was well ahead of yesterday, totalling 250,000 shares.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Aug. 24—(AP)—Stocks reached a barrier to further progress today after forenoon advances had lifted the market generally almost to the July tops of the mid-year upswing.

While prices backed away a bit in most sections they remained fractions to about two points higher near the final hour.

Dealings shrank when the rise lost headway. Transactions were about 1,300,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

The market has been acting in an indefinite manner for several weeks now and many are wondering what the next few weeks will witness. The concensus is that when the present lethargy disappears, due in part to the moving of the crop as well as the general betterment in the Fall on account of seasonal influences, the market will move forward again in a positive manner. Consequently, a little patience is still needed.

Small but by no means unimportant index to capitalistic opinion was the increase in the latest du Pont de Nemours dividend to 75 cents a share. Some 50 cents, the action of the liberal-minded directorate being considered especially significant in view of the announced policy of nearing interim payments to current conditions. The augmented disbursement can be interpreted only as a reflection of the uptrend in the chemical and rayon divisions and the impending upturn in the automobile industry.

Stock prices which have developed a mixed trend during the past week or two have been attempting to stem the tide of fears and apprehension caused by external influences. Within the tense political situation which has been gripping all of Europe and creating many doubts, the market might have shown a stronger trend. Internal factors, however, have developed to push stocks to lower levels in the form of lower commodity prices. The excellent wheat crop in

Cheese Exports Continue to Drop

Toronto, Aug. 24 —Shipments of cheese from Canada to the United Kingdom slipped back last week 9,560 boxes from the preceding week and 1,242 boxes from the corresponding period of 1937, it was revealed in figures released by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The decrease for the current year to date now amounts to 83,314, boxes, or, on an average basis of 85 pounds to the box, 7,329,700 pounds from last year.

Exports from Montreal and Quebec for the week ended Aug. 20 totalled 23,675 boxes as compared with 33,234 boxes in the previous week and 28,917 boxes a year ago. For the period May 1 to Aug. 20, number of cases shipped this year reached a total of 223,252, as against 406,226 last year.

Top grade eggs went higher in value on the local produce market yesterday as butter eased slightly. Cheese ruled steady.

Shipments of first-class eggs were still inclined to be scarce on the market and dealers again raised prices under the good demand. On the other hand, under-grades moved stubbornly. Prolonged warm weather is reported to be lowering quality, with the result that fresh receipts contain major portions of C grades. Graded shipments cleared at the advanced rates of 29c for grade A-large, 26c for medium, 22c for B's and 20½c to 21c for C grades. Ungraded eggs changed hands at 27c for grade A-large 26c for medium, 20c for B's and 18c for C grades. The retail section of the market rose in accordance with the other two divisions.

Quieter trading depressed prices on the butter market. Offerings of fresh make were not burdensome. Western butter, being offered more freely at the figure of 23-1-4 in the present demand, gave a weakening tendency to the Ontario product. Ontario solids were quoted at 23c for No. 1 grades and 22 1-4c for 38 score. Prints remained unchanged.

Sales were practically negligible on the wholesale cheese market. New, large parafined was offered at the former levels of 14c to 14 1-4c; twins at 14 1-4c to 14½c and triplets at 14 1-2c to 14 3-4c.

Butter Eases, Eggs Rise At

Montreal, Aug. 24 (CP)— Butter prices other than those of prints and solids slipped lower on open produce markets Tuesday, according to Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. The continued improvement in demand for high-grade eggs and the drop in receipts forced prices higher. Potatoes and cheese were unchanged.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 24½c to 25c and solids for 24c to 24½c. Western butter delivered here was offered at 22 1-4c. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized price to jobbers was 23 1-8c Re-ceipts: 82 boxes.

Cheese sold at 14 1-8c to 14 1-4c pound for Ontario white, 14 1-4c for Ontario coloured. 13 7-8c for Quebec white and 14c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 1,317 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in last free cases sold at 29½c to 30c a dozen for A-large, 26c to 28½c for A-medium, 24 to 25c for B and 21c for C. Receipts: 1,183 cases.

Potatoes: Quebec No. 1, new, 80's, 55c to 60c; Quebec, new, No. 2, 80's, 35c to 40c.

HAMBURG GREETS HITLER, HORTHY

Heligoland Yesterday Visited By Two Leaders

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 24 (CP)—This leading German seaport, once a Communist stronghold gave an enthusiastic welcome today to Chancellor Hitler and Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, who is in Germany on a state visit.

Arriving from Heligoland, North Sea island, where prominent newspaper stated today is to become an important submarine base, Hitler and Horthy were received by city and government authorities. Afterwards they took a trip around the Hamburg harbor and dockyards accompanied by several high government, military and naval officials.

Island Refortified

The post-war Versailles Peace Treaty ordered destruction of fortifications at Heligoland but it has been heavily refortified by Nazi Germany. Yesterday Hitler showed his guests this new defensive strength.

The newspaper Essener National Zeitung, reporting on the visit, said:—

"Admiral Horthy was given a brief description of the new harbor now under construction. It is being created especially as a base for a submarine flotilla."

The paper said the German Navy's anti-aircraft training station was located on Heligoland.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Mountains and climate! Everyone knows that climate varies from the coast inwards either pole. Superimposed on that gradual change of climate due to latitude are other changes due to several causes. The most important of these are mountains which divert the wind upwards causing the air to cool moisture to condense to clouds and rain to fall—and so the whole face of the earth this condition is as pronounced as to give those places a long record of rainfall. On the other hand, on the leeward side of the mountain, the descending air becomes warmer and drier, resulting in much less rainfall and clearer skies, but with greater temperature variation.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 25 (CP)—A moderate disturbance is centred this morning over Nova Scotia coast with high pressure over the Great Lakes and the Western provinces and Northwest States. Pressure is also low to the northward of Hudson Straits and a shallow trough extending southward to the Kenora and Fort Rainy River Districts. Lake Superior—Moderate southwest winds; mostly cloudy; probably scattered showers tonight. Friday—Moderate to fresh southwest winds; partly cloudy and rather cool; probably light showers over east shore.

Germany Opens Colonial School, Expects to Recover Lost Colonies

Berlin, Aug. 25—(AP)—Confident that in time she will regain her war-lost colonies, Germany will open a school on the 15 to drill Nazi officials in colonial administration.

The Reich leaves no doubt it expects to get the colonies back eventually. The colonial question, Germany's first line of defense of colonies, provides steady material for the press and for orators even at a time when the conflict with Czechoslovakia over the Sudeten is engrossing German attention.

The school, under the patronage of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, is partly the result of an argument used against retaining the colonies—the contention that Germans in the pre-war days proved themselves unfit and incapable of colonization.

Wm. McBratney Instinctively Keeps Afloat Though Unconscious

Flin Flon, Man., Aug. 26 (CP)—Three youthful residents of Flin Flon last night drowned and a fourth was rescued in an unconscious condition from the waters of Schist Lake when a speed boat capsized on the way to a skeleide wiener roast.

The dead:

The speed boat, owned by Oscar Hyman, was carrying them to a point south of the Channing air harbor when it capsized.

Story of Survivor

William McBratney, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McBratney, Flin Flon, was the survivor. He was dragged from the water by occupants of a boat driven by Norbert Piedman, Flin Flon.

LIKE AERIAL BOMB BARREL ESCAPES, CRASHES LANDING

Fireman Missed by Barrel But He Falls Five Storeys

SPRINKLERS SET OFF

H. Waldman Rushes Upstairs And Drops Thru' Gaping Hole

Montreal, Aug. 25—(CP)—A 300-pound barrel of pitch plummeted nine storeys through stairway landings in the Wilder Building on Bleury Street today, leaving two persons injured and causing thousands of the office building into a panic.

Workmen tarring the roof lugged the barrel from the elevator at the ninth floor up the stairs towards the roof. The heavy barrel escaped from them and tumbled down the stairs, bounced in the air and crashed through the marbled stair landing.

Like an aerial bomb, the pitch barrel plunked through landing after landing on its noisy career to the basement. As it burst through each floor it set off sprinkler systems, drenching stairway and corridors.

Fireman Has Escape

Fireman Jack Cloran, repairing a sprinkler valve on the sixth floor, was missed by the barrel. It broke away from the landing two floors above him and he fell five storeys in the wake of the barrel. Cloran was rushed to hospital with serious injuries to head, back, arms and legs.

The other victim was Harry Waldman, 30, partner in the Waldman Dress Company with offices in the building. He was out of the building when the accident happened, but rushed in to see if his premises had been visited. Stumbling up the stairs, he stopped through the yawning hole in the first floor landing and was bruised.

The crashing pitch barrel, the sudden action of the sprinkler system, caused a general panic among the hundreds of persons employed in the building. Many devoted to garment trade factories. Police and firemen were rushed to scene. workers. Repairmen shut off the sprinklers.

Tenants of the building said there might have been a heavy toll if the barrel had not made its plunge at the noon hour, as many girl workers were accustomed to eat their lunches sitting on the stairway.

France Warns Truckers of Gasoline To Spain, Franco Will Bomb Them

Perpignan, France, Aug. 25—Warning that French departmental prefecture warned French automobile convoys carrying gasoline into government Spain today that insurgent General Franco had broadcast the announcement he intended to bomb and machine-gun them with airplanes.

Border officials estimated 100 automobiles and trucks loaded with gasoline enter Spain daily. They go with an official French permit, since gasoline is not regarded in France as among the supplies prohibited by the international non-intervention agreement.

The prefecture warned truck drivers to proceed with utmost caution. It declared more than 100 French truckers were wounded and a number killed in raids by insurgent airplanes on previous automobile transport convoys carrying oranges from Valencia.

DECISIVE TURN SEEMS IMMINENT IN NEGOTIATIONS

Runciman Confers With Anti-Nazi German Minority And Groups

AGREEMENT OR BREAK?

London Hears Runciman May Ask Hitler to End Press Campaign

Praha, Aug. 25—(CP-Havas) William Runciman conferred with leaders of the anti-nazi German minority today as he pressed his efforts to solve the deep-seated conflict between the Czechoslovak government and the numerous national groups.

The unofficial British mediator received Herr Reichenberg, former President and founder of the Catholic Popular Union.

Lord Runciman also received a delegation from the "Heimat Club"—a group of German youths opposed to the Henlein party.

Czechoslovakia, raiding a building in a village near Karlovy Vary today, found stacks of circulars appealing to German residents to boycott a Czech dairy.

Decisive Developments

London, Aug. 25—(AP)—A decisive development in the issue between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten German autonomy-seeking Sudeten German minority appeared imminent today after a hurried conference of British government officials here.

Reliable observers expressed belief a crisis probably had been reached between Prague and a complete agreement on a friendly basis or an open break between the Prague government and the Sudeten Germans.

Visit is "Private"

Speculation was aroused by the hurried return of P. T. A. Ashton-Gwatkin, right hand man of Viscount Runciman, British unofficial mediator in the issue, for conferences with Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

British officials said Mr. Ashton-Gwatkin flew to London on private business and merely happened to see the cabinet members.

But none would specify the nature or his private business or why he came alone. Many explained unexplained was why Mr. Ashton-Gwatkin waited to see Lord Halifax had just left and was persuaded to postpone his conference to the Foreign Secretary until today.

Plans For New Step Forecast

No official would acknowledge that the three men even discussed the Czechoslovakia situation, but it was said privately, that was their only concern.

Diplomatic quarters heard that Britain may have evolved plans for a new step toward solving Czechoslovakia's minority problem.

Possible Development

Three possible developments were reported:

Lord Runciman may be working out his own peace plan.

He may confer with governments, possibly acting with other states, may make a new effort to lessen the pressure of Germany's propaganda from the dispute between the Sudeten Germans and the Czechoslovak government.

It was felt in British ministerial circles that the intensive German press campaign against Czechoslovakia was part of the world opinion and that some steps may be taken to modify it.

Press Campaign Blamed

It has been suggested in London that Germany may make a personal appeal to Chancellor Hitler to bring about the stopping of the press campaign which he feels is undermining his efforts.

The attitude of some official circles to hide the disquiet resulting from the Central European situation. This was due to no particular development, but resulted from preparation of the Czech-Sudeten German problem which is becoming more tangled every day.

Officially, it was denied Mr. Ashton-Gwatkin had seen Hitler's deputy Rudolf Hess in London recently.

HITLER PUTS ON MILITARY SHOW BEFORE HORTHY

Germany Guarantees Integrity of Hungarian Frontiers

TWO-HOUR PARADE

Berlin, Aug. 25—(AP)— Germany followed up a guaranty of the integrity of Hungarian frontiers today with its greatest post-war military display before Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary.

In an exchange of toasts at a state dinner last night, Chancellor Hitler as a "good and neighbor" promised the Hungarian ruler "we as neighbors have found our definite, historic boundaries through historic events" German annexation of Austria on March 13).

Admiral Horthy replied:

"The wish for continuation of peaceful reconstruction which animates us and our friends is safe insurance that our people can pursue successfully the high aim of peace based on mutual trust will and justice through further close collaboration, friendship and with their own interests and those of the rest of the world."

Increased Friendship

Hitler and Horthy discussed the friendship of Germany, Hungary and Italy and the common ideals for which Hungary and Germany fought in the world war.

Chancellor Hitler said he was convinced German-Hungarian cooperation "not only serves the interests of our countries alone but, in also close collaboration with our befriended. Italy, is a pledge of a dignified and just future peace."

Hitler shown Horthy in the two-hour parade that the old Prussian spirit which the Hungarian Admiral learned to know during the Great War still lives. He also showed his guest that Germany has one of the most modern armies in the world from the standpoint of technical equipment.

With traditional Prussian precision the infantry, cavalry, air force and motorized units paraded by, stoppping supply and forming lines straight as dies.

For the first time the officers gave the Nazi salute with outstretched hand instead of the military salute, as they passed the two chief executives. This was by record with the salute applied by parades before the Chancellor.

PULLS 2 CHILDREN FROM HIS TRUCK BEFORE EXPLOSION

Keith Ewan Saves Lives From Distillate-Laden Vehicle

SUFFERS BURNS

Moose Jaw, Sask., Aug. 25—(CP) —Keith Ewan, Moose Jaw truck-driver, saved two small children from death or serious burns last night, when he pulled them from his blazing, distillate-loaded truck before it exploded after an accident six miles east of here.

The explosion occurred after a second truck driven by Henry Rodenbust crashed into it from the rear as Ewan stopped suddenly to avoid an oncoming automobile.

Second Truck Pitches In

It was believed sparks from the motor of the second truck set the distillate-filled tank of Ewan's machine ablaze.

When Ewan saw his truck was ablaze, he jumped out of the cab, ran through one door of the cab and jumped through the other door with the second child. Neither of the children were not immediately available.

Rodenbust and Ewan suffered burns about the hands and face, but not such that which had caught the cab of the second truck, Distillate in the second machine did not catch fire.

Ceiling of Speed on Land Not More Than 360 M.P.H. Says Capt. Eyston

By JACK BEARDWOOD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wendover, Utah, Aug. 25—(AP)— The world's high speed king, Captain George E. T. Eyston of England broke his own record today but an hour he virtually has reached the ceiling of speed on land.

His chief rival, John Cobb, also of London, holds however that there is no limit to the speed of motor car man can attain on the ground.

Eyston, 42, today was officially timed at 347.16 miles an hour as he rocketed his Thunderbolt automobile through the measured mile on the Bonneville Salt Flats just east of here.

He said today dash-board instruments showed he hit "devilish close to 360" in the return run through the mile when high oil on electrical timing device nullified his certain new record.

"Racing tires to hold up at greater speeds than that," he said, "and the outside of the tire is travelling at the speed of sound about 760 miles an hour. If they were completely shielded, the wind alone would rip them side the attack. Another

"After you pass 300, the graph of danger rises almost vertically. Man won't go much faster on land 360 on land and live to tell about."

Speed Limitless

"If you can get tires that will hold up, if mechanical engineering continues its remarkable development, and if you can get long enough straight course, I don't think there's any limit to the speed man could travel."

Cobb, who is awaiting use of the Salt Flats for a record attempt in his Railton-Special Railton car, has Malcolm Campbell, Scotland

D.N.B. said the move was designed to calm the population and to show that it is not possible to tolerate a Bishop who "violated so coarsely his political duties."

The action was based on Mgr. Sproll's refusal to vote in the April 10 Anschluss plebiscite. He was the only eligible voter in his territory who refused.

The end of July a crowd gathered before his house and attempted to burn it down.

ASST. COMMISSIONER MAKING INSPECTION

Assistant Commissioner L. D. LaNauze, officer commanding "A" Division, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Ottawa, arrived in the city today on a tour of inspection.

The most colorful personalities of the "Mounted" served for a considerable length of time in the northwest. He was a member of the famous detachment that scoured the frozen wastes of the Arctic for three years before they finally "got their man".

For some years he was an inspector of Canada's famous police force serving in the Halifax district.

HARD WOOD MAY BE SCARCE THIS FALL

There is little hardwood in the district at present, Mr. Hinds, local, what little supply is left will command higher prices this Fall, stated one local dealer on the local market this morning. "It may go up a couple of dollars a cord," added the salesman.

"For some reason last year the farmers didn't cut as much as in previous years, and there isn't the supply of dried wood on hand," it was explained.

LARGE BASS CAUGHT IN PECULIAR WAY

Burt Wilkins, Station Street resident, not only caught his fish last evening, but he landed his bass, a fine two-pound specimen, neatly tied in the coils of his fish line. The fish, though able to shake the hook free, was hauled into the boat near Gull Island in the bay, tail foremost with a slip knot of the line securely fastened around the smaller part of the betiling bass.

Young Babies Have Their Day And It's Second Day of the Fair

New Arrivals on Earth Centre of One of Drawing Cards

A TYPICAL SCENE

On Wednesday, the youngest competitors at the Belleville Fair come into their own for Wednesday means the Baby Show. This event is always one of the successes of Fair Week and the number of entries grows every year. The Band Stand is the scene of the Baby Show and is the centre of attraction as babies arriving in every type and color of infant vehicle are assembled under vigilant eye of not only the proud mother and father but sisters, cousins, aunts and even grandparents. All but the mother and the all important baby must wait around the bandstand because that capacious building cannot hope to accommodate the competitors and their well-wishers too.

Contestants Weigh In

The Judging is always a lengthy process. Every baby must be weighed, measured, examined by a physician and nurses in charge. And anyone who has tried to weigh an infant realizes the ordeal of weighing in thirty healthy, lively, charming babies. The tiny tots are usually as good as gold during the process. They would naturally prefer jumping up and down on the scales than lying passively through it all. A few protest noisily but most of them find the whole thing an interesting new adventure.

After all records have been made, the actual selection of the prize Belleville baby is extremely difficult. Those who compete are the healthy, well formed, thriving, precise their parents would not enter them in the contest, and so the job of saying which is the best of the better babies is a trying one for those in charge.

Substantial prizes await the winners eight being selected by the judges as follows:

Best Baby Girl over six months and under twelve months — First prize by W. J. McCormick, photos $5.00; second prize by Dolan the Druggist merchandise $2.00.

Best Baby Girl under six months of age—First prize by Bellamy's Drug Store, merchandise $2.00; second prize by Radio Cafe, cash $1.

Best Baby Boy over six months and under twelve months — First prize by Seldon's Store, merchandise $2.00; second prize by Perfect Cafe, cash $1.00.

Secretary Ketcheson Contrasts Fairs 30 Years Ago and Today

Has Long Record With Fair And Can Recall Vast Changes

LAZY EXHIBITOR GONE

Present Day Fair of Much Greater Value Than That of Old

Through the years as younger generations of this central district have succeeded those who have gone before Belleville's annual Fair still remains the centre around which they had begun marching confidently to at last take its place today among the highest in its class in the Province.

Thirty years ago Belleville's Fair though even then regarded as one of the best in the country was a mecca and meeting place for farmers of the district who gowned over the rutted dusty roads to their buggies and waggons, carrying lunches and spare kit to make the day as enjoyable as conditions under the circumstances would permit. It was a period of wide black umbrellas, knitted shawls, jingling harness chains. Hot dogs had yet to work their delicate scents on the gasoline-fired hot plates of the concession tents. The cry of the Hokey-Pokey "Barker" had not been forced to compete with the present day blare and bustle of the modern automatic piano. Those who attended the Fair came to make a day of it in the old fashioned way and left late and picnicked in between.

A Vast Difference

But as a fair then, it differed as vastly as day and night between the modern latter years of the city's and district's annual exhibition.

Visitors then, a decade and more ago, viewed exhibits of pens and stalls of livestock; they found more often than not scrawny sheep and cattle whose coats were in coils and matted from careless pasturing. They viewed horse races which were lackadaisical in performance and effort. They found facilities for amusement, general and personal, entirely lacking and insufficient. But they enjoyed themselves nevertheless.

All this is recalled by Mr. R. H. Ketcheson quite popular Fair Secretary who for more than thirty consecutive years has been acting in his present capacity steering Belleville's annual event through good times and bad.

"Changes from the time I first took over the secretaryship I'm sorry of them", Mr. Ketcheson will answer when queried. "I don't believe there is a man on the Board now who started out when I did. Nearly all of them have passed on. I can think only of Good Campbell of Deseronto, as one who is still around."

Better Stock Recognized

Inconsistent as it may appear in these days of fast motor cars, new world land and air and water records for speed, modern cinemas and other divergent amusements and interests, the present generation is more keenly alive to the need for better stock and better exhibits at the Fair than their fathers of thirty years ago, it was stated by the veteran secretary, pointing to the oldest point of continuous service in Canada. Annually there is shown finer and larger exhibits of livestock and other classes grown, and is fostered by the fact that Belleville's Fair exhibits are among the best in Canada. This has been the unqualified statement made repeatedly by most competent judges of the country.

"Owners today take more care of their stock. They have to to meet the competition of the days of the lazy showman with inferior animals of past. Exhibits have to be good these days to even get "noticed", pointed out Secretary Ketcheson. "How more attention than ever is paid to blood lines and performance.

Track Events Better

"Even in the matter of horse racing, one of the chief attractions of any fair or show, big or small, for past generations, there has been considerable improvement. I'll venture to say that the present trotters are about thirty seconds better than the horses of thirty years ago. Competition in this, as in all other lines, has made for improvement."

Police Blotter

It might be the cool weather, and it might be that the boys are taking a rest, but from last remains that for the last few days peace and quiet ness has reigned in police court circles. No arrests for inebriety have been made, while a minimum number of complaints have been received at the desk.

An Ottawa driver forgot to remove his foot from the accelerator last night as he sped along Dundas street at a rate of speed said to be in the vicinity of 55 miles per hour. Result, a ticket, and an invitation to explain it to the magistrate.

Seven transients, feeling the sudden coolness that made last night one of the best "sleeping" periods experienced in some weeks, sought the security of the police cell-block.

Another heavy offering of harvest fruit, vegetables and other farm and garden produce was displayed at the city market today where a large crowd of Thursday shoppers availed themselves of the abundance offered.

Imported Burbank plums at 40 and 45 cents per basket, and golden peaches at 45 and 50 cents for select fruit headed a colorful fruit display. Huckleberries were quoted at 80 cents per basket with cooking apples demanding 20 cents per peck.

Eggs were not as plentiful as at the week-end but "A" selects were quoted at 27 cents per dozen with a few mediums quoted at a few cents lower.

Some canteloupe was offered at from 10 cents each with a few watermelons that moved slowly at from 25 cents up.

SCHOOLS REOPEN TUESDAY SEPT. 6

End of Long Summer Holidays Drawn Near

Twelve more days the summer holidays, childhood's fondest dream, will be over. Then will follow Saturdays and Sundays and school will be in session.

Considerable misunderstanding exists in the city regarding the date of school opening, but according to official Ontario Department of Education notice today it has been definitely fixed for the day after Labor Day, which day this year falls on September 6, and not the 12th as is rural schools.

For the first few years, it is pointed out by local Board of Education members the Department of Education has insisted on school opening on the first of September, no matter which day that fell, so long as it was not a Sunday or holiday. But this year the Education Department has revised this notion, and has reverted back to the old custom of opening the day after Labor Day.

Board of Education officials state they believe public opinion has caused the change. Many families who vacation at northern lakes for the summer are anxious to get in the last day possible at their camp. Labor Day in past years has generally signalled the date of camp closings.

He said the airliner of the civil-lease-American China National Aviation Corporation, crew and and machine-gunned by Japanese warplanes near Canton yesterday was mistaken for a Chinese bomber.

The Japanese army has designated all of China east of a line between Pakhoi, deep in the south, and Sian, in west-central Shensi Province, a zone of hostilities. The Japanese spokesman said the airliner was flying over this zone and was assumed by Japanese fliers to be a warplane when it attempted to elude their patrol.

Keep Fit at MIDDLE AGE

A good many people are dismayed to find that they are getting old before they know it. There's no reason to feel the slowing of their feeling. If you feel a twinge of Rheumatic Pains, too, don't be surprised. Uric Acid is usually the cause. Luckily a daily 1 teaspoonful of Pyrocan Salt in a glass of water aids to drive this Acid away and helps put your liver—the real culprit—into action again. Just watch that sluggish feeling go when Pyrocan Salt takes effect.

Pyrocan Salt you can obtain at all druggists in three remedial "Salts of the Earth". They are Sodium, Potassium and Lithium. Wherever people seek them far and wide in the "waters" of famous European Spas. But now you can have similar benefits in your own home, from a dose. The Salts of Pyrocan Salt. The effect of these elements in Pyrocan Salt is most beneficial. Pyrocan Salt is obtainable at all druggists everywhere. Your first dose from your druggist will prove what we say. Don't delay. ## JUST BEFORE THE FAIR

In the country and in the city there is now a busy time preparing for the opening of the Belleville Agricultural Society's annual exhibition which opens on Tuesday next. Many exhibitors long since have sent in their entry forms, which this year will make one of the longest lists on record; on the farms the exhibits are already carefully chosen to win the coveted awards which the judges will make; the cattle, the horses, the sheep and the swine receive special regard so that they will appear at their best next week; the grains and the roots are selected, the poultry are naturally plumed beyond usua l attention, the grains and seeds have been selected with great care by the exhibitors, the dairy products are all in readiness, fruits will still be occupying the attention of the fruit-growing exhibitors so as to have the largest and finest quality for inspection. In the homes on the farm the selections of ladies' work has been made for entry, and so it is with the entries in fine arts.

But there is one branch where the exhibitors are not yet quite ready. These exhibits are not yet made. That is in cooking department. Preserved fruits and vegetables are ready, but the home-baking branch is still calling for those careful rural cooks, whose reputation at the range with the pastry, the bread, the pies, the cakes, calls for last minute attention. Somehow they succeed in having these all ready, when the exhibition opens, for the judges to step in and begin their difficult task.

If adults are busy in their departments, what about the junior fair exhibitors? The boys who are the mainspring of this organization are those who will be the farmers of the future day who will decide agricultural and other issues, and their ranks today there is enthusiasm for the opening of the exhibition When their exhibits will be inspected by the judges. In no department of the exhibition will be there a greater demonstration of zeal and enthusiasm than in this same junior fair. As long as that enthusiasm can be maintained and with the type of young men and boys who are interested, there is every assurance that they will carry this spirit into the agriculture of the future, on say perhaps forty or fifty years into the new era. Though many things will be different then from what they are today, there is good hope for Canadian farming, and its development. Its basic principles remain the same.

In these last days of the holidays scholars are fortunate in having occasion to have such a festival towards the close of their vacation. The holidays have taught many things, they have developed initiative and enterprise, they have inspired health, brawn and sinew, have shown the boy and girl the great outdoors and now they can look forward to one of the finest lessons of nature in the autumn exhibition in every class of exhibit. In their ranks therefore there is much ado today, as they prepare to attend the annual show.

For one class particularly there is no time to waste these days—the director and official. They have a multitude of duties to perform, the last minute touches to make the fair mechanism run smoothly.

Such interest speaks for zeal of those interested in the fair, and deserves the wholehearted support of countryside of the district and of the urban population.

SIX MILES A MINUTE

Captain Eyston at Bonneville Salt Flats, sped at the rate of 347.155 miles an hour unofficially and stated his belief that he raced as high as the three hundred and sixty mile rate at times.

That is about six miles a minute for the unofficial record and six miles exactly for the speed he thinks he made.

That crashing speed is a sign of the times. What does six miles a minute mean? It means a minute to drive from Belleville to Foxboro, less than two minutes to get to Trenton and less than twenty minutes to make Toronto. But these are all out of the question because so many factors which make for great speed on sand are not possible on roads. But considering distance only, this is the wonder of today.

How fast can man fly or drive? The ultimate has undoubtedly not been reached. Perhaps as long as man can keep his brain responding to the impulse of the suggestion of speed piled upon speed, his speed will climb.

Merrill, the flier, says he will cross the Atlantic Ocean at a speed of 350 miles an hour in a plane for the French Government. If that is so it means a majestic that man can ask for. Motorists are assured of mechanical perfection in their machines, of good tires, of perfect oil. Today the average drivers look to the champions to prove out these things.

THE CALL OF THE SEA

Though inland far we be,
Our souls have sight of that immortal sea
Which brought us hither.

—Wordsworth.

On the land-locked Prairies we heard the call,
And we stirred 'mid our inland dreams;
We looked to the West, but the Rockies' wall
Dammed up the ocean streams;
We turned our eyes to the East, and there
The Great Lakes opened free,
And the call came clear on the morning air
From those Sisters of the Sea!

Deep called to deep o'er a broad terrain,
Where Niagara's cataracts leap!
And we felt the drawing of the main
Where the eddies swirl and sleep;
We felt the pulsing of the tide,
We breathed the freshening brine,
And we saw majestic vessels ride
On rivers fringed with pine!

We saw blue harbors filled with ships,
From liner to schooner tramp,
Till the docks were crowded at the slips
Like cedars in a swamp!
While mingling with the city's throng
The wide-eyed sailor rolled,
And the strain of a merry sailor song
Came back from the days of old.

God left some minor work undone,
Lest men should idle be,
So we linked those mighty Lakes in one
Great Highway to the Sea:
The migrants came from the ends of the earth,
The Prairie lands were filled,
And the yearning spaces of the North
By a hardy race were tilled.

We obeyed the beckoning of the dream,
We followed the Seaward call,
And we harnessed the swift St. Lawrence stream
Where it plunges to Montreal!
The gates of the East were opened wide
To all flags in peace unfurled—
To the ebb and flow of that living tide
Which traffics around the world!

BELLEVILLE FAIR. BIGGER AND BETTER THAN EVER, BEGINS Tuesday next.

x x x

BELLEVILLE POINTS THE WAY TO BETTER THINGS, we venture to hope. More than a year ago the electors of Belleville approved at the polls the City Manager form of municipal government. This being anathema to politicians the bill to implement it was strangled in the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature. Since then the desire for a better form of municipal government has been spreading rapidly and even Toronto is intensely interested in the subject. Toronto Globe has been giving much space to the subject and probing into its operation in various large and small centres. The Globe's leading editorial in Wednesday's issue concerned the subject and called upon service clubs to take an active interest in the matter. The question is such a live subject in Toronto that the Mayor of that city has been requested to take the position of City Manager in a general reorganization of the city's municipal administration which is admitted to be cumbersome and inefficient. Just goes to show that good ideas will not stay down, and that Belleville citizens who favor City Management are simply ahead of the times. Their action, however, has attracted widespread interest in the subject and investigation, and while we may be the loser for the delay, still, the satisfaction of being proven right helps to compensate.

x x x

TORONTO GLOBE CALLS UPON THE SERVICE CLUBS of that city to get busy investigating City Manager form of civic government. Belleville service clubs did just that several years ago and from the information received were sold to the system as a vast improvement on old-fashioned municipal administration. Seems as how there must be a one-man head to any successful business. Too many cooks may not spoil the broth, but, ginger cookies,

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 25th., 1918.

The third game of baseball in the G. T. R. series was played last night on the Pine Street School grounds before a crowd of about one hundred and fifty fans. The result was the team representing the shops defeated the office staff team by a score of 13 to 12. Although the score was large the game was interesting and the hitting on both sides was terrific. The closeness of the score gave the fans a chance to test their lungs. The following composed the teams: Shops—Rainbird, Shane, Miles, Brown, McKinnon, Taylor, Pollwell, Ford, and Schrieder. Office Staff—Morden, Young, Andrews, Meaghan, Pringle, Barrett, Cumming, Belsey, and Ross. "Stubb" Barrett and "Billy" Pepper umpired the game to the entire satisfaction of all.

A white poodle dog, much prized by its owner, Police Sergt. Arthur Harman, was so seriously injured when struck by a motor car early today that it had to be destroyed.

30 YEARS AGO

August 25th., 1908.

Mr. J. E. Crooks, of Wellington, was in town yesterday calling on some of his old friends.

Mrs. (Capt.) Fagan and two daughters, South Yonge Street, left yesterday to visit friends in Toronto.

Dr. J. F. Reid and Mrs. Reid, of St. Louis, Mo., are visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mills and family left today for Brockville where they will reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Davis returned to Toronto today after visiting friends here for the past two weeks.

Col. M. J. Hendrick and Mrs. Hendrick, formerly of Belleville, now of Moncton, N. B., are visiting friends in the city. Col. Hendrick is now U. S. Consul at Moncton.

Mr. William Mackintosh, Madoc, School Inspector for North Hastings, was a visitor in town today.

40 YEARS AGO

August 25th., 1898.

The peach crop will be less than average this season.

Don't forget the moonlight excursion to Deseronto tomorrow evening.

A fishing party went down the bay yesterday on the yacht Cutter and had fine sport. Twenty seven fine black bass were caught.

On the market today fruit was plentiful, especially grapes, and they sold at five cents per quart. Butter was scarce and sold at 23 cents per pound; eggs brought 10 cents per dozen.

Mr. Geo. E. Fox will sing at a concert in Avonmore this evening.

Mrs. Edward Bishop is visiting friends at Moira Lake.

Mr. Theodore F. Seymour, of Madoc, is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. W. W. Chown is in Toronto on business.

Mr. Will Doyle left yesterday to visit friends in New York City.

Mr. Morphy, of the Bank of Montreal, Almonte, Ont., has returned home after visiting friends here.

50 YEARS AGO

August 25th., 1888.

Mr. R. Purdy is anticipating a scarcity of feed this winter and has advertised a sale of live stock to take place on October 1st. A number of entries have been made already.

As the excursion season will soon end, many persons will, no doubt, take advantage of the excursion to Picton on Saturday per steamer Quinte. The trip will be made by moonlight.

Messrs. James D. Clarke and A. F. White each got a good size muskinonge on Thursday and Mr. John Hambly got one yesterday. The water is rough for successful fishing.

Mr. Will Tickell, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was in town yesterday. He has a large furniture warehouse on King Street, and reports business as flourishing.

Messrs. Thomas McRae and C. E. Lyons, of this city have been successful in passing the second year intermediate law examinations at Toronto.

Finding Out the Food or Foods That Cause Dyspepsia.

When we think of foods that may cause hives (urticaria) or other conditions such as asthma, eczema, or a running nose (rhinitis), our first thought may be of strawberries or tomatoes or other fruits and vegetables. And when we think of attacks of indigestion and gas formation we may think of cabbage, onions, cauliflower, cucumbers and radishes. Yet Dr. Walter Alvarez of the Mayo Clinic, who has done so much research work on digestion and food says in the Ohio State Medical Journal:

"How many patients there are who ask for a diet slip and how many there are who could be helped or cured if we were only to teach them how to find the foods which are causing their gas or indigestion or headache or pain in abdomen.

We now realize that it will come as a shock to many to know that at least one in every four dyspeptics have no trouble with stomach, intestine, liver or gall bladder; all their symptoms are due to eating one or more of the good nourishing foods we eat nearly every day.

How can one find out what food or foods are causing the dyspepsia?

There are two principal ways of finding out the offending foods. When the pain or indigestion or migraine (one-sided headache) comes in attack at intervals of weeks or months a written record should be made of the unusual foods we eaten every day which were eaten in the twenty-four hours before the upset and particularly at the previous or last meal that was eaten before each upset. If there was this food should be left alone to see if relief is obtained."

If the disturbance is present every day as often with lamb, rice, butter, sugar, and canned pears is used as these foods seldom cause trouble. If the patient is comfortable on this diet, Dr. Alvarez adds beef, potatoes, gelatin, turnips, asparagus, carrots, string beans, arrowroot cookies, rye crisps, thin toast and oatmeal—switching for trouble after each addition.

Have Your Coupons Ready

Three patrons of Belleville Fair this year will have reason to long remember the occasion with pleasure for three lucky patrons will have the privilege of purchasing an automobile for the small sum of one dollar. Each evening, after the grand stand performance, there will be a drawing to see who holds the lucky ticket entitling them to purchase one of the three automobiles presented by the Belleville Fair Board for one dollar. The coupon holder must be on the grounds and must present the lucky coupon when the number is called. This will be an interesting ceremony nightly and loud speakers will be used so that everybody holding coupons can hear plainly.

Just a tip to coupon holders—have your coupons listed in order on a sheet of paper so that you can see at a glance whether the lucky number is yours.

Those who fail to win the first drawing will have a chance at the two other drawings, and so "hope will spring eternal" in many breasts until the last drawing is made.

Dick's Interfering Muse

By MILDRED WELLS

When Dick Williams decided to try his luck at short-story writing he made just one mistake. He told Margie.

Margie was his very charming next-door neighbor. Margie danced well, played tennis well enough, and was always full of good spirits. She was twenty-two. And she was pretty. But, so far as Dick was concerned, that was all.

Dick's mother, with whom he lived in the house where he had been born twenty-six years before, was away on a month's visit to a sister. And when the managing editor of the paper on which Dick was a reporter told him to take a day off the next week in celebration of the completion of a series of interviews Dick had written, felt that he must talk over his idea with someone.

"You see," he said to Margie the evening before the great day, "I know I could write if I had a chance—anyway I think I could. Fiction, I mean, so when old man Elwell passed out this day off to me, I just decided I'd try my luck. I'll just begin early in the morning and work right on. If I get a good story under way, all right. If not, then that's all right too. I'll feel better to have a chance to try."

After an airy breakfast next morning Margie, the maid, started happily forth with an unexpected day of before her.

"Peace and quiet," sighed Dick, "and no interruptions." Then he made ready for work by a cheerful living room window—and the telephone rang.

"Is Margie there?" came a rich burred voice.

"I'm sorry, but she's off for the day," answered Dick, still cheerful. "Anything I can do?"

"No, it's nothing very important," answered the voice, "but tell her to call cousin Anna tonight!"

Dick hung up and went back to his desk and began to plot his story. Here's name — Willy Wetzenbach. Heroine's name—well, what? Margie seemed to fit best. Yes, Stan and Margie. He'd lay the story in—in front cobbell rang.

Five minutes later, after an argument with the laundryman, Dick was back to his task.

Colorado, that was the place for his story. He put down some notes about how his characters looked. Margie—small, brown, soft eyes, fluffy hair. And then there was a knock at the back door. The butcher's boy and Margie.

Dick's muse was a coy one, and after he had answered the telephone to talk for ten minutes with a friend of his mother's, had gone again to work. Margie had grown crossly at a boy soliciting magazine subscriptions, had gone to the cellar to let in the gasmeter man—but through Dick's muse was distinctly upset.

Pattering footsteps on the side verandah.

"Well, darn!" exclaimed Dick when he was left alone.

There was Margie, a basket on her arm. It was then he realized that he had been a little cruel to Margie his plans.

"I'm sorry," he said. He looked tired and irritable and uncomfortable. "Well, anyway, I'll get lunch. Were you going to have any?"

She pushed her way past Dick and laid out a tempting lunch.

"I've been watching your house this morning, Dick, and there's not every Tom, Dick and Harry's been here to bother you."

"You don't know the worst. Telephone's been going the whole darned day. Cook, hostess good."

"It's cold," said Margie.

"Oh, bang!" shouted Dick. "Guess I've let the furnace fire go out."

"You shouldn't try to write and keep house, too," said Margie. "I suppose you think I'm another bother. Good by. Just settle down to work again and try to forget all the bothers."

He didn't notice that the side door didn't slam shut. And he didn't hear Margie's investigating steps into the cellar for five minutes later she slipped quietly back into the room, a log and some kindlings in her arms. Her arm. "Furnace is all right," she said reassuringly. "I've opened the draughts. Just stop worrying." And she put the kindlings and log in the fireplace, touched a match to the paper under them, and, when they were blazing, cleared up the lunch things and then sat down quietly beside the fire with a magazine.

The afternoon went amazingly well. It seemed to Dick, the most natural thing in the world to have Margie there—answering doorbells and telephones and keeping the detail of worries from him.

At six he stretched his long legs under the table, clasped his arms behind his head and looked across the room to Margie, still sitting quietly by the fireplace.

"Margie," he said, rather sweetly. "I think I've got it. I mean, I think it's a real story. And it's due to you. Not just keeping away the interruptions—more than that."

"Well—" said Margie.

"Margie, the heroine's like you. She's little, and brown, with soft eyes, and fluffy hair. And then there's the hero. He's a big, strong, silent fellow, and he's in love with the heroine, but he doesn't know it. And he's always getting into trouble, and she's always getting him out of it. And—"

"Well—" said Margie.

"And I'm going to dedicate it to you," said Dick. "Because you've been a real inspiration. Now I'll get to work."

"Well, darn!" exclaimed Dick when he was left alone.

There was Margie, a basket on her arm. It was then he realized that he had been a little cruel to Margie his plans.

Writing Your Bread-and-Butter Letter

Your bread-and-butter letter is your opportunity to show that you are a pleasant and appreciative guest.

Write this letter within a few days after you have returned home. The sooner you write it the easier it will be for you to make your words blossom with "sweet remembering". Always address your letter to the hostess; at least write the first letter to your hostess, even if you later write individual ones to other members of the family. In the letter to your hostess express your appreciation, too, to the host for his hospitality.

As you "take your pen in hand" to write this letter, your thoughts and words will flow more facilely if you consider the point of view of your hostess as she reads your letters. Put yourself in her place, and think that you would like to be thanked for, if you were she. Then your words won't seem to take her hospitality for granted. There probably was extra planning to be done, extra time and budgetary adaptation on the part of all the members of the family. You have to be a pretty nice guest to deserve all this, and your letter should indicate that you were!

Besides thanking for the general spirit of hospitality, remember to thank for special plans made for your comfort and entertainment. A lovely room looking on some quiet trees that your hostess knew would bring you a needed rest, Opportunities to meet delightful friends of the family. Your favorite sports thoughtfully planned for. A tea, a luncheon, a bridge party, a dinner, a dance given in your honor. Motor rides, picnics arranged for you. Such specially-made plans call for special thanks.

Don't think that I am advising you to write about all these things. I am trying to draw out from the ordinary visit a detail or two which will check up with your experience and which deserved thanks. Your bread-and-butter letter needn't be a four-or-five page expression of thanks. But on the other hand, it should not be stiff or formal.

Widow Announces Daughter's Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me how Mrs. Brown, who is a widow, should announce her daughter's marriage? Should her name on the announcement read: Mrs. Mary Brown or Mrs. James Brown?

B.

I am so happy that you wrote to me about this for I would like to save "Mrs. Brown" from committing a fundamental social error. A widow should use exactly the same form of name that she used when her husband was living. Her formal name is Mrs. James Brown and she should avoid as much as possible a slogue using the form Mrs. Mary Brown at any time and certainly on such a formal item as a marriage announcement.

Mrs. James Forbes Brown has the honour of announcing the marriage of her daughter

Wiser to Be Honest or Loyal?

Honesty is Better in Dealing With Child, Says Lisa Grenelle

(By LISA GRENELLE)

AT MORE or less regular intervals in the past I have stressed the importance of parents presenting a united front in the presence of children no matter how much they may disagree in private. There is nothing more confusing or demoralizing to a child than to have Mother say "yes", while Father says "no".

Nevertheless, to the best of rules there always is an exception. And unfortunately, there sometimes comes a time when we are driven to choose between honesty and loyalty. I think in such a crisis we must choose honesty for dishonesty may lose you the child's confidence for good.

Certainly in the following case Mother could have made no better choice, I believe.

Designed Theatre

Father had designed an exquisite toy theatre perfect in every detail. With care and skill and infinite patience he had modelled the characters from his favorite plays as well.

Father kept this treasure in the bottom drawer of his desk, and often he took it out to show Mother and the children. Later the production of some favorite play became a family pastime on Sundays.

This form of occupation particularly appealed to the second son, James. But Sunday afternoons were too far apart, so one day James, with no sense of guilt, for Father had never forbidden it, took out the treasured theatre and set it up for himself.

Father coming home tired from work found him so absorbed and busy that he was unaware. James had done that happy fact did not seem to lessen Father's anger any. James was sent to bed.

Said Nothing

Mother watched, listened, but said nothing in James' defense. She was not going to come between Father and son.

But later, when she took James his supper, he asked her very straight: "Mother, do you think Father was fair?"

By the tone in her son's voice, the look in his eye, Mother knew that James himself new that his father had not been fair. So she said:

"Are you always fair, James? Sorry She Kissed Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My parents are the kind that think that the boy who goes with a girl is the one she must marry. I'm 17 years old and will be a senior in high school in June. I have been going with a boy for four months, not exactly on the sly, but I've kept my mother from finding out with him occasionally; but as much as I've been with this boy, he has never tried to kiss me. I really admire him very much for this.

Although I'm very fond of him, I never intend to marry him because I'm going to be something else, too. The other evening when I went out with him, I told him we would be just seeing each other, because my mother objected. We're going now to the movies. I plan to hope to stay away from my home town until school starts, so it will be easier for me to get over it. What the way home from the date with him I kissed him. He was quiet for me before we parted, and I consented.

Later, when we got home, I asked him to kiss me good-night and he answered, very sorry. I think it must despise me for it and I feel as though I shall never be able to face him. Now, what am I to do as I do want to keep on being friends with him, but that's very much.

Marianne

I don't believe that boy will find it very hard to forgive you after asking for a goodnight kiss my dear. You were brought up to do about not seeing him occasionally. Granted he isn't the type you wish to marry, he may be the type of which good friends are made.

Employed Wife Fears She Has Spoiled Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Two years have passed since we married. During that time my husband's business has not made much progress and he has never thought of getting a position anywhere. However if he should it would be difficult to live with him because he's the type that can't take it. He feels so abused and has a lot of false pride.

I meet all expenses with my salary, and have always given him money, but instead of helping him, I think it has spoiled him and made him lazy. He doesn't even feel under any obligation to me. I would still be happy in spite of all this, if he would, at least, tell me he appreciated what I'm doing and that he was hopeful of our future.

Discouraged.

Not a day passes but I get similar letters to yours and I hope I'm not going to bring the wrath of my own set down on my head when I say that I feel terribly sorry for these men. Their attitude is a protest against the society in which they find themselves. They're jobless and have to depend on their wives for support and that makes them hard to live with. Their seeming ingratitude is what psychologists call "defense mechanism"—a bluff to show that they're not humiliated.

The only cure is a real job, but this tragic state of affairs is bound to come to an end before very long. This lady has been sorely tried and I hope she'll continue to meet the situation with good sportsmanship. Meantime the job own sake I hope the husband will find any sort of job that comes along.

Protect Your Hands By Wearing Gloves

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

COME OUT of the garden, little girl, and give your hands a couple of once-overs. You've pulled weeds, shoveled dirt, and now look at your gloves, like a good girl! Why don't you look like the pretty summer creatures in the magazines who go about with a pair of shears and a flower basket?

Do you know that you can pick up infections from the soil? A tiny wound and you're in it. Not only for hand protection, but for the sake of your health you should keep your hands covered. Think what grime does to the skin, how it thickens and injures your nails. These facts should sink into the mind of the housewife who digs into dusty places without having her hands covered.

Rough work without protective measures make the hands wrinkle, look old. Old hands are as hard to bear as a face that has aged prematurely.

One advantage of the upsidity hairdress is the comfort it brings. No fear that it will be in a heap, reliance of ringlets blanketing the nape of the neck.

To arrange sculptured curls atop your brain, you'll need a triple mirror.

What's your lung capacity? Can you take a deep breath, increase your chest measurement an inch or more? If you are in the habit of breathing lightly, not pulling the air into the lower cells of the lungs, your chest expansion won't be anything to write home about.

Fresh air taken in large doses, is the best of all complexion beautifiers. It has a vitalizing effect upon the blood streams, brings pretty shades to the cheeks, makes eyes sparkle and youthifies the complexion.

Smoking is causing discolored teeth; but bad! How long! Bicarb is a help. A twice yearly cleaning by the dentist will keep smoke spots away.

By using the holder the little fingers won't be discolored.

Don't forget that if you want the rolls of your coiffure to stay put and not so scraggly you must keep the hair clipped to a four-inch length. Longer tresses drag out. Hair nets are a help. Fancy hair nets coming back the quaint things!

FLORENCE GEORGE
Takes good care of her lovely hands.

A sagging mattress has a bad effect upon the figure. The mattress should be flat not too soft.

Restful sleep is the great restorative does more for a woman than all the cosmetics ever compounded. Bed clothing must be light, but sufficiently warm, the pillow not too high. A current of air in the room will help one to awaken refreshed in the morning. Sleep fitfully, be uncomfortable and you'll start the day with a terrible-looking, before-breakfast face.

THE AWFUL PRICE YOU PAY FOR BEING NERVOUS

Drugs Aid In Curing Mental Ills

Shock Treatments Prove Helpful At Times

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

At the convention of the American Medical Association at San Francisco recently many advances in medical science were demonstrated.

In the articles in the next few days I shall describe the subjects that attracted my own attention.

The treatment of certain forms of insanity by shock therapy was the subject of Dr. Ernest Gellhorn's paper. This is quite new, and except that its value has been demonstrated over and over as actual tests, it is so surprising as hardly to be believable.

The cases in which the treatment works best are those of split personality, particularly in young people. The drugs used are insulin and metrazol. The patient is given enough of these so that a condition of profound shock is induced.

Restored to Normal.

Then restoration to normal is produced. The idea is that the shock to the brain is sufficient, so that it is thrown completely out balance and it may suddenly come back into gear.

It is a dangerous treatment and deaths have occurred, but many of the relatives of these people are willing to take the risks—are willing to do anything which holds out any hope.

The injection treatment of hernia is another new subject discussed by Drs. Franklin I. Harris and A. S. White of San Francisco. Here again is something that few surgeons would have looked on with favor a matter of ten years ago.

But experience has proved that with proper care this injection treatment gives good results and saves the necessity for an operation with the attendant discomforts.

Questions From Readers.

Septagenarian: "Will you tell me whether rather severe cramping of the muscles of the feet and calf of the legs is merely a concomitant of advanced age or is a symptom calling for specific medical attention?"

Answer: The condition is called "intermittent claudication." It is caused by thickening of the arteries of the legs and as such is a concomitant of advanced age. Treatment is not very successful. Heat, with elevation of the feet, and heat, give as much relief as anything.

A. J.: "My eyebrows are naturally thick, so in order to improve my appearance I tweeze them. I am told that this will affect my eyesight. Is there any truth in this?"

Answer: Not whatever. It will do no harm of any kind.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today:

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)

Hard for Wife to Love Husband Who Fails to Provide For His Own

(Copyright, 1938 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

DEAR MISS CHATTFIELD:

I'm in such a jam and don't know how to get out. To make the long story short I fell in love when I was fifteen with a boy five years older. For three years I have loved him and for the past year have not dated anybody else. I realize this was a mistake. The boy's family isn't in our social register but they are plain respectable people and he doesn't gamble or drink. The sad part of it is that he has no ambition, won't hold a job and is perfectly satisfied to drift from pillar to post. I know that if I marry him I will always have to bring in the bacon and I feel that I owe more to myself, my family and my friends. Outside interests are church, girl clubs, horseback-riding but these things don't keep me from being miserable and lonely if I give up the boy I love.

Caroline Chatfield

ALICE.

ANSWER:

Alice, you've stated your case clearly, reasoned about it, thought it over sensibly and now you should put the young man on probation. To shorten the advice as you shorten the story: Reduce the number of dates with him; throw out some lines for new friends; make it plain to the one you love that when, as, and if he shows signs of seriousness, sticks to his job, saves his money and indicates that he has a future, then and not until then will you concentrate all your time and attention on him.

If he has the stuff in him this will bring it out. If he hasn't, the short pain of parting from him will be mild by comparison with the long pain of living with him—unless it happens that you are one of the rare women who, work despite a loafing, drifting husband.

I have often quoted a physician through whose offices thousands of women pass every year. He says that a woman can forgive every sin in the masculine catalog before she will forgive a disinclination to the first duty of a man: to provide for his own. She can't respect him if he won't work and try to produce and she can't continue to love him when she feels contemptuous of him.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I'm an old lady seventy-eight years old, living with my only son, far away from my home. I always read and enjoy your column and none more than a recent one paying tribute to the 'old folks.' It was grand of you to express sympathy for us and every word you wrote is true. Young America is impatient with age. Young people do not remember the fourth commandment. When I was a child, my father taught me to hold old people in respect and reverence which is as it should be. This generation is not being taught to do this. I thank you for your kind words in behalf of us old people.

AN OLD LADY.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Letters unsuitable for publication will be answered personally provided they contain stamped, self-addressed envelopes. All names are held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, in care of this newspaper.

Poems That Live

THE MOUNTAINS ARE A LONELY FOLK

The mountains they are silent folk,
They stand afar—alone;
And the clouds that kiss their brows at night

Hear neither sigh nor groan.
Each bears him in his ordered place
As soldiers do, and bold and high
They fold their forests around their feet
And bolster up the sky.

—Hamlin Garland.

SHIPWRECK

Under the Willows

We, who by shipwreck only find the shore
Of divine wisdom, can but kneel at first,
Can but exult to find beneath our feet
That long stretched vainly down the yielding deeps
The shock and sustenance of solid earth;
Inland afar we see what temples rise
Through immemorial slems of sacred groves,
And we conjecture shining shapes
Of gods therein;
Yet for a while 'tis good to wander here
Among the shells and seawood of the beach.

—James Russell Lowell.

Youngster Uses Bad Language

Mother Asks Myers How to Correct Boy's Speech

By GARRY C. MYERS PH.D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

Many mothers write me concerning the child who uses uncomprehensional words, or calls his parents or other persons by ugly names.

A certain mother expecting soon another baby a woman with considerable education, and formerly an executive in a hospital, writes, "I admit this business of being a parent is the greatest, and yet the hardest, of all." How often I have read like statements from ex-teachers and ex-nurses!

Then she tells of her anxiety over some of the sentences uttered by her five-year-old son, and makes a very keen analysis of the problems involved.

Must Not Be Repeated.

To the child who uses obscene, or profane, or near-profane words, it is well to explain at a quiet moment that his family and other cultivated persons do not use them. In case they are mere exclamations they will probably disappear; even if they should linger they would not be serious. Should such words be used by the child ever after as a quiet statement that we wish he would not use them will generally bring desired results.

But if the child of three or ten calls a playmate or any adult a name designed to be uncomplimentary, let us clearly tell the child it must not be repeated. In case it is, let us punish him effectively. Isolation or assignment to sit in a certain place doing nothing for 30 minutes may be a good type of punishment. If the child is old enough to write, it might be well to make him write the condensed word or phrase a specific number of times; perhaps no better way is known for objection to the expression. Just to have him repeat it aloud a hundred times should help him.

The habit of calling persons by ugly names should be attacked early. Allowed to grow, it can become very annoying to all concerned, and it is likely to bring disapproval upon the family. And the child engaging in it is cultivating a most unwholesome social attitude; it is obnoxious to good manners. It is astonishing how many parents allow their children to call them ugly names, and how many, of course, that is significant, but the attitude it implies. If my child should call me a dumb-bell, clearly meant to be in fun, though the truth, I should want to know the reason. Moreover, I'd be were to call me an angel in contempt, I should count his attitude a serious offense.

USE GLYCERINE

If it's a meat salad you're making, lubricate the chopper with glycerine instead of oil, and you will run no risk of after-tastes. This is also a helpful hint for the electric beater.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

LOOKING AHEAD we find that fur coats will be more dressmaker-detailed than ever. An advance model in sleek black mink comes from pleat fulness and a tie sash of the fur. A rounded shoulder and flared sleeves are other details. A globe-section collar of silver fox and silver fox muff complete this rich coat.

Always yours for yeoman service is the fine brown taffeta dress for trimming. A splendid travel and all-purpose coat is of oatmeal beige tweed with a horseshoe collar in suel House.

Under the stars we've noticed many pretty printed taffeta dresses. A beauty is in black paper taffeta with an enormous flower design in green and purple. It is worn with a purple ostrich feather cape.

Already set for autumn is the trim-come hat, and you will see many a steel gray felt worn tilted forward. Added height is given by a nuge bow of contrasting felt and gray satin ribbon the bow placed at the center of the crown.

Going out in the afternoon to smart town places one notices some colored silk jersey frocks. A new model is in plum colored light-weight silk jersey. The bodice has slanted plaiting at the side and is straight all-round pleats. Very low surplice neckline.

Nice pick-up for a summer wardrobe is soft, light dress of some kind of wheat colored linen with brick-red kidskin trimmings.

Enamelware

There is no enamelware which is absolutely perfect, but the best grades won't chip if they're handled with ordinary care, because they won't stain when foods are cooked in them, and they have a smooth, easily cleaned surface. Enamelware comes in attractive colors and is ideal for saucepans, double boilers, and other top-of-the-stove cooking.

No, Moles Never Go Away

Goodnight Stories

By MAX TRELL

"AH! HERE we are at last!" Mr. Earthworm exclaimed. "Stop right here, please" he called down to the snail.

The snail-taxi stopped, and Handi, who was riding on top of the shell with Mr. Earthworm, looked ahead of her. She saw a small door with a sign hanging from it reading: Mole Family Hotel House.

"Yes, that's it all right," she said cheerfully. She climbed down from the shell and rapped on the door. "I'm sure we found it so quickly," she said to the earthworm. "If it weren't for you, I don't think I would ever have been able to find it. It isn't easy finding a tunnel under the garden. Do you think they're at home?"

"Oh yes, I'm sure Mole family hardly ever goes out. They're all pretty near-sighted. I mean, they don't see very well. So they stay down in the tunnel where it's so dark that it doesn't matter if they can see or not. Ah! I hear footsteps. Here comes someone now."

Knarf Pops Out

Handi got ready to say, "Good evening, Mrs. Mole—," when the door suddenly opened and, instead of should put his head out but her brother, Knarf.

"What are you doing down here?" she exclaimed in surprise. Mr. Earthworm was surprised, too. "You don't look much like a mole," he said.

"Oh no. He's just my brother, Knarf."

"I found the back door down to the Mole family's tunnel," Knarf said. "It was on the other side of the garden wall. But I don't think any of them are home. I've looked all over. I've even found their dining room with the table all set for dinner."

"What are you doing here?"

Hears a Noise

"But they must be in their house somewhere," Handi said. "Mr. Earthworm says they hardly ever go out."

"Listen!" Knarf said suddenly, "I hear a noise."

"They're all work!" the Earthworm said. "They're digging a new tunnel somewhere."

"We've got to find them at once!" said Handi.

Knarf and Handi were about to run down the tunnel but the Earthworm stopped them. "There's no use trying to find them in this tunnel without a light. We'll all get lost. Just wait here a moment. I'll get a light."

BELLEVILLE FAIR AUG. 30, 31, SEPT. 1 AND 2

The President Speaks

Indications that up to the present have surprised even the most ardent supporter, point to the 1938 edition of the Belleville Fair as being one of the biggest and best ever presented to the public of this district, Mr. D. A. Thrasher, President of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Agricultural Society, stated today.

And Mr. Thrasher, who has been connected actively with the Board for the past fourteen years, two of them as First Vice-President should know whereof he speak.

CLASS "B" FAIR.

With justifiable pride, he pointed out that the Fair that starts here on August 30th and extends for the following three days is easily the best Class "B" Fair held between Ottawa and Toronto.

"Farmers of this district," he said, "are taking more than the ordinary pride in the quality of their different exhibits. For the past number of years they have been content to show the ordinary kind of cattle, horses, livestock, grains ,etc., but of late they have realized it is just as easy to grow the better quality and compete in the higher class Fairs."

EXHIBITS FROM FAR AND NEAR.

Mr. Thrasher expressed pleasure at the near record number of entries that have been attracted to the Fall Exhibition. The cream of cattledom and livestock, poultry, sheep and other agricultural products, not only of this district but of this part of the province have made a wonderful contribution to the exhibit, he said.

The aim of the Board in providing bigger and better fairs is to encourage the farmer to get away from the common class of exhibit and instil in him a desire for the better-class products that not only bring the best exhibition up to par with better class Fairs, but result in an increased quality of general farm produce throughout this and adjoining counties.

AN OUTSTANDING AGRICULTURIST.

A native of Hastings County, Mr. Thrasher is one of its outstanding agriculturists, specially in the raising of grains, in which he has taken many valuable prizes in standing crop competitions. His entries in this particular field were some of the first to be received by the Secretary. The Thrasher cattle likewise have been entered, and the genial President entertains high hopes of seeing the red ribbon of first prize being awarded to his many fine specimens.

PUBLIC IS INVITED TO BE DISAPPOINTED.

"The public will not be disappointed when they view the splendid exhibition the Board of Directors have arranged for their benefit this year. No stone has been left unturned in our efforts to bring the best in agricultural, amusement, merchandising, and educational circles here so that the people of this district will get a first hand view of the progress being made by the enterprising residents of Belleville and her rural communities," he said.

HIKERS AT NIGHT TELL SAD STORY OF ENDLESS TRAIL

Forms Bob Up Out of Darkness And Signal For Lift!

What of these people who loom suddenly out of the darkness as one motors at night along No. 2 Highway from Belleville to Toronto? Where are they from? Why are they there by the roadside jerking hopeless thumbs in the middle of the night uttering dumb prayers to the passing motorist?

This week travelling alone to Toronto, a local man tried to find out. Just before midnight after traffic had lulled for the day he took his car out of the garage and turned west to the broad King's Highway determined to pick up all who hailed him as long as there was room in the car.

Steady white beams of the headlights shone on the edge of the road as the motorist swung around the curve just west of the city. There, slightly lighter than the darker shadows of brush stood a youth, a while, pleading face outlined in the yellow thumb raised in traditional gesture. He got in apologetically, stumbling, mumbling his thanks before taking his position beside the driver.

"Where are you going?"

"Toronto, maybe. Perhaps farther. One never knows."

"How do you travel this way?"

"Night's as good as day. Maybe better. Car broke. So I keep on going. It doesn't matter much how you go."

The car sped on. Another mile or so. Another curve. Again the broad beam of the headlights picked out a white face from the dark blob of green just ahead. Again a begging thumb jerked up with scarce a turn of the owner's head. And again the stop and the mumbled thanks of the man, much older this time, who got in and seated himself silently in the rear.

"Where are you going?"

"Hamilton. Got friends there. They'll see me through for a while. Been in Montreal. It's taken me two weeks to get this far. Rides are gettin' too far between any more. Maybe I'm gettin' old."

Rushness was slow. It was near Oshawa that the car stopped for the third time in answer to the mute appeal of jerked thumb and pleading face which shone mutely from the darkness. The jerked thumb of a man attired in tattered clothes. A man who walked haltingly, bent and worn. Who carried a small bundle under one weary arm.

"Do you mean you're offering me a ride?" asked the old man, utter unbelief in his voice as he trailed up to the edge of the car.

"God bless you!"

"Where are you going?" asked the local man as the small bundle was stowed and the passenger relaxed nervously on the edge of the rear seat.

"Who knows?"

"Why are you travelling so late at night?"

"What else is there to do, mister?" with a wave of bone like hands. "It's not so pleasant sleeping out nights. I sleep in the daytime and walk at night. There's less heat, less trouble and dust. I'm just waitin'. I'll keep walkin' until I have to lie down. There's lots of them like me, mister".

The car drew up at the outskirts of Toronto, slowed to a stop. A door was opened willingly.

"Thanks, mister," said the first hitch hiker of the evening.

"Thanks" echoed faintly the second and third who had been picked up.

Picton

Picton, Aug. 25—A severe electric storm passed over Picton from three until five on Tuesday afternoon. Delhi seemed to experience the greatest shock from the storm. An aerial was broken, and radio tubes destroyed, in the apartment of the gaoler, Wm. McWilliams at the court house. Sherman Thompson, York Street, was shocked to the ground by a shaft of lightning in the yard at his home. This same shaft entered the kitchen in the adjoining home of Wm. Bovay and damaged the telephone in the nearby home of Wm. Turpin fuse boxes were blown and a ball of fire plunged into the iron pile on the property of N. Kaiz, Union St. At five a deluge of rain fell followed by hail.

Master Stanley Lipson who has spent the summer in a boys' camp in the Muskoka district has returned to his home here.

Members of the Napanee Golf Club played on the Picton links on Wednesday.

Miss Betty Bond and Mr. Benny ——'s accompanied George, Leo and Loretta Bond to their home in Watertown, N.Y. on Wednesday.

Mr. Dan Leavens, Manager of the Toronto Branch of the Bank of Montreal, who has been a holiday guest of his brother Dr. C. H. Leavens, and Mrs. Leavens, King Street, has returned to Toronto.

Firemen were called out at 9.15 Tuesday night to Chas. McCabe's cafe where a chimney was on fire.

Bellville Fair in 1860

Mr. W. A. Mikel Tells of Primitive Fair Held in Settlement Here in 1789 When Loyalists Gathered Their Meagre Produce.

As the Belleville Fair approaches the following information may be of interest. In 1860, seventy-eight years ago, the Belleville Fair was carried on by the South Hastings Agricultural Society, the officers of which were as follows:

President—James Brown.
First Vice-President—J. J. Farley.
Second Vice-President—W. Wells.
Directors—Thomas Wills, P. R. Palmer, John Diamond, George Fanning, Elias Vandewater, Donald Anderson, Munroe Morden.
Treasurer Pro Tem—Thos. Wills.
Secretary—Samuel D. Farley.

In 1789, fifty United Empire Loyalist settlers came into this section and settled on the land adjoining the mouth of the River Moira, then called Saganaskion River. The voyage of Hunger Year had just passed and that Fall the settlers gathered together a few samples of their meagre agricultural productions and held a display or exhibition of what they had been able to grow. That was really the first Fair, in very primitive form. Next year will be the 150th anniversary of the settlement of Belleville and of the first Fair. It would be an excellent time to hold an Old Boys' Reunion and celebration of the 150th anniversary of Belleville Fair.

—W. C. Mikel.

BELLEVILLE FAIR AUG. 30, 31, SEPT. 1 AND 2

Fair Held in the Year 1878 When Belleville Became a City

Fairs did not begin yesterday. Their ancestry goes back far into history of every settlement. Belleville is one of the centres which has grown up from small beginnings and in that small beginning there was a fair. Probably in the earliest settlement the assemblage of the products of the year was an event. Perhaps the fair began almost as a small market, though the motive was not the same as a market, the aim was to show the best and the consideration of money may or may not have entered into the original scheme.

Those who are seventy years and over can well recall the events of sixty years ago. In the year 1878, the very year that Belleville became a city, there was a record of fairs which would even today do honour to a thoroughly developed agricultural district. Here is a list of the exhibitions taken from the files of the Intelligencer showing how the month of October that year was filled with these festivals. Belleville West Hastings Fair led off first on October 2nd and 3rd. North Hastings held forth at Luke's on October 15th, East Hastings Fair was held at Thrasher's Corners on October 8th, Prince Edward Fair at Picton on October 4, Hallowell Fair at Bloomfield on October 5th, and Ameliasburg Fair at Roblin's Mills on October 12th. This district evidently was the centre of a thriving farming population.

ADVICE ON HORSES.

A glance over the heavy files of the Intelligencer of October 3rd and following days tells a story of the fair at Belleville, which was opened under rather sombre auspices, wet weather. Horses attracted most attention that day and today sixty years later they still attract. The reporter who attended the fair on that far-off day, October 2nd, 1878, philosphized on the horse industry and harped on the changes of the times. That 1878 reporter told of the fast "nag" giving way to the carriage horse. The scribe expressed the view that the horsemen would turn their attention to breeding. "Yet time provides a remedy for all such changes and doubtless in the end those who rear horses will find it to their advantage to encourage the selection and breeding of that class of animals which in the past has rendered this locality so famous (horses of Belleville district had a past even then) and which if carried out would enable all admirers of the horse in this locality to see 'the far beyond' to far better advantage than they have in the past few years. (Belleville district horses also had a future in 1878, the writer believed.) . . . We have the remedy; we have first class horses here, horses of excellent pedigree whose sires have distinguished themselves in many performances."

Horsemen had to line up their animals for inspection before such men as W. Coe, J. W. Turner and J. Bird, while D. R. Leavens officiated as master of the arena.

Familiar Trenton names appear among the exhibitors of horses in the 1878 fair—D. Clapp, D. Bradford, C. Ketcheson, J. Hurley, G. Purdy, Jonas Lott, J. C. Foster, Charles Ross, S. S. Lazier, R. S. Patterson, George Soby, D. Lucas, R. Fairman, and William Watt.

HUMANITY THE SAME.

On the evening of the first day of the fair the reporter heard "the merry, happy sparkling laughter of the boys and girls resounding all along the route to the grounds." Those youths and maidens of that day tripped gaily along, the blushing youth with his sweetheart, the bashful bachelor with the coy and winning maiden and the old man and his partner of joys and sorrows made their way to the fair. Busses ran to the grounds at reduced rates. The I.O.O.F. Band was there.

CHEESE EXHIBITS.

That was the year of the exhibition of the Dairyman's Association of Eastern Ontario at Belleville. In that year the quantity of cheese shown was more than double that exhibited at the provincial fair, said the writer in 1878.

Among the leading dairymen of Ontario present were Thomas Ballantyne, M.P.P., Stratford; Ira Morgan of Osgoode; Mr. Cameron of Lancaster, J. C. Cooper of New York State. There were exhibits of cheese from North Bristol, Quebec, and these names all so familiar even yet, Castleton, Springfield, Ivanhoe, Sidney Town Hall, Canniffton Union, Mecan, Hungry Valley, Oak Hall, Enterprise, Cardwell, Ashley's, Forest, Sidney, Front of Sidney, Thurlow, Johnstown, Union Napanee, Roblin, Picton, and Chard's. The butter competitors included David Clapp, Gilbert Thrasher, B. Mallory, Thomas Graham, Benjamin Foster and J. S. Hamilton.

Every department was well filled that year and except for some difference of names the lists might well have suited a recent fair. Brooms, sewing machines, harness and leather gloves were representative of industries thriving in those days. Democrats and carriages also were indicative of a day which can only be recalled in pageantry, in moving pictures or in photographs.

SOME FAMILIAR NAMES.

Taking a run down the names in the prize list one reads the names of owners of exhibits:

In cattle—John Harris, Jos. Nightingale, Dr. Coleman, W. Van-Blaricom, H. J. Lott, John Hagerman, William Clazie, Anson H. Jones, H. P. Jose, E. P. Brintnell. (The judges were Gilbert Jones, J. C. Foster, J. W. Turner.)

In horses the winners included H. C. Lloyd, W. M. Shorey, D. R. Leavens, O. R. Weese, R. C. Fairman, William Watt, D. H. Sager, J. J. Lloyd, S. Tedman, L. Massey, J. E. Bleecker, D. R. Clapp, D. Roblin, John Huyck, D. Bradford, George Ketcheson, C. R. Purdy, J. McFee, P. R. Palmer, W. Clazie, and others.

In sheep—J. Harry, E. Marsh, W. Clazie, B. N. Vandervoort. The judges were D. C. Cork and N. W. Hawley.

In swine—E. P. Brintnell, W. VanBlaricom, J. Nightingale.

In other classes among the prize winners were J. L. Clapp, A. H. Jones, B. Clapp, J. A. Weese, Dr. Coleman, L. Clark, S. and J. Clark, J. M. Walker, G. and J. Brown, W. Powell, A. J. Wilson, T. Jones, D. Lockwood, D. R. Ketcheson, B. Mallory, J. E. Bleecker, L. G. Reed, Mrs. R. N. Bennett, Miss Burgoyne, Miss Brown, C. H. Spong, Mrs. H. Tammadge, Mrs. Goodwin, Miss Roles, Mrs. J. Row, Miss E. Vandervoort, Miss Goldsmith, Miss Alpont, W. H. Newberry, Miss Walker, J. H. Ford, Albert Huff, A. W. Mason, P. C. Dempsey, W. Matthews, F. Peck, Dr. Palmer, John Bell, John Brenton, K. ## A Real Circus

"Lindy", the elephant, was born the day Lindbergh landed in Paris after his thrilling lone flight across the ocean—and Lindy, though not air-minded, is a clever elephant, paydirtm some call it. Lindy is one of the star attractions at the Garden Bros. Circus, which is an extra special feature of this year's Belleville Fair, and Lindy can do most everything but talk, and that too if you can understand his language. The Garden Bros. Circus carries a large number of performing horses, besides lions, tigers and other big features of the Big Top. Circus fans who were disappointed in not seeing Ringling

Fair Notes

"We're ready," stated Ex-Alderman William A. Woodley, Chairman of the local Parks Commission under whose direction and the direction of his fellow commissioners the last touches of remodeling and beautification of the grounds and buildings of the Agricultural Park are being carried out this week. "The grounds and buildings never looked better," added the Chairman.

This year included in the new work which has been accomplished on the buildings is a new roof for the poultry house; a new fence erected for safety's sake on the east side of the grandstand to prevent spectators over-running the race track, and considerable interior renovating of the exhibit buildings.

A beautiful picture of healthy, colorful growth is evident in the flower beds and grass plots throughout the grounds. Late blossoming varieties of plants planted earlier in the season are bursting into bloom and will be in brilliant color at the time of Fair opening. Restful to the eyes and tired senses of those who visit the grounds, seats have been placed at convenient locations to further provide for the luxury of the patrons.

Entries have been coming in at the office of R. H. Ketcheson, popular secretary, during the past week in ever increasing volume. Entries for all stock closed last Wednesday, August 17th, and a few late ones which were received were not accepted. "There was no reason for these exhibitors being so late, they had plenty of advance warning. And to those who were late I regret to say they were not accepted them," stated Mr. Ketcheson. Entries in other classes will close on Saturday, August 27th.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Great Guy"

With a background that is new and intriguing and a role that packs all the punch of the best previous Cagney pictures, James Cagney opens at the McCarthy theatre commencing today in his new film vehicle "Great Guy". If "Great Guy" can be taken as a criterion of the future type of pictures, which this popular celluloid star is to make it can safely be predicted that motion picture audiences will have something to look forward to in the way of fast-moving, romantic and entertaining melodrama, when the versatile, dynamic Jimmy again comes to the screen.

Douglas MacLean, who produced "Great Guy" and Grand National who sponsored and are distributing the picture, made no mistake when they selected this story as the vehicle which would mark Cagney's return to the screen after an absence of nearly a year. It is exactly the medium which any of his most ardent admirers would have chosen, had they had an opportunity to choose.

"Great Guy" depicts Cagney in the role of an honest and fearless dog-tax inspector in the Weights and Measures Department of a large city. Responsibility for the direction of the whole department falls on him through an injury to his chief, who instructs him to "keep his head on his shoulders and his fists in his pockets." He has little difficulty in keeping his head but when he finds it necessary to stand up a gang of political grafters, who have organized a short weight racket that mulcts every housewife in the city he finds other places for his fists.

He almost loses the girl he loves, endangers his life and faces disgrace, but in the end breaks up the powerful ring, convicts the chief leader and everything comes out right as of course, it should.

An interesting angle of "Great Guy" is the exposure it makes of the various crooked weighing and measuring devices employed by unscrupulous merchants to cheat the consumer. Every housewife who sees this picture will leave the theatre amazed at what it reveals.

Mae Clarke, whose appearance previously with Cagney in "Public Enemy" and "Lady Killer", provided a happy combination, appears opposite to him in "Great Guy" and registers effectively as a typical young woman who is torn between two forces—her love for her sweetheart and loyalty to her crooked employer. Also in the cast are Ray Kolker, Edward Brophy, Bernardine Hayes, Robert Gleckler, Edward McNamara, and Joseph Sawyer round out the well balanced cast.

"Great Guy" was adapted from the popular "Johnny Cave Stories" in the Saturday Evening Post by James Edward Grant. Director John G. Blystone gets credit for handling the comedy-phase with a fine understanding of the values of his star and the story.

Preceding the feature production "Great Guy" three excellent short subjects are presented at each performance daily. Polly Moran queen of screen comediennes is seen in her latest comedy made for laughing purposes only "Sailor Made" that really is a howl and well worth seeing, little Sybil Jason favorite screen child personality is presented in an all technicolor treat entitled "A Day at Santa Anita" which all patrons will thoroughly enjoy as it is something very interesting and beautiful in screen entertainment. Also a clever musical cartoon "The Wolf Chase a Melody" that will stir

AT THE BELLE

"Always Goodbye"

Beauty is the immediate and all inclusive definition for "Always Goodbye", one of the finest in the chain of excellent 20th Century-Fox productions.

Seldom does a story such as the one which unfolded on the screen of the Belle Theatre yesterday come to the attention of the fans with as much understanding and fine sense of the value of drama-tic minutiae.

In the capable hands of co-stars Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall and under the fine touch of Sidney Lanfield's direction, "Always Goodbye" acquires the beauty of sheer simplicity in a story that is—on several occasions—conducive to a lump in the throat.

Setting a beautiful tale of modern melodrame before a kaleidoscopic background of occasional grimness, sporadic sorrow and vivacious, resplendent gowns on Fifth Avenue and in Paris, the film scintillates with the many facets of love that come to its characters.

Barbara Stanwyck in a love, waits for her eager young man who is speeding to the City Hall to marry her. He is killed as his car crashes into a trolley. Stunned at the tragedy, she wanders toward the river where Herbert Marshall, a doctor-physician, sees that she is taken to a hospital . . . where her son is born.

Marshall's sincere love for the brave girl; her love for her child (Johnnie Russell); the love of foster parents who adopt the youngster; the temperamental Paris'an ardor of Cesar Romero and the ultimate love which brings the story to a suspenseful conclusion create a beautiful saga with a throbbing message for today's womanhood.

Ian Hunter heads the featured cast including Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Binnie Barnes and John Russell.

"I'm From the City"

Joe Penner, favorite of screen and radio, is in town—on the screen at the Belle Theatre, in "I'm From the City", his latest picture. You must all remember Joe's recent laughable comedy, "Go Chase Yourself," and he's highly successful radio broadcasts in "The Penners of Park Avenue." The wistful little comedian is said to be funnier than ever in "I'm From the City," which has dual backgrounds—those of the circus big top and of a Western ranch. Joe appears as a bareback rider who really is deathly afraid of horses, but rides like a centaur when he has been hypnotized. Get your share of laughs at the Belle in this comedian feature.

Pirates Increase Lead; Belmont Juniors Even Count; Corby's Eliminated

National League Teams Scared To Win Pennant of Their Loop Because of Those Awful Yanks

Pirates, However Appear to be Class of Senior Circuit

CARDS ARE COMING

Reds Just Half a Game Out of Second Place

(By Ed Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The fearsome prospect of having to tangle with those awful Yankees in another world series appears to have the National League's leading clubs in a state of wilting with their own pennant.

At least, that's the way the current series circuit results (if you can call it that) looks, what with the Pirates having a tough game scratching an even .500 average in their last 20 games, the Giants winning just 13 in the last 27, and those Chicago Cubs playing seventh place ball for the past month.

As matters have been progressing however, the Pirates won't have much chance to sidestep during the closing drive. They trounced Boston Bees, 8-2, yesterday, largely through Pep Young's triple with the bases loaded, to win boosted their first-place margin to six full games.

Cards May Get In

Of course the Cardinals can be counted out now, 18 full games behind the pace-setters. But with Lonnie Warneke's lanky arm mowing the other fellows down, and Curt Davis doing the same, they're starting to click—as witness that one-hit 5-0 decision they handed against Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday —Onkel Branche may still get his boys into the dance.

The Reds are generally regarded as too young to stand the gaff of the stretch drive, but the fact that no other first division club has as good a record in the past month makes it barely possible they may come through. Bucky Walters and their 7th win in 30 starts yesterday with a 3-1 victory over the fullof Phillies.

Yankees Spill

It's but about certain the National League winner will meet up with the Yanks in the extra-curricular clouting. Gehrig and company spilt with Chicago White Sox yesterday to climb 13 full games in front of the second winning free-for-all frolics. Jimmy Dykes' three-run homer proved a dose to set the ball opener win and Tommy Henrick's two homers, gave the Yanks the afternoon's fun.

Three changes in the brackets featured the league's pennant program. Cleveland's Indians climbed into a second-place tie by toppling the Boston Red Sox, 5-3. Washington regained sole possession of fourth place with a close 4-3 edge over St. Louis Browns, and the Athletics jumped through most of the league with a lop-sided double win over Detroit, 10-3 and 11-1.

PEDRO MONTANEZ EASILY DEFEATS O. DROUILLARD

Canadian Boxer Forced to Quit in Fifth Round of Bout

BADLY BEATEN

Walter Franklin, Hamilton, Easily Outpoints Frankie Castiglia

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Aug. 25 (CP)—Orville Drouillard saw his big chance to win boxing's most lucrative field into oblivion today but this freckle-faced French-Canadian maintained his brilliant record of never having heard the count of "10" over him.

Battered and bruised in his fight with Pedro Montanez in Madison Square Garden last night, Drouillard was saved from the first knockout of his career when Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the bout in the fifth round with the Windsor, Ont., veteran struggling to regain his feet.

Montanez, seeking his second victory at the world lightweight title weighed 138 9-4 and Drouillard, scaling exactly 10 lbs. less, opponents who rated him no chance, scaled 137. But Orville wasn't in the same class as the dusky Spaniard who dominated the fight in each of the five rounds.

Stealing the show from the headliners was another Canadian, baby-faced old Walter Franklin who was born in Hamilton and learned boxing in Windsor, Ont. A favourite Jew who came here from Detroit six months ago, Franklin scored an impressive technical knockout victory over Brooklyn's Frankie Castiglia.

Two-Handed Attack

Weighing 156, four pounds lighter than his stocky opponent, Franklin, son of an Italian father, drew upon the ovation of the night from the crowd of more than 10,000 fans by systematically hammering Castiglia into a state of helplessness.

The Apollo-like Hebrew used a terrific two-handed attack to the head to score his fifth straight triumph and 19th Kayo victory since turning professional. Unable to score a knockdown, he was always on the aggressive, and finished with a lightning-fast right eye.

It wouldn't have had this if I had followed my trainer's instructions, but gosh I'd never even been knocked down before and I wanted to finish that fight fast at any cost," said Franklin.

Covering up from the start and rallying when least expected, Drouillard took the measure of Montanez Henry Armstrong, present holder of the feather, light and welterweight crowns, scored a five-round technical knockout over him about a year ago.

JOE MACK SPOILS CARNEGIE NIGHT

Led 16 Hit Attack on Bisons With Homer And Two Singles

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse Chiefs, who generally allow little concern for Newark Bears' success, are thankful today for a pair of Newark victories, that has boosted them into second place in the International League race.

The Chiefs, who have been threatening to take over the runner-up spot from the Rochester Red Wings for the past few weeks, finally moved in last night, when they downed Buffalo Bisons 8-5 while the Bears were bathing the Red Wings 3-1 and 5-2.

Joe Mack led a 16-hit attack with a three-run homer and two singles to spoil Ollie Carnegie night in honor of the Buffalo hurler's return to the league.

In the lone afternoon game of the day the Jersey City-Toronto game having been played previously, the Baltimore Orioles and Montreal Royals played to 6-all deadlock. The game was called at the end of the 11th inning to allow the Orioles to catch a train.

New York, Aug. 23.— (AP) — Charlie Dunlavy, 12-year-old son of the Chicago White Sox owner, is making the eastern swing with the team, and he pulls out a telegram, sits on the bench and is having the very devil of a time . . . And he was in Jim Braddock's spot at 10:30 last night when the Yankees' Joe Gordon hit a home run with the bases loaded in the first inning.

CORBYS DEFEATED BY KINGSTON IN THE SECOND GAME

Art Cole And Harold Reid Declared Ineligible to Play

SCORE 15 9-6

Locals Leading Up Till Sixth When Team Falls Apart

In spite of the fact that the Corby's A.C. were notified by a wire sent them by the O.A.S.A. mogul, and presented to them on the Kingston diamond a few minutes previous to the start of the game, the Chuck Barnett crew went on to play a limited softball game that only led to blow up in the sixth and drop the decision by a 15-9 score in the second game of the Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. first round playoff series played in Kingston City.

Kingston Tanners won the first game here the other night, 7-3 after one of the wildest games ever seen in this city.

President Harry Rollins last night was requested by O.A.S.A. officials to send in a full report of the game played here a few nights ago that ended in a free-for-all. Decision of the O.A.S.A. executive regarding the suspension of the two Corby's players hinged on the report of the Belleville member of the executive, it was intimated this week.

Mr. Rollins, who did not attend the Kingston fracas, did not receive the wire until the return of the Corby's players last night.

He intimated that there might be a replay of the first game.

A Player's Dream

To get back to the game: Leading 5-3 at the end of the fifth inning behind the masterful hurling of Art Cole, the Corby squad suddenly blew up. A flock of errors and hits that resulted in the sacks being filled with no one out in the sixth and the scoring.

Corby's pitcher allowed but two runs scored by the Tanners in the second, when by virtue of three successive hits by them three bases by Gray and Miller, a walk issued to Cole and a fielder's choice by sending four runners scampering over the plate.

There was no disastrous sixth. Two Corby errors, that inspired the Kingston batsmen to knock out five hits, including the Boneham homer put the game in the bag for the home boosters.

Harris deserved a better ending. His mates had given him seven and scattered the remaining six hits, but Kingston runners were left stranded in the sixth. Scrutton, Tanner hurler, scattered two Corby hits over the next three frames, but bobbled five times behind him they came in runs when they did not mean much.

Kiser led the Corby hitters with a brace of hits, followed by Barriage and McGuire contributing a brace of singles. Boneham was the Tanners' batting hero with his home-run with Banks hitting consistently to make out a trio of hits that include a double.

KIWANIS JUNIORS LOSE FIRST GAME TO OSHAWA KIDS

Errors Prove Costly And Locals Beaten by 8-2 Score

COWIE IS SMART

Oshawa Twirler Allows But Four Hits in Pastime

One of the smartest junior squads to show their wares here in some time the Oshawa Baptist Baseball team Lakeview Loop champions grabbed a firm hold of the first round of the Junior O.B.A. playoffs here yesterday when they backed up the four-hit pitching of Cowie their ace-rightshander with a sterling fielding display to turn back the Belleville Kiwanis juniors in the Bay of Quinte Junior Loop by an 8-2 score.

Cowie, a stocky youth, had the local hitsmiths hoopled, muzzled and handcuffed for eight innings. Only twenty-five batters faced him in eight innings and only twenty-nine all told. He struck out nine batters walked none and after his mates had given him a seven run lead in the first inning he coasted through to an easy victory. Only two hits were garnered from his delivery in the eight stanzas, both of those coming from the bat of Guay. Joe Kelleher, got the third one to pave the way for the Belleville brace of runs in the fifth which might added his third of the game.

Not a Belleville runner saw second base until the fifth innings when one two hits coupled with the lone Oshawa error broke the local duck-up and sent two runners scampering across the plate.

Errors Costly

Costly errors, no less than eight of them and the inability of the local hitsmiths to fathom the Cowie shoots were the main factors in the defeat.

Four bobbles in the disastrous fifth that coupled with six many hits sent five Oshawaa runs home brought curtains for the locals. Errors in the previous innings that put two men in scoring position started the downfall when "High Pockets" McCabe, ex-Belleville, injected into the pastime as a pinch-hitter drove a ringing single through short, scoring both runners.

Joe Kelleher, starting moundsman of the Kiwanis squad deserved a better fate. For three innings the game brought out as sweet a pitching duel as one would wish to see, with both pitchers bearing down with one-hit hurling.

Infield Collapses

Kelleher allowed the visitors ten hits, four of which were clustered in the fifth when his infield collapsed and the game was practically over. He stuck to his guns however striking out five Oshawans, fielded his position nicely, and allowed two free tickets.

Guay, local shortstop, was the only batter to fathom the shoots of Cowie with any degree of consistency. He smashed out three singles out of four, while his mates were being mowed down with monotonous regularity by the Cowie hitting.

Wilson, Fair, Hrynyuk and McMaster get themselves a brace of hits for the visitors with Kitchen and Cowie contributing one each.

The squads play in Oshawa on Saturday in the second game of the series.

BELMONT JUNIORS EVEN COUNT WITH KINGSTON GRADS

Score 8-6 Win Coming From Behind in Last Two Frames

CARSON HURLS WELL

Ronsky And O'Neill Contribute Homers to Fast Game

Coming from behind when the opposition hurler weakened, Belmont juniors evened the count with the Kiwanis Grads of Kingston in the first round of the Junior O.A.S.A. playdowns at Coleman Park last night winning the contest 8-6. The teams will square off in the third and final game on Monday in Napanee unless other arrangements are made in the meantime. The game is looked as if it was curtains for the juniors but with their indomitable spirit in evidence, the team went to work in the eighth and pushed over three runs to tie and win the contest. From the first inning the team fought an uphill battle as Jim Kingston squad scored a fuley four runs in the second frame and added one in the fifth and sixth frames.

The Belmonts also scored one in the third but were then held scoreless until the seventh, when Ronsky got on first on an error, stole and a mammoth home run to deep left field. In the last of the eighth, Sharpe lost his cunning and walked the first three men to face him. In fact, Kingston owned him at this and they got the next two although the third of the seniors he was unbeatable, retiring the last eleven men to face him in succession. His team played errorless ball behind him.

Carson struck out two and walked one while Sharpe whiffed four and walked the same number. The winning pitcher allowed but ten hits while the Belmonts garnered four-

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—The great holiday season is drawing to a close. The schoolchildren are making some last minute visits. The trustees of the Public School are having the school wired for electric lights this week. Special lights will be arranged for blackboard work. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in the past due to the poor arrangements of windows, and it is hoped now that this will be eliminated. All of those who have their buildings wired are enjoying the privileges of electricity. At present there are twenty homes wired and there are also a number of the public buildings.

The extra heavy harvest this year is surely making it interesting for the men operating the threshing machines. In endeavoring to find his customers better service, Mr. Goldie McInroy has purchased another Case Tractor and Separator and has engaged Mr. John Spence of Moira to operate same. For the past two Sundays at the church, the services have been conducted by the local W.M.S. and the Mission Band. On Sunday, August 14th, Mrs. Foster Wilson had charge, and on Sunday afternoon Mrs. Ed Pitman gave a solo, "The Old Rugged Cross." Readings were given by Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and Miss Mona Wright

On Sunday, August 21st, the Mission Band put in a interesting service with Miss Dorothy Tristram as leader, the Misses Phyllis Hammond and Theda Somerville Assisting with the Worship service were Miss Kathleen Moorcroft gave the children's story. The Hammond Sisters sang "Where the Gates Swing Outward Never." Miss Miss Moorcroft gave an interesting reading, the Study Book.

There was no service at St. Andrew's on Sunday afternoon.

The Standard Church congregation of Ivanhoe held their regular garden party on the first month extensive repairing has been done to the church and those who attended on Sunday found a great improvement in this church. Rev. S. Silngerland of Toronto preached a wonderful, inspiring, sermon for the re-opening ceremony.

Camp Meeting

The Camp Meeting of the Standard Church which is held once each year on the Camp Ground at Ivanhoe, will commence on Friday, the 26th inst. The officials in charge this year are, Rev. Nusey, bishop of the church; Rev. Thompson, chairman, and Mr. Nathan Hall, secretary-treasurer. Meetings from far and near will gather and spend days on the camp ground. Services will be held three times daily. The main objects of these meetings are two-fold, 1st, that new converts may be won; 2nd, that by consecrating themselves together the members may be drawn closer to God.

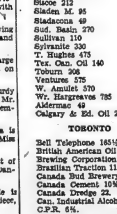
WALL ST. CLOSE



New York, Aug. 25—(AP)—A few utilities rallied edged forward in today's stock market, but many leaders pulled under par in an extremely narrow channel.

Intermittent rallying attempts attracted only small offerings during the greater part of the session, and new 1938 low, quotations were well jumbled.

With volume about half that of late previous days, traders defeved some encouragement from the fact that selling pressure was absent. Transfers were around 650,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, August 25—(CP)—Mining issues sagged on the Toronto Stock Exchange today but Mclntyre and Hudson Bay and Noranda, all at new highs for the year, stood out against the downward trend. Industrials rolled irregularly lower with Utilities the only division showing strength. Western Oils joined the downward march. Transfers approximated 450,000 shares, Mclntyre at 48 1-4, was up 1-4 but earlier it hit 48 1-2. Noranda gained 1-4 at 75 1-4 and Hudson Bay was 3-8 higher at 31 1-8.

Cattle sales consisted of a few butcher cattle at $4.50 to $4.60 and some butcher cows from $3 to $4.25. Calves sold from $5 to $9.50 cwt. Prevailing quotations for grade hogs was $8 to $8.25.

Good grass ewes weither lambs brought $8.25. Other grades traded from $6.25 to $7.50.

Fresh Egg Stocks Low at Toronto

Toronto, Aug. 25—Although all lines showed unchanged prices on the local produce market yesterday, butter quotations were steadier.

Trading quickened slightly on the butter markets, which enabled dealers to keep arrivals of fresh receipts of cities and towns from former levels. Buyers took on fair quantities of the 1-cent make at 23 1-4c. There is no movement of butter out of storage as yet. Ontario solids sold at a range of 22½c to 23c for No. 1 grades, 22 1-4c for score and 21½c for 27 score. Prints traded in retail channels at the previous prices of 24½c to 25c for top grades and 23 3-4c to 24 1-4c for 33 score. Buyers wel still offering in the range of 22c to 22 3-4c for No. 1 grade churning cream country track prices.

The egg market maintained a firm tone. Supplies of top quality continued on the scarce side and traders in need of requirements were forced to pay prevailing prices. Grade C eggs experienced poor response to offers and were just inclined to take on lower quality eggs at this time of the year. Dealers report retail business is satisfactory. Graded shipments sold at 22c for grade A-large, 20c for medium, 20c for B's and 20½c to 21c for C

The bees had become a nuisance in the walls of the structure particularly to Dr. J. B. White, a dentist in the building.

A portion of the well was removed and the nest thoroughly scattered. The honey was found about about three feet of the inside of the building and the bees. They expossed the invasion but the three volunteers were specially clothed for the occasion.

QUALITY ALWAYS HIGHER THAN PRICE

The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

It was a new world, of group clinics, of painless childbirth, of an arrested tuberculosis, even of arrested age—the Steinach operation on elderly men, and Barrett now besieged by middle-aged women for painless relief from under the X-ray! Going in hopefully to lie down on his table, to receive the treatment; hearing as they lay there the pressing of a switch and the low humming of the machine, and then going home, slightly nauseated perhaps, to watch in their mirrors for the change, for youth again.

By early spring of the following year Chris had been in practice fourteen years, and he had gone far in that time. He was a concrete alive now in surgery, as opposed to his early more reckless days; a man to be counted on. Now and then he had to undo the work of other men: occasionally his group rose at some Gilchery or other. He was prone to outspoken, even general popularity in his profession, but he was now recognized as a sound man.

However, by summer of that year he knew he was a tired man and a defeated one.

He carried on as best he could. The hours was cool, and, with Katie gone on a round of house parties, it was not so bad. Chris sometimes he and Ted wou'd get into the car and drive aimlessly about, talking or being still, content man fashion once more to be together. Ted felt tension under Chris's frequent silences and began to worry about him again.

"How long since you've had a vacation?"

"I don't know. Not since the war."

Chris did not mention Katie's bills or the cost of the new house, but Ted required no telling. In the end he gave up the attempt to get him away. Chris was worried about money that summer. As usual, collections were bad during those months, and the expenses continued. He began to be irritable especially in the operating room. They, he was terrific there, and under his long wrinkled linen coat and his mask he would be covered with hot sweat. Sometimes he felt as if a tight band were fastened around his head, and one day he threw a dull pair of scissors across the room.

"Good lord!" he shouted. "I don't ask much, but I do ask for proper instruments."

He was becoming taciturn, too. He would sit dejectedly at the table's end, an uneasy interne beside him, saying little or nothing.

Then, his bridge party over, he would go and get into his car, step savagely on the gas and get away, to make his few calls and then go back to the empty house which still somehow belonged to Grant—and of course to Katie—and sit for long hours at his desk. More than once he fell asleep there.

"This is a lovely house, and I am having a wonderful time. Not much sleep, but plenty of everything else, Doctor—for servants, and perfectly sweet beach.

"But I've lost a lot of money at bridge again, so I'll have to save some more, please."

He answered them meticulously, sending the money, saying nothing of the heat or his own fatigue; sitting sometimes for long time before he could think of anything to say at all.

Katie was happy that summer, living luxuriously, lying on this beach or that, playing golf, dancing. But not eating. It was the mode to be slim, and even under her new one-piece bathing suit she wore a bandage to flatten her breasts. In the mornings she rolled on the floor to reduce her hips, and she was always hungry. But she was happy. At the end of her visit she would pack up her invariably expanding four trunks and suitcases, have extravagant farewells on the servants, get into the car, and move on.

"Good-bye. I've had a lovely time."

"Good-bye. Come back next year."

x x x

Katie came home in the early fall, sunburned, healthy and filled with enthusiasm for the summer. Chris was pale, and he had aged. Chris, listening patiently, wondered at the breadth of the gulf which lay between them. For days he heard of nothing but luxury, of fine living and hard playing. And one day he came home to find a butler installed, and to listen to Katie's vociferous explanations.

"He's as cheap as a parlor maid, Chris. And anyhow, with your success and everything—"

"What success? I'm spending more than I earn. If that's success—"

"You'd earn more if you charged more. Everybody says that."

He listened to her. She was learning fast. Even her vocabulary was changing. And she was very pretty, now pale, and the hardness of tan had given her a certain refinement that she held no attraction for him. Watching her as she moved about he wondered at the curious urge which drew men and women together without their own volition, so that they would commit any imbecilities, almost any crime, to achieve union; and that other impulse, current, or whatever it might be, which could drive two people so that they might live together in the same house and be as far apart as the poles.

And as the days went on he wondered if the situation was all his was fair to her. They was nothing serious about her. He never suspected her of unfaithfulness. But her high spirits flagged when he was absent. Sometimes he even thought she was afraid of him.

He took to asking her to go with him on his calls, to sit in the car while he went into a house. She was bored, but she went. Once, when he was in a hurry, he left her in the car in front of a house where a child was dying of pneumonia. When he came out she was sitting there, her face buried in her hands, and she was crying.

"I'm sorry, dear. I'm afraid I've been a brute. I'll try to do better."

But he knew he would not do better. He was not a man to change his habits, and he was not a man to be happy with a woman who was not happy with him.

He was not happy himself. He was tired, and he was lonely. He had no one to whom he could talk freely, no one to whom he could say: "I'm afraid I'm losing my grip. I'm afraid I'm getting old." He had no one to whom he could say: "I'm afraid I'm losing my grip. I'm afraid I'm getting old." He had no one to whom he could say: "I'm afraid I'm losing my grip. I'm afraid I'm getting old."

Then, one day, he met Mary Rinehart.

He was in the operating room, and he had been working for hours. He was tired, and he was irritable. He had been working for hours, and he was tired, and he was irritable. He had been working for hours, and he was tired, and he was irritable.

The door opened, and a woman came in. She was tall, and she was dressed in a white uniform. She had a mask over her face, and she was carrying a tray of instruments. She came over to the table and began to arrange the instruments. She was very quiet, and she moved with a kind of grace that was almost like a dance.

Chris looked at her. He could not see her face, but he could see her hands. They were long and slender, and they moved with a kind of precision that was almost like a dance.

He looked away. He looked back. She was still there. She was still moving with that same grace.

He looked away again. He looked back. She was still there. She was still moving with that same grace.

He looked away again. He looked back. She was still there. She was still moving with that same grace.

He looked away again

Today was Nora's day off on account of being Thursday and ma got supper ready, being stakes under onions and raasberries for dinner, and ma said to pop, Now, Willyum, how would you like to finish off with a little black coffee and celebrate the launching of my new Widgiware dummy tass set?

Nothing would pitase me more but coffee in the evening keeps me awake, unfortunately, pop said, and ma said, But Willyum, this is the first chance I've had to use my beautiful Widgiware dummy tass set, because Nora is off and I can wash them personly myself and make sure that no harm befalls them, you have no idea how perticular I am regarding the pare. Suppose I make the coffee half strength, Willyum? she said.

No thanks just a same, I dont even want to be kept half awake for the sake of any confounded Widgiwares, pop said, and ma said, But Willyum, I cant make coffee just for myself, suppose we drink tea out of it?

Tea out of a dummy tass, yes gods suppose somebody happened to drop in and see us, your social station would never be the same, pop said, and ma said, Oh dear that's rite, that would be gastly, but who would drop in?

You never can tell from what I've been reading in the paper the country is full of spies pop said, and ma said, I know what I'll do, I'll serve a couple of the cups and saucers anyway, and the effect will be almost the same and I won't even have to go through the dangerous ordeal of washing them.

And she put a dummy tass cup and saucer in front of pop and another one in front of herself and she put a lump of sugar in each one and sat there looking at them like somebody feeling better instead of worse.

Frankford

Frankford, Aug. 25—Decoration Day in Frankford will be held on Sunday afternoon Aug. 28th when the graves in the local cemeteries will be decorated by local lodges and the veterans. Service afterwards will be held in Memorial Park. The Frankford Citizen's band will furnish the music for the occasion.

Mr. Gerald Johnson who was a patient in Kingston General Hospital returned home on Wednesday.

Mrs. H. J. Maddil and boys are spending a week the guests of Miss Irene Boyle at her cottage on the Bay of Quinte.

Mrs. D. O. Leavitt and Anita are visiting Mrs. Cooper at Bloomfield.

Word was received on Sunday morning of the death in Montreal on Monday night of Edward Turley son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Turley of this village. Funeral was held from St. Francis of Assisi Church on Thursday morning.

Mrs. W. E. Windover, who after reading in Frankford for over forty years is leaving to reside in Picton. On Tuesday evening a great number of friends and neighbors gathered at her home in the nature of a surprise party. Mrs. Windover was the recipient of a beautiful gift and although completely surprised, rose to the occasion and in her usual charming manner thanked all for their gifts and good wishes remarking how much she treasured the memories of her sojourn in Frankford.

The following address was read: To Mrs. Annie Windover:

Dear Mrs. Windover:

You are planning to leave this village where you have lived for so many years, and to face forth so to find a new home. We have gathered to wish you Godspeed in your new adventure, and would like you to know that we will miss you very very much here at Frankford. You have always been good citizen taking a deep interest in public affairs. You have been an excellent neighbour, and the kindly hospitality of this home will ever be for us a treasured memory. You have always been a willing worker in the organizations and affairs of the church, and your inspirational service and fellowship have been a benediction to us, encouraged us to higher service and greater effort. We are not unmindful of the singular grace with which you have filled the various offices of these organizations. Your sympathetic nature has enabled you to fulfil the word of Scripture where it admonishes, "To rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep." Your steadfast faith and Christian fortitude in meeting and bearing your own trials and bereavements has been an uplifting example to us. We fell we could not let you leave our midst without trying to show to you, what words seem so futile to express, the high esteem and love which we have for you.

On behalf of the Woman's Missionary Society, and the Woman's Association of the United Church, and as neighbours, we ask you to accept this gift, that it may remind you of the happy associations and fruitful endeavours of other days. We trust that you will be spared for many more years of joyous service for the Master.

Another wish we would like to make.

And this entirely for your sake—

That if ever you may be in need Of kindly nursing and loving deed,

That gentle hands and willing feet

May count it joy your ills to treat,

That with ceaseless ministry, and thoughtful care,

They may seek in some small way to share

In the tender love, and sacrificial thought,

That you to your loved ones have always brought.

And now, may the Presence of God abide

With you, where'er you may reside.

Frankford, Aug. 23, 1938.

Signed: Mrs. Smith, Osterhout, Mrs. George Spencer, Mrs. J. F. Lane, Mrs. Harry Slingerland.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose we suggest from Dr. J. R. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemrold and use as directed. This ointment, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemrold is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Minus the services of Art Cole and Reid, who were suspended from the game by an O.A.S.A. edict handed the team a few minutes before game time Corby's Softballers cracked after leading the Kingston Tannery 5-2 and yielded the second game of the Intermediate "A" Softball first round playdown in Kingston yesterday by a 8-6 count. . . . Harris pitched stellar ball for the losers whiffing an even dozen, but his mates bobbled behind him in the clutches. . . .

A full report of the wild-game played other night between these squads has been requested by O.A.S.A. moguls from Convener Harry Nellies . . . It seems the Corby's management is at a loss to understand Reid's suspension last night after being allowed to play here Monday night after play had been resumed . . . There is a possibility of that game being replayed but everyone is touching wood.

Everything was serene at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon, with the fans sitting back and watching as nifty a spot of pitching between Cowie, Oshawa Baptist chucker, and Joe Kelleher, Belleville Kiwanis . . . as they have been seen here in some time. For three innings the lads set down the opposition in order. . . . Then the Kiwanis infield collapsed, the balloon went up and a good ball game was spoiled.

The Kiwanis kids could do nothing right after the fourth inning when McCabe drove in the first two runs of the game with a single after being elected as pinch-hitter. From that time on, the K's kicked class, with a Cap "C" . . . They moved around the field like veterans whenever chances came there way. . . Cowie, their sturdy righthander was in the pink . . . Calmly, methodically, he mowed down the opposition in order, and gave one of the finest junior hurling displays seen here in some time.

The second game is scheduled for Saturday in the Motor City Town and the K's will have to be on their best behaviour if they want to even the series . . . "High-Pocket" McCabe will likely be sent in against them.

Flashing a sterling brand of errorless ball behind the masterful hurling or Carson, Red Townsend's Belmonts hopped back into the Junior O.A.S.A. play-off running here last night to defeat the Kingston Kids by an 8-6 count. . . . "My body's pumpkin now," chortled the tickled kids after their well-earned victory . . . Townsend Terrors spotted the Limestone city Yoricktes four runs in the second innings and came from behind to pull out with a sparkling win . . . Carson, after a wobbly start, was invincible turning back the last eleven men to face him in order.

. . . The potent bats of the Townsenders beat out a steady barrage of hits, to back up their hurler, fourteen all told, two of which were round-trippers by Honsky and O'Neill.

Sport Slivers — Tony Galento, beering baron of the ring, says now he knows what the qualities of pneumonia feel like . . . Latest news from Peterborough says the Pete will not protest last Saturday's Oshawa jamboree . . . If you know any kids of the rate of speed- 1347.155 miles per hour- that Mr. Ryston travelled on the Bonneville Salt Flats the other day, imagine them jumping in a gasoline buggy, riding for one minute and fifty seconds, then hopping out in Trenton. . . . The Oshawa and Peterboro scribes are still "at it" regarding the officiating at Oshawa last Sat. . . . The Liftlock ladie claims the Petes mentors won't stand for any more . . . "Spanish Town" . . . Ron Church and his man Friday Dalzard, spoiled the day for the Geronimo, when they snatched the pastime out of the fire by a 3-2 count after eleven chukkers of thrilling baseball . . . "Liberty" Ball, Gibbardville hurler, cracked slightly in the last inning, and the homesters rammed the victory across the pan . . . The third game is scheduled in Napanee on Friday . . . There was some nifty fielicking and majestic mashieing at the Country Club yesterday half-holiday when the Belleville Golf Club and the Country Club golfers met in the annual inter-club tournament. . . . When the smoke had cleared the Belleville clubbers had swung and putted their way to a thirteen point victory. . . . FOR LONGEVITY MARRY, EAT LESS, AND IF YOU DRINK . . .

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Augustus Hemenway, Canadian and philanthropist who is 96 today, gave this recipe for longevity:—"Get married, eat less and, if you drink, drink less."

Why the Weather?

Protection from lightning! The great Parsday demonstrated what is absolute safety from lightning. He had himself and instruments enclosed in a completely conducting shell or cage which then subjected to electrical discharges. Neither Parsday nor his instruments were disturbed. The lesson from this is that the iron rods on a house the better the protection; all houses should have at least two if roofed at all. There is a catch however, in the number of rods, beyond which it would not be economical to go, and that is the cost of upkeep. All rods should extend beyond the highest point of the house, and their paths to the ground should be as direct as possible.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP)—A disturbance now violating Ontario skies is centred this morning off Cape Breton and another is moving eastward through Hudson Bay with a shallow trough extending southwestward to the Great Lakes. Lake Superior—Moderate westerly winds; fair tonight and Saturday, not much change in temperature.

Keewa and Rainy River—Fair tonight and Saturday, not much change in temperature.

Western Provinces—Fair today and Saturday, not much change in temperature.

Bomb Bursts in Jaffa Market, 20 Arabs Killed, Rioting Starts

Jaffa, Palestine, Aug. 26—(CP)—A bomb explosion in the crowded Jaffa vegetable market today killed 20 Arabs, wounded 74, and touched off a series rioting.

While ambulances were taking the dead and wounded to hospitals, Arabs tried to set fire to the Jewish Anglo-Palestine bank and other buildings. An automobile belonging to a bank director was destroyed.

Police and soldiers got the situation under control. All roads into this busy seaport were closed and the border sections between Jaffa and Tel Aviv were patrolled by soldiers and police.

Troops dynamited several houses last night in Jenin as punishment for the slaying of Sir John Derrick Considine, C.B.E. Moffatt by an Arab, who later was shot when he was said to have tried to escape from the Jenin military camp.

Nearly 200 persons have died in Arab-Jewish strife in the Holy Land since July 5 when the abduction of a bus brought a wave of rioting and destruction.

Arabs called a general strike here after the explosion. Police prepared to have more acts of violence because of anger among Arabs. Troops patrolled the streets and a night curfew was expected. All banks were shut.

Meanwhile, at Bethlehem British troops and terrorists were reported in a brisk engagement, with British machine guns chattering incessantly.

Sir Harold MacMichael, High Commissioner for Palestine, declared trying to give restrictions to reports of terroristic acts may be published, but no details may be supplied.

Mackenzie Calls Statements of Drew in Article as 'Wild, Irresponsible'

Hugh Claxton Denies Interest in John Inglis Company

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)—An attack on the Bren machine-gun contract awarded by the Canadian government to the John Inglis company of Toronto and a defence of that agreement by Defence Minister Mackenzie are before the Canadian people today.

The attack was made by Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew in an article in Maclean's Magazine. Charging the Inglis Company is a "virtual monopoly engaged in the public service and supported by public funds," Col. Drew demanded: "Where are the secrets and no mystery" and added: "Why should the Bren gun decision must not provide the opportunity for large profits to friends of any government."

A reply to the article was issued in Ottawa by the Defence Department under the authority of the Minister, Ian Mackenzie, K.C. Mr. Mackenzie later termed Col. Drew's statements "wild, irresponsible" and declared when such statements are made "there should be some investigation. Personally I should like to see the strictest inquiry into all such statements."

Contract $6,500,000

The statement issued here said contract, awarded last March was for $6,500,000 with a maximum profit permitted by the Canadian Board of Contract of $267,000. The Inglis Company was to produce 7,000 machine-guns for Canada and 5,000 for Great Britain on a cost-plus 10 per cent basis.

GIVE YOUTH 25C, DROPPING HIM NEAR KINGSTON

'Get Yourself Cup of Coffee' Gananoque Attendant Told

TRIO DOWN AT HEEL

Car Bears Quebec Licence And Heads Towards Kingston

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—Three young gunmen robbed Clarence's Garage of $35 early today, kidnapped the attendant, Cecil Kidd, and then gave him 25 cents "for a cup of coffee" when they dropped him near Kingston.

"You're a chump to work in a garage for ten bucks a week. Why don't you take it easy like us fellows?" said as they held Kidd up. After robbing the till, they forced him into their own car bearing a 1937 Quebec licence and headed towards Kingston.

Kidd described the trio as about 25 years old and down-at-heel. Outside Kingston they demanded what money he had on him but he said he had little enough. As they ordered him out of the car, one said:

"Here you are, buddy. Get yourself a cup of coffee."

Foreign Navies, Consuls of 8 Powers Show Japan They've Rights in China

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Foreign Staff
Hankow, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Ships and men of three foreign navies, consuls of eight powers, foreign business men and missionaries are remaining in Hankow even though Chinese armies may be forced to give up defence of this territorial capital of the republic.

Foreigners hope their presence not only will save their property from destruction or looting by infuriating Chinese or conquering Japanese, but also will uphold the principle that foreigners have the right to live and work in China.

Many of Hankow's foreign residents have heeded warnings of their own authorities and have left Hankow—after Shanghai and Tientsin the most important stronghold of foreign interests in China. Many in key positions remain.

None of the powers has enough military strength in the Orient to withstand direct, organized attacks on concessions or properties.

All are determined to stand up for their rights—France, which has the only remaining foreign concession here, by a show of military force—Great Britain and the United States by a show of naval force implied in their nationals' refusal to evacuate, backed by the presence of their gunboats.

Missionaries will form the majority of the foreigners who will be here when the crisis breaks. Scattered throughout the adjoining cities of Hankow, Hanyang and Wuchang are their hospitals, churches and schools in which Chinese civilians are expected to seek refuge.

Britain gave up her concession at Hankow during the violent anti-foreign pressure exerted by Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist movement in 1927. Britain has turned down unofficially suggestion that she take it back, but is prepared to protect her property rights and interests in the former concession. Offices of large United States business organizations are here. Compared to Britain the United States has a small economic stake in Hankow.

79 WAREHOUSES CLOSED TODAY BY A LABOR DISPUTE

Possibly Wholesale Liquor Business Will Also Suspend

CLERKS MAY WALKOUT

San Francisco, Aug. 26—(AP)—At least 79 warehouses, including all the wholesale grocery establishments in San Francisco, were closed today by a labor dispute.

Employers predicted suspension during the day of the wholesale liquor business, which would add about 20 more warehouses to the temporary list and bring the total to an estimated total of 2,000 workers.

Further complicating the labor relations picture in San Francisco was the threatened walkout of 7,000 clerks in 27 major department stores because of a collapse in negotiations for a new contract.

Employers yesterday closed 36 grocery warehouses ahead of the eventual arrival of a freight car, which for more than two weeks has been refused unloading by union warehousemen, who contend it was loaded by strikebreakers.

Warehouses in neighboring Oakland also are involved.

The freight car, half-filled with school supplies from a Detroit wholesaler's warehouse, has been shunted from building to building, where warehousemen have refused to handle its cargo. Some firms have promptly discharged the men and closed the plants. Employers contend warehousemen must handle "all cars, regardless of origin, and the employees reply they will not handle "hot cargo" and thus remain loyal to organized labor unionists on strike.

Spokesmen for grocery distributors said there was no immediate peril of a food shortage, since retail stores were well stocked.

CREW SAVED

Seattle, Aug. 26—(CP)—Captain Howard J. Payne of the Ballard-Lodlow ferry line reported the Alaska-bound steamship North Coast was in collision with the Canadian steamship Princess Joan off Point No Point 20 Point in Puget Sound, early today. The crew was saved, he said.

HOPES ARE RAISED CONCESSIONS MAY BREAK DEADLOCK

Czechs Said to Await Address of Sir John Simon at Lanark

CONCESSIONS UNKNOWN

Prahs, Aug. 26—(AP)—New concessions by the Prahs government to the Sudeten German leadership demanding Sudeten German minority today raised the hopes of negotiators trying to overcome the deadlock between the two parties.

A committee of Sudeten Germans met with Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator in the dispute, to study suggestions made last night by the political ministers in the government.

"The nature of the concessions was not disclosed, but a government spokesman expressed hope they would form "a new basis for negotiation."

While the Sudeten envoys were with their Czechoslovak government committee, representing many parties, was meeting in the parliament building to work out details of a new effort at conciliation.

Premier Premier Milan Simon's Speech

Government spokesmen said that Czechoslovak leaders are eager to give a new, practical manifestation of their desire to keep negotiations alive, before the speech of Sir John Simon, in Lanark, Scotland, tomorrow.

Racer Goes Zebra To Break Light Beams

Bonneville, Salt Flats, Utah, Aug 26.—(AP) — The world's fastest automobile is "going zebra" in an effort to smash its own record.

Captain George E. T. Eyston, who piloted his "Thunderbolt" 311.42 miles on hour last year to set the record, said he would paint vertical black stripes on the car to aid in breaking light beams that operate the electric-eye timing device for speed runs.

Failure of the apparatus to operate Wednesday deprived Eyston of a new mark for the measured mile which he possibly reached 360 miles per hour.

Eyston proposes to make another record attempt tomorrow.

West Sunderland, B.C., Aug. 26 The British Empire.

"If we are going to export we should get back that industry and capital here instead of having it go to Argentina and Mexico," he said. "By doing this we will have done something to aid one of the most vital problems of the British Empire—namely providing foods for the Empire."

It was men who worked with their hands on farms, in mines, forest and fisheries who would build up the country. He concluded: "These men

Ernest Watson of Clappison's Corners Discovered in Ditch

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP) Widespread search is being made by Provincial Police for driver of a car believed to have struck Ernest Watson, 60, of Clappison's Corners, who was found dead in a ditch beside the Dundas highway early this morning.

DISMISS CHARGE OF APPLE THEFTS IN POLICE COURT

Extensive Docket Presented Before Magistrate Butler

FINES LEVIED

"The apparently is a flat denial with two witnesses swearing one thing and two another." Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., remarked in the police court this morning, involving the theft of apples, brought against eighteen-year-old Mark Sears, resident of this city, in police court this morning. Crown Attorney H. C. Thomas informed the court that a charge of trespassing would be forthcoming.

B. Simpson, complainant, testified to seeing the accused in the orchard and that Westlake had admitted being there. He had called at the Sears residence with his wife, where he testified accused had told his mother that he had taken the apples but they looked better than ours. Mrs. Simpson corroborated evidence.

Accused on the stand denied being in the orchard. However, after the court he had picked up the apples near a fence between the two properties. He did not have a basket, he claimed, and testified that Simpson had given him one and told Simpson that he (Westlake) had been down there.

Denied Knowledge

Mrs. Sears, mother of the accused, denied any knowledge of the conversation alleged to have taken place between her son and Simpsons when they visited her home. "Mark's father says he was no were of a wild variety," she said. Adding that no reference was made to the fact that there was any fruit being better than their own. ## SHARP NOTE IS SENT TO MEXICO

U. S. Says Country Must Stop Seizing Without Compensation

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP) — A sharp note from State Secretary Hull served notice on the Mexican government today that oil and mining farm lands owned by the United States without proper compensation.

The state department head demanded that Mexico make prompt settlement of $10,000,000 in claims for property already expropriated.

Expropriation, a policy of "bald confiscation", he said, "will seriously jeopardize the interests of all peoples throughout the world."

Hull's note, made public last night, asked Mexico to agree either to letter-American arbitration or to make monthly payments in Escrow while the two governments confer with each government—determine the value of the confiscated land.

Mexico rejected Hull's first arbitration proposal three weeks ago. Dispatches from Mexico City, how-

ASSAULT CHARGE LAID AFTER MAN GIVES SELF UP

Mark Sears Sought After His Brother Shot in Hip

RIFLE IS FOUND

Lindsay, Ont., Aug. 26—(CP)—Mark Sears, Bexley district farmer, was brought here today after surrendering himself to police at his farm home at Coboconk, about 30 miles north of here. Police had been seeking the farmer after Thomas Sears, a brother, was shot in the hip early yesterday while engaged on a roof.

Sears was charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm when he appeared before Magistrate Butler Campbell at Fenelon Falls and was remanded for a week.

Crown Attorney J. Anderson Allan Sears merely was being held on a holding charge, which might be changed later.

Eating Breakfast

Police said Thomas was eating breakfast with a neighbor named Benson when they entered the house. Police said Sears found a .22 calibre sawed off rifle in the house, broke open the gun and then went by brought to Lindsay. Thomas Sears said yesterday he had been shot with a bullet from a sawed-off rifle.

The officers made a stop with Sears at Bexley before continuing to Lindsay. E. McKague, his storekeeper, said Sears abruptly went to his farm home last night to water his stock and slept in his bed all night. McKague said Sears had been drinking heavily recently.

He was shot yesterday as he dislodged the roof of the barn. Sears told police Mark fired two shots at him from a "sawed-off 22-calibre rifle." The first bullet missed, but the second knocked him from the roof.

Papa Dionne of Famous Quintuplets To Celebrate His 34th Birthday

Callander, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—Oliva Dionne, father of the world-famous quintuplets—and seven others—will celebrate his birthday tomorrow.

The double birthday plans have been made. Mr. Dionne will spend the day quietly with his family. The only out-of-the-house event in the presentation tonight by the staff of the Callander Recreational Society.

Until four years ago Oliva Dionne lived the placid life of any average farmer in Northern Ontario. He was born in the house where he still lives. Then the fact Dionne descended upon him and his family one May morning in 1934, when a credulous world heard quintuplets had been born. Dr. Dafoe was in attendance with his modesty on the old homestead.

He is a busy man though, with all the time he can spare. His duties as a guardian of his five daughters, looking after his other children and supervising his booths at the Dionne nursery have compelled him to give

A Good Business Man.

Oliva Dionne's business ventures are a tale of a calf given him by his father, proceeds from which purchased a cow, and so on until the count which grew with the profits from which grew rapidly. When work was available, he was employed by the Canadian National Railways, or the Canadian Northern. It was known then.

The Dionne farmer married Elzire Legros of Corbeil, on Sept. 18, 1925, in Sacred Heart Church in that village. On May 28, his child's birthday same year, Dionne's father, Oliver Dionne, gave the old homestead to his son for $6,000. Young Dionne took the place over, making a substantial payment from time to time as savings, and his father moved in to Callander where he still lives.

The young couple's first child, Emilie, was born June 28, 1926, and the quintuplets, May 28, 1934. Since then, two others have been born,

WARNS OF DELAY IN SETTLEMENT. MAY HAVE TO ACT

Report Says Germany May Have to Act Though Not in Form of Attack

CANTONAL AUTONOMY?

Powers With Britain And Russia Approached, But Not France

Prahs, Aug. 26—(AP)—Disclosure of a German diplomatic demarche in several European capitals on the Sudeten German issue and of new Prahs government concessions in its autonomy-demanding Germanic minority came almost simultaneously here today.

Reports that Germany has given the Czechoslovak government indicated Germany has only a few days more she might have to act "to sponsor" the Sudeten German demands if a solution were too long delayed, but that such action would not be in the nature of an attack.

Cantonal Autonomy Suggested

The extent of the government concessions was not revealed, but it was known they dealt with the subject matter of the Sudeten German party.

(Havas news agency said it was understood the concessions would include the establishment of a 1920 law which provided for creation of territorial districts to enjoy considerable administrative autonomy. The law never was applied, Havas added, but it if were put into effect now it probably would be instrumental in forming a form of cantonal autonomy to the German and other national groups in Czechoslovakia.)

'New Basis For Negotiations'

Described by a government spokesman as "practical" and as a "new basis for negotiation," they were put forward by the political ministers of the Czechoslovak government last night and raised hopes of negotiators trying to overcome the deadlock.

However, the Prahs government was informed that Nazi Germany, which has assumed the role of protector of the Germanic minority of 3,500,000 in Czechoslovakia— had approached other nations on this issue—Britain, France, Italy and Russia but excluding France, Czechoslovakia's ally—and

May Take Means Short of Attack

Germany was said to have informed the powers approached that she wants the Sudeten problem settled peacefully. The German diplomatic demarche, according to the Prahs semi-official Lidove Noviny, was written were too long delayed Germany would have to sponsor the Sudeten demands, but that it might mean short of actual attack.

POLITICAL ROAD SAYS T. KAISER

Stormy Meeting of Oshawa Businessmen Held Last Evening

Oshawa, Aug. 26 (CP)—Charges that the four-lane highway between Toronto and Oshawa was a political road, were refuted, and, with political forces and political graft determined, the route was made last night by Dr. T. K. Kaiser, ex-M.P., at a stormy meeting of Oshawa businessmen.

The session was called to force action with the government over the proposed route in the southern section of the city.

Statements that the city council "had been asleep at the switch" and that "members of the Commerce had "double-crossed the citizens," were made, but finally a vote of confidence in the council was passed. Members of council said they were definitely opposed to asking the government to change the route as it has been laid down, like it it meant saddling the city with a debt.

City Won't Move

"When the Grand Trunk Railway was brought through the city a great many years ago, it made the same mistake that Attorney-General Conant is making at the present time," Dr. Kaiser declared. "It expected the city would move south through the south end of the city, the city would move south to it. That is precisely the same argument that Mr. Conant is pursuing now. Wrong and a mistake don't do it then and they won't do it now. A city doesn't move. Cobourg

NO REPORTS ON NEW METHOD OF FISHING

Taking a tip from deep water tuna and broadbill anglers off the southern coasts, two men in a motor boat throttled down to a slow speed on the bay last evening were giving an exhibition in a new method of trolling. A kite attached to the stern of the boat by a long line trailed far behind the boat over the water. No reports as to the success of the new method of fishing were available today.

DISMISS CHARGE

bility of certain evidence between counsel drew a mild rebuke from the bench, prior to the dismissal of the charge, Mr. J. Goodman appeared for the accused.

Will Serve Term

Pleading guilty to being in unlawful possession of liquor contrary to the Excise Act, William Boonbour was levied a fine of one hundred dollars and costs with the option of three months in the county jail. The accused, who pleaded guilty elected to serve the sentence and commission was laid by R.C.M.P. Constable W. M. Beattie.

"The next time you appear before me on a similar charge it will be six months," the Bench told Harry MacDonald, who pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. "This is your third offence and I sentence you to three months in the county jail," Magistrate Butler added.

James McIlroy, Vancouver, transient, who erred when he panhandled a police officer and other day, pleaded guilty to the charge and will serve the next seven days in the county jail.

Charged with vagrancy and disorderly conduct, Ivano Martino, a transient arrested by C.N.R. police the other day when he is claimed to have used abusive language near the C.N.R. station pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail.

Martino, arrived in Belleville, via the railroad without complying with the formality of buying a ticket, Crown Attorney Donnan told the court. After being accosted by officers he became abusive in his language, and bought a ticket. "Ten days in jail", said the bench, "and you are lucky that you don't get a month".

Given in Custody

A young boy, who faced a charge of theft of brass, was given over to the custody of Major Alderman after being placed on a year's probation by Magistrate Butler. The accused, who pleaded guilty through his father, was given in charge of the Salvation Army officer upon recommendation of Dr. Doyle, psychiatrist, that such a proceeding be undertaken.

STUDY VAGARIES OF FLOOD TIME

Bridge Piers And Rev.te ments Marked as Guages

Vagaries of the Moira River at flood time will be more closely and accurately studied in future following the chaining and surveying of the river undertaken during the past week by city engineer Chas. Mott and assistants. This week soundings of the river have been taken, and the length plotted from the Canadian Pacific Railway car bridge to the upper bridge. On the east and west sides of the river from the car bridge chain stations have been plotted and painted in red and yellow paint at 100 foot intervals. Water gauges have been painted on the car bridge piers and stone walls to the foot bridge, the upper bridge and later the College Street bridge. The actual complete surveying will be undertaken as far as Foxboro is concerned on the completion of a flood control report being undertaken by Alderman Burton Jennings, chairman of the Regional Planning Committee.

! Police Blotter

Sneak thieves were busy in the city last night, getting away with a coat taken from the car of Mrs. Irvan Perry, Trenton, that was parked on Campbell Street, police stated today.

In another section of the city the honeymoon ended in a symbol of good luck, was anything but that to residents of 70 George Street, who discovered that the tent erected in the rear of the property had been removed during the night. On the canvas is plainly marked the imprint of a horseshoe police were told.

A rather cool atmosphere drove a Belleville man of Lennox and Addington to the police station last night. He was found sitting in his car, which was parked on Front Street, with the windows closed and the motor running. Questioned by police he explained that he was trying to keep cool.

FIREMEN FIGHT STRENUOUS BLAZE

Building at Rear of Albert Wheeler Property, Front St. Damaged

Believed to have started from a carelessly thrown match, flames in their way up the rear wall of a wooden shed at the rear of a building owned by Albert Wheeler on Front Street, opposite Meyerson's yesterday afternoon finding their way into the roof, and giving city fire apparatus a forty-five minute battle before the smouldering blaze was finally extinguished.

Considerable damage was done to the private effects of Diedrich Kostrich, proprietor of a shoe repair and shine shop who lives in the attached brick structure between the shed and the main building. Smoke seeped into the London Lunch restaurant, and Naphan and Sherry's barber shop, with some damage being caused to ceilings in the building.

Two Lines Used

Firemen fought the stubborn smouldering blaze for over thirty minutes, and were forced to rip off a small section of the brick building in order to localize the blaze. Two lines of hose were used as tell-tale smoke seeped through the roof at many points, and the flames attempted to secure a foothold in the wooden sheeting between the roof and the rafters.

Clouds of smoke rolled out the windows of the second floor occupied and used for living purposes, that gave pedestrians of Front Street, the idea a general conflagration was threatening.

Slipped Is Saving

Firemen slipped away sheeting and siding of the building in their efforts to locate the blaze, that threatened at times to seep into the main building. Prompt arrival of fire department apparatus and speedy application of water, averted that blaze from developing into a serious fire.

Kostrich and his assistant were at work in the shop when a friend dashed in and told them the building was on fire. The former who, lives in the building near where the fire originated, stated that no fire had been placed in his stove that day. Personal effects, furniture and his furniture were ruined by water and smoke, he added. Insurance covered his loss.

ASSAULT CHARGE

The man who fired the shots fled into a 500-acre woodlot surrounding Thomas Sears' home but it was believed he had slipped through the cordon of officers and escaped into wild timberlands thousands of acres in extent. He was thought to be without food. Mark Sears' home, where he lived alone, was watched on the chance he would stop up to feed his stock on which he relied much time and care.

Interviewed in hospital where the bullet was extracted last night, Thomas Sears said he saw his brother-in-law and the man he lived with a rifle. "I saw him aim it at me and without warning he fired," said Thomas. "I threw my hatchet at him as he pulled the trigger but missed. I don't remember anything after that except falling off the roof in a faint."

Mrs. Sears, fearful the attacker might return, barricaded the house while her daughter, Kathleen, went for medical aid and police.

TOURIST'S FOOD

Tourist officials of the provincial government have been urging Nova Scotians to feature Nova Scotian foods rather than to attempt to please visitors by offering Virginia ham, Southern fried chicken, or corn pone. The visitor can get his usual American dishes at home, but a good Nova Scotia fish chowder some of our fresh strawberries, or later in the summer, a deep apple pie with biscuit crust, will give an impression of this province he will long remember. — Halifax Chronicle

BOLT STRIKES AERIAL WIRE

Breaks Post to Which Wire is Fastened at Corbova

During a sudden, localized electrical storm which burst over the district of Corbova this week, a lightning bolt struck an aerial wire on Lennox Township road, broke a pole to which the wire was fastened, followed the wires into the house and burned a large hole in the floor. Bottles of the radio which were all new, were shattered into pieces and the radio damaged. One strand of a violin lying on the table shrivelled into a burnt curl. Mrs. Thomas Lanning near the radio at the time, was dazed and stunned by the flash. She described it as a "large ball of fire flashing in the room."

NOW IT IS HUNGARY IN THE NEWS

The press this week has devoted more than usual attention to the European scene. Austria and Hungary, especially, has been welcomed in Germany with an enthusiasm on the part of the Nazis which shows how anxious they are to fete the representative of the state which was once part of the ramshackle empire which went to pieces during the Great War, namely Austria-Hungary, which has been under the watchful Nazi eye for some time. Not many months ago the Austrian Anschluss spelled absorption of that country by Germany and the world's eyes have watched Hungary ever since for signs of its attitude towards Nazi principles. Hungary lost portions of itself to Czechoslovakia, when that state was carved out of small groups in Central Europe after the war. Some discontent with Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia has been noticed, so that its not surprising that this has proven a chance for the Nazi ideals to sift into Hungary and to develop there some sympathy with the Germany with which Hungary as a portion of Austria-Hungary was allied in the war.

Hungary is a rich agricultural country and its trade issue is one of the great problems to face. Hitler wants more trade with Hungary for he wants more grains and other products, but Hungary, as an agricultural state cannot consume all the manufactured goods as the Germans would like to sell.

Hungary has been granted the right to rearm on an equality with the members of the Little Entente. How this will react against the German desire for closer relations with Hungary remains to be seen. Will it provide support for those in Hungary who wish to keep their distance from Berlin? In the democratic countries there is the feeling that the Little Entente's action is one of the big events in a year of unsettlement and will work for peace and offset any possible trend towards Germany among the Hungarians.

While the meeting of the leaders of Germany and Hungary takes place the Czech issue is still acute.

Germany reiterates in her press the claim of the Nazis that their policy is the one guarantee of peace and that Nazi aims are purely peaceful.

Italy on the fringe of the countries which are involved in Central Europe, it may readily be understood, is watching with interest any trends to the north and east of Italian territory.

NORTH OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Americans who have thought about it have generally recognized that an attack which brought o world war to Canada would bring that war to the United States. President Roosevelt's pledge of help to that "part of the sisterhood of the British Empire" should it be attacked by another empire therefore is not a sudden broadening of that field in which American sentiment already has accepted international responsibility.

What is notable is the statement-in-advance of deliberate intention to act positively in Canada's behalf. Between being drawn into a war because a belligerent's arms have come close enough to threaten American territory and announcing that Americans would take steps out of neighborliness and kindred ideals there is a difference. It is as importance a difference as that between entering "entangling games" to treat defensive forces and today's vast maneuevers which in the eyes of Germany's neighbors amount almost to mobilization.

That neighborliness and kinship should be stressed in such an utterance at a time when the rift between democracy and totalitarianism is accentuated by vast displays of force is even more notable. If there are any doubts in European chancelleries as to where American sympathy would lie in the event of a conflict between governments that extol individual freedom and those that scoff at it, the sequence of Secretary Hull's radio speech and President Roosevelt's address at Queen's University should help to dispel them. If there are many Americans who feel that Pan-Americanism can be a substitute for the broader international outlook, their decisions relationship between Canada and the United States should clarify their views.

In pledging aid to a neighbor on the north, President Roosevelt by no means committed the United States to any war not of its own choosing. He did not say American doughboys would follow Canadians to any future Flanders. He said only what few Americans would deny. It was the saying it that made the difference, and the time he chose in which to say it.

THE STING

A child of four short summers,
Across the fields of June,
I farcied through the grassses,
Where clover was a-bloom;
And thistles with their purple flowers
And wild-brier wondrous sweet
Were sights so gay, aluring,
To my wandering baby feet.

It was a world of wonder
That met my childish eyes,
The birds, the bees, the clover,
Were all a glad surprise;
And when a yellow jacket
Sipped sweets from clover flower,
I plucked the pretty velvet bee—
Oh! sorry was the hour!

The scene is oft before me—
When fields are bright with June,
I hear again the buzzing bee
Humming a drowsy tune;
I see the baby fingers
Grasping the bee again,
And then the cruel lesson
Taught by the stinging pain.

We are but grown-up children
Attracted by the glow,
The gleam, the gold, the glitter
of the fair world below;
And when with hands all eager,
We grasp life's luring things,
We find that gayest pleasures
Leave oft the sharpest stings.

JOHN O'LONDON'S WEEKLY IS A MAGAZINE PUBLISHED IN ENGLAND which has a large circulation and is very popular over there, but is so entirely different from Canadian and United States magazines as to be rather an oddity over here. A recent number has been handed in by a Sidelight Fan, carefully marked to indicate the high spots of entertainment afforded the reader. One page is devoted to the late Sir James Crichton-Browne, author of "The Doctor Remembers", with selected paragraphs from that book. One story that the Doctor remembered concerned Lord Young, famous Scottish Judge, who was considering a claim of insanity in a man convicted of a serious crime. The examining physician reported that the prisoner was quite sane, upon which the Lord Advocate, who sometimes affected broad Scotch, replied: "Verra weel, he'll hae to gang ta the Perth Penitentiary" (where Scotch criminal lunatics were then accommodated). "An' he's gey lucky, for in auld times there would hae been nae speerins and he would hae been drooned in the Nor Lock wi' a stun tied 'round his neck; but we canna do that noo, as the Nor Loch is the Princess Street Gardens."

x

Another story in "The Doctor Remembers" concern Lord Young, the Irish Judge. A man once consulted him as to whether he ought to contradict some erroneous and damaging statement made about him in an Irish newspaper: "Not at all," said Lord Morris, "Why if I saw a statement in the Freeman's Journal: 'Judge Morris has murdered his grandmother, I wouldn't contradict it. Why? Because if I did, there would be a small paragraph in a corner of the next issue to this effect: 'We find our announcement with reference to Judge Morris has been slightly premature'."

x

The Chief Constable of the Burgh of Dumfries in St. James' youth, was, he says, a Mr. Malcolm, an excellent man but rather slow and deliberate. He was also Chief of the Fire Brigade. On one occasion a call for the fire engine arrived, as a country house about five miles from the town, was on fire. Mr. Malcolm summoned his men, and when he had got them together thus addressed them: "Noo, men, C. house is on fire, an' I hear it's weel ableeze, so it'll be a long job—and ye'd better gang and get yers teas before we start."

Sir James died early this year aged ninety-seven—a grand old man of medicine who spticialized in brain disorders.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Aug. 26th., 1918.

Col. Ponton has received letters from the Minister of Agriculture and from the Minister of Public Works, stating that they will be pleased to visit Belleville some time during the coming autumn, in order to inspect the main roads in this vicinity and to consider other matters of public importance as suggested by the Belleville Board of Trade. Belleville will give the ministers a hearty welcome.

Mr. William Cross of Madoc village was in town today.

Miss A. Acland of this city is visiting her aunt, Mrs. George Clare, Tweed.

Mrs. James Hinds of this city is visiting relatives in Hungerford Township.

Chief W. J. Brown of the Salvation Army Department left this afternoon to attend the annual meeting of Fire Chiefs of Canada in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Pinkle of Los Angeles, California, formerly of Belleville, are visiting friends in the vicinity. Mr. Pinkle left five years ago to reside in California and are well pleased with their new place of residence and the climate there.

30 YEARS AGO

Aug. 26th, 1908.

Belleville is entete today; flags are flying in all directions, and everywhere decorative gladden and attract the eye, showing that our citizens are accepted the invitation of the local Sons of Scotland and are gladly doing their best to make today's gathering o' the Clans more successful than any previous like event. Early this morning visitors began to arrive in the city and by nine o'clock it looked like circus day in town. At noon the famous 48th Highlander Band of Toronto arrived and headed by dashing pipers marched to the main part of the city. They made a splendid appearance. This celebration is being held at the Agricultural Park and there is mirth and music galore.

Picton's tax rate this year is 22 mills.

The popular steamer, Aletha, will run to Deseronto, Glenora and Picton tomorrow.

As September Advances

Though such up-to-date pastels as wheat, muted pink, ice blue, arcon and mist are gracefully worn in grandmotherhood by ladies, Summer seems to hold fast to richer colors are for riper days. With maturity she changes to purple, mauve, bronze, indigo and mulberry, laying aside the shell tints that so became Spring. Soft greens, russet and dogwood tracks were the thing for long ago, when the bloodroot, windflowers, arbutus, mountain laurel and violets were in the prime of the season puts on the elegance of ironwood and cardinal — over a green ground of deepening. Between the still frosty enchantments of early and the last dance and flaring pyre of leaves the year slows with life but regrets in the accomplishment of planting ripening to fruit.

Even swamps and pastures will be magnificent as the asters begin to open, from blue as heather smoke or haze on far-off mountains to violet, rose to purple, royal mourning. Daily the northern hills wear heavier adornment of golden-rod. Colors of a deep ager duchess appear in the vine velvet on the trees of the forest.

CREMATION IS CHEAPER

Edinburgh folk are going in for cremation—the increase being described as phenomenal. Nor is it surprising to find that economy is at the bottom of the growing preference for cremation over interment.

No longer is cremation regarded as being costly, except for the wealthy class. It is said that now 60 per cent of cremations are of industrial wage-earners. And the midnight-blue satin, with a grey sheen, on grape vines along stone walls; the yellow orange and flame red of cracking bittersweet.

Wild turnip seed has ripened in the pumpkin blossoms, and the gentians are unwound from the lavender of sunset, vervain looms purple on the hills, goldenrod is clustered gentians in the ditches; pond lilies are withered and must yet add dark yellow, while magenta shows on loosestrife and the ironweed.

Who, in August, would not look May or hurry October? We would not relinquish pussy willows nor apple blossoms, fringed gentians nor witch hazel, but this overcoming goldenrod and finish of ripening bring in a time of peace, outdoors, felt as no other season of the year. There will be only ripening, now, until the great fields are mowed down in flower, one warning night, in the black wrath of frosts sickle.—New York Times.

press as evidence that the people are avoiding, whenever possible, anything in any way connected with burials."

The fact is being stressed that cremation results in a double saving—a cheaper funeral and saving after-costs. The ashes require neither a casket nor a monument. Instead of a cemetery, a "garden of remembrance" for the ashes of cremated citizens of Edinburgh has been suggested—and the idea is meeting with wide favor.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Disease Considered as a Protection to the Body

During flu epidemic a consulting physician examining the chart of a young medical officer sick with pneumonia following the flu) shook his head as he pointed to the number of white corpuscles (the cells fighting germs) in the blood. As the patient was very ill it was to be expected that the number of these corpuscles would greatly increase from the normal number of 6000 to 8000 per cubic millimetre to perhaps 20,000 or 30,000 whereas there was only about 11000.

The explanation of the consultant's feeling that there was no hope is that when the rise to 20,000 or 30,000 would show that the illness was severe as it would show also that the resisting ability of the body was very great in being able to provide this large number of white corpuscles.

Similarly when there is rapid but strong pulse, increased blood pressure and a rise in temperature, it is direct evidence that there is infection or other trouble in the body, but just as direct evidence that the body is putting up a fight against the infection or other trouble.

The late Sir M. McGregor in Endocrinology (science of the ductless glands—thyroid, pituitary and others) states "It would seem to me that the conception of fever should be that of a symptom-complex, increased heart rate, increased blood pressure, augmentation of white blood corpuscles, rise in body temperature—which we call disease processes, and that the condition which the body must assume in order to bring about the destruction of those elements which are causing trouble in the body, is most reasonably called fever. In this connection it is really show that the body is fighting the disease through these processes of inflammation and other reactions in the body to toxic or poison products which are the disease process."

You can readily understand then that if a physician is worried or concerned about the strength of the heart and the general condition of the body when temperature increased. he may make no attempt to reduce the temperature since to do so would be danger point as reducing temperature also reduces the fighting power of the

SEX DOESN'T COUNT

There is one sphere in which women have discovered they can work their heads off and get no credit for it—that is the banking business. A pretty smile, a well-shaped or well-pencilled eyebrows pass unnoticed when cold dollars and cents are under discussion.

Miss Margaret A. Parks is another. She thinks a lot of women, I know, because she is a prominent banker in Canada. Miss Parks, in her appeal, says Adiss Parke, cuts no ice in the banking game because she has nothing more than that to establish confidence of the public.

If anybody wants to make himself highly unpopular, all he has to do is begin by suggesting that this is a very unfair world. Examples are to be found in the banking field.—Windsor Star.

COMMENT

A woman and two daughters are hitch-hiking their way from Vancouver to Halifax, boast of the free meals and free accommodation they have received. Why success as a beggar would be the height of boasting is just another little mystery.—Ottawa Farm Journal.

REPORT FROM RENO

Take the case, for instance, of Mary Pickford. She lives in Reno, Nev. The hotel room he stayed in has a bathroom. The floor of the bathroom was tiled in mauve. The fixtures, sanitary and other, had a mirror on the wall. He found it amusing to look at the faces he saw in the mirror under the cold spray.

The main street of the town itself was lined with tacky establishments called clubs, where legions of women and a few men sat around tables and played a game which, translated, was Bingo. He said looked to be exactly the same game which was played in Bingo.

The devotees, instead of being young and beautiful creatures from Hollywood, all looked to him as if they were the wives of Kansas farmers. When he complained to a waiter about the absence of the expected youth and beauty, the waiter explained that they were the young and beautiful women staying at dude ranches and who spent days riding over the countryside with cowboys, trying to keep their beautiful figures, and were beautiful for their next husbands of the waiter said.—Baltimore Sun.

PAID HOLIDAYS

There are other things which make for happiness which are worth any sacrifice. This week the staff of Woolworth's store in town has been granted to every worker in the country. And the House of Commons has passed a bill forbidding a man to leave his wife and family unprovided for if he has anything to leave them. When you feel inclined to praise the government for improvement, compare your own. We have much that needs improving. Even as we are a long way ahead of any other country in the world.—London Sunday Chronicle.

A SMALL WORLD

The world is very small after all, as is evidenced by the number of famous people. Elderly Morris Tuklin had a birthday party in honor of his variety store in Brockton, Mass., and ordered cigarettes, they carried a amazement at Samuel Blumberg the proprietor. They had been favorite cigarettes of Blumberg's father 42 years ago. It was a joyful reunion. Both men and their respective wives were brought in to be introduced and they had little to talk about all day. The boying public, it may be narated, will find them sweet indeed.—Detroit News.

Cowcatchers Become Antique

From Regina comes a small news item about a red shorthorn cow which walked leisurely down the railway track, ignoring warning blasts from the whistle of an oncoming engine, and when struck by the engine turned a double somersault in the air, rolled over several times as she hit the ground, got up and walked away.

While the news item says nothing on the subject, the headline writer, using his imagination, put it over the item: "Cowcatcher Cow." Perhaps the headline man must have had in mind the old-fashioned type of fender once known whatever it is the railwaymen call it—that locomotives used to carry, and that was familiarly known as the "cow-catcher." Perhaps he assumed that in seeing locomotives often gowndays and was hardly back 65 the days of the 1880's, for the modern locomotive no longer has this contraption. It has only a steel frame hanging down vertically in front of the driving wheels and in advance of the end of the boiler, with a running-board on each side, which does not get a roofing.

The old cowcatcher was something different. It was shaped somewhat like a snow-plough, projecting forward to a point between the rails over which it hung low, and with a number of stout bars sloping back in sort of pyramidal fashion to the front of the engine and the "cow" was not quite sure of the proper technical term.) It was a device of American origin, common in England and on the Continent had nothing of the sort—areas designed to serve the purpose that its name described in an age when cattle and other animals were not only frequently inclined, as they still are, to wander on the railway tracks but were frequently successful in doing so. The fact that it has so largely disappeared may be another sign of the distance we have travelled from the pioneer stage.

There may be a few old locomotive with the old-fashioned cowcatcher rolling over Canadian railways, but they are not common in the story from Regina had one, for they have quite large rail how the red shorthorn cow could have travelled in the grounded discarded if hit by an engine with a modern front. We think it would have been a cow hooked out of cold.—Kingston Whig Standard.

MORAL SHORTCOMINGS

We want to strive in a hurry and avoid trouble. We are superatitiously afraid of annoyance. We cosschedule the future hence; we are not proud enough to lift our hands against absurdities even when we know we are right. We are cowards and vermin and are satisfied to grovel between four light walls while we urge dignity discretion upon the future that may be listening.—Le Petit Journal, Montreal.

TOO FAST

It is being said increasingly often that we have permitted the wonders of science to outstrip the capacity of our minds. In other words, we have developed the mechanics of civilization faster than we have developed knowledge of how to use them properly.

We believe there is too fast, and we should cultivate the art of being able to slow down.

So advises Dr. A. G. Routley, General Secretary of the Canadian Medical Association. And it is a thought worthy of consideration. We have gone far too fast socially. But what progress have we made intellectually.

The doctor is right—we travel too fast.—St. Catherines Standard.

FREE LUNCH

When a new restaurant was opened in Wellington recently, the proprietor conceived an idea to make the establishment popular from the beginning. He put on a free lunch and must have invited all and sundry. Indeed it is reported that 1,300 people took advantage of the offer.

Some of the people of the pretty little town in Wellington county are most likely to keep the free lunch idea going but only when they look upon it as a permanent one.—Windsor Star.

THE POLICEMAN

Why are there so many suicides among New York policemen? During the first six months of the administration of L. J. Valentine, there were 19, 18 in 1936, and 16 in 1937. For the first six months in 1938, there were 12. Considering the physical fitness these men must have, there must be something radically wrong with life and work conditions.—St. Catharines Standard.

AUTOS THRIVE

Technically at least, the automobile industry thrives on adversity. A bad year sharpens the wits of engineers. Discoveries and designers are exhorted to surpass themselves for the benefit of next year's customers. Imaginations work overtime and files are combed for the helpful ideas of yesteryear, laid away then as not merit-worthy or unpublishable. It is legitimate to look forward to something pretty novel and exciting in the models to be unveiled at the automobile fair this fall. The buying public, it may be narated, will find them sweet indeed.—Detroit News.

Skin Factor In Picking Lipstick

(By HELEN POLLETT)

FRANCES CARLON

Knows how to apply her lipstick properly

Lipstick is selected; don't just grab the prettiest shade on the cosmetic counter let it go at that.

The demure, retiring girl would be out of character with lips too brilliantly tinted. The dashing damsel with a flair for extreme styles may go the limit get every with Chinese red. Youth may have flaming lips as a rule, but middle age must only be rosy. Reflections in the mirror plus reflections of the mind form a combination that leads one along the right beauty path.

When the mouth is large and full, be generous with the coloring on the upper lip, be stingy when coloring the lower one especially if the lower one has a forward thrust. Include the inner surfaces of the lips.

Out-of-date is the Cupid's bow, so beloved years ago. It doesn't suit the girl of these times, who is capable, forward looking, self-supporting. If you outline the bow pattern when it isn't present, you make the other features appear large and coarse. Keep the coloring a bit lighter at the lip ends. Fricting the cream with the fingers, working for a smooth, even film.

INTO TREE AT GALT

Galt, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—One of a party four Twin City women motoring to Toronto to attend the opening of the National Exhibition, Mrs. W. Fyn (Wiler St.) Kitchener was taken to the local hospital this morning, after an auto accident. She suffered broken ribs, face and mouth lacerations and shock.

The car, driven by Mrs. Zella M. Heer (96 Allan St.), Kitchener, skidded on the wet pavement on Dundas Street and piled into a tree.

None of the other passengers was injured.

RHEUMATIC PAIN AGES YOU

Many a man has been the picture of health until Rheumatic trouble attacked him!

It's a sight to see him looking years older than he really is. But in most cases this is unnecessary. What causes Rheumatic twinges? Damp, Cold? No. The weather only aggravates what is already there. The cause of Rheumatic ailments, Neuritis, Lumbago, Sciatica, is often Uric Acid in your system. Uric Acid forms crystals hard, sharp, very painful. Uric Acid is caused by congested waste matter that stays in your body. And within that poisoned body is a sluggish liver.

Now Fynoco Salts helps stimulate the liver. The combination of Sodium, Potassium and the elements of Lithium in Fynoco Salts works through your system to clear out poisons and help dissolve Uric Acid crystals. With the cause of the trouble removed you are soon fit again. Large bottle of Fynoco Salts, 75c at all druggists.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

He's Not Bashful Just Naturally Quiet

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I take a girl out I am so quiet, I don't seem to be able to think of anything to say. I'm not really bashful; it's just that I don't know what interests girls. I was an only child and had to work my way through school, and now that I'm earning a pretty good salary, I like to take out girls occasionally, but would like to be able to make myself interesting.

A. L. T.

Different girls are interested in different things. And—if I may be forgiven for disclosing a secret of my own sex—all girls are interested in subjects which concern them personally.

Some girls like to talk about their work and the places where they are employed. Other girls are interested in outdoor sports and can talk like sports writers on baseball and other athletics. Other girls—and you would be a great many—like to talk about themselves, their moods, what silly things they had their sorrows. All young creatures think they get no where with a certain topic, then encourage them to tell you all about it.

His Lack of Education Changed Her Feelings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a girl for two years, but haven't told her everything about myself. I have had no education and therefore cannot hold a decent job. When I told her this and the kind of work I did, she immediately changed towards me. I see her often but while she says she still loves me she will not accept any of my invitations.

Lately she started going with a boy who has his own auto. I love her very much and don't know what to do about it. A very close friend of mine tells me to give her up. What shall I do?

Ralph

My dear man your lack of education couldn't have been very apparent as the young lady didn't notice it until you told her. Also the letter you wrote me was well-expressed and quite good enough to "carry you through".

Just as your friend says, I feel inclined to advise you to drop her for someone who appreciates you more. If you're dissatisfied with your job, why not attend a night school for learning, and get a little more education, so you can hold a better position? Good luck to you, lass.)

If a man is as slet as he should be about giving the first light to a woman's cigarette the question will not arise as to whether or not she should give him the first light. There are, of course, times when a woman might do this, but they should be exceptional times, since she would either have her cigarette lighted first by the man, or would light her own cigarette. If she strikes the match to light her cigarette and that simultaneously the man has struck a match, she immediately drops the match that she has lighted, to accept his courtesy.

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Writing Your Bread-and-Butter Letter

When you write your thank-you letter to your hostess, there are several things to have in mind. First is to write soon after you return so that your words will be fresh with the enthusiasm of your visit. Next is to remember that you always write the first letter to your hostess, even if you write other members of the family. And most important of all is, to keep in mind the point of view of your hostess. To put yourself in her place and so thank her not only for her hospitality in general, but for special details of her hospitality, special plans that she had for your entertainment. Better a too-long letter than a too-brief one.

A suggestion:

Dear Mrs. Jones:

Never did I have such a happy time as I had with you at the tea over last weekend! You are a perfect hostess. She is a perfect host and you both have the art of charming your guests.

Thanks for your delightful hospitality and for all the thoughtful and generous plans that you made for my happiness. It was glorious sharing the beauty of your garden, the perfect day of your picnic, the great pleasure of meeting your delightful friends. And among my most treasured memories, too, is the grand time I had at the country club dance.

I enjoyed every minute of my visit. . . ; and you and Jim gave me a wealth of memories and inspiration.

My dearest love to you both, my deepest thanks.

Affectionately,

Anne

Another suggestion

Dearest Peggy,

What a joy it was to be with you and Tom and the children, and what a memory-making visit I had! I need "brand-new" words to tell you of my appreciation of your goodness to me, of your delightful hospitality, of your "sweet ways" of making me comfortable.

Just being with you and your "given-to-hospitality" family would have been enough of a delight, but having added to this pleasure the perfect dinner that you gave for me, the merry picnic, the excellent swimming . . . how good you were to me, it was all so lovely!

Deep thanks. And best love to you all.

Devotedly,

Gloria

Adult Orders Confusing To Child

Be Specific Instead of Merely Telling Youth to "Be Good"

(By LISA GRENELLE)

MOST PARENTS want their children to be good. And it would be a great relief to most parents if their children were quiet, too, once in a while.

But what exactly do we mean by "being good"? It's hard to explain, isn't it? Mostly it consists of not doing anything to annoy us personally. Or it may be what is enjoyed by different things, each one of us by different things at different times. Or it may be merely conformity to the child.

Likely the good, from the child's point of view, only too often seems to appear to mean to stop doing whatever he is doing, and to conjure up some sort of nothing that might have pleasant possibilities (from his point of view, of course).

Each day it is different. One day "being good" consists in not swinging on the door knob. But the next day it is commanded "to be good" even though he is not swinging on this door knob. But "being good" seems to consist of not asking so many questions, although questions were permitted the day before.

Becomes Complicated

Now how can a five-year-old child, no matter how precocious, be expected to keep all that straight? As each day goes by, "being good" comes to include more and more "don't", becomes to the child more complicated and less definite as to meaning.

"To be good" in itself means nothing to a child. How can it? His standards of desirable conduct naturally are different from an adult's.

On the other hand "Don't saving on the door!" does mean something to him. He may not agree with you, of course, but at least you have given him a specific, understandable order that you can in all fairness enforce. It's a nuisance, from his point of view, but he is able to swing on the door, but it is clear that he must not, and if he does, he does so at his own risk with his eyes open.

It's tell a child to "be quiet" all the time is almost as unfair as expecting him to "be good". It's easier to understand perhaps, but even more difficult to follow. A child so often does not know when he is noisy. Noise is a pleasant, natural sound for him much as so his ears. Why not suggest that he take upstairs or outside or divert him into a more quiet game?

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Destined for success is the black velvet feather trimmed tiny hat. A nice number is a black velvet pork bonnet with a trimming of royal blue and cerise tiny ostrich tips around the high crown.

Be picturesque for evening. A decorative dinner dress is of black transparent velvet with a wide scarlet ribbon lacing the bodice seams on either side. Nice square neckline. Full skirt.

Back again are those fur sleeves on cloth coats that women liked so much last winter. A black cloth coat of green basket weave cloth with high collar, full sleeves and yoke back all of sheared beaver.

A lucky little girl will wear a lovely double-breasted fur coat done in gray broadtail with collar, cuffs and bottom all of red velvet. It is a copy of a coat made by a Paris house for the dolls presented to the little English princesses.

Still going strong are those trig, wearable shirtwaist frocks. A nice model is in gay light weight woollen with American beauty stock and links. The belt is of matching red suede and the skirt has pleats that are stitched to the knee line.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER BANQUET

A Mother and Daughter Banquet was held at the Front Road United church with an attendance of 75. Under the leadership of Mrs. Harry Grills, Convener of Community Activities.

The tables were very pretty with their decorations of flowers, crepe paper runners and place novelties.

Mrs. Grills acted as toastmistress and Mrs. Earl Grace and Grace was sung by all accompanied by Mrs. Fred Parrott and a lovely dinner was served to those present.

An interesting programme was given. The president, Mrs. Arnold Mitchell spoke a few words of welcome to all present.

Mrs. Clinton MacDonald gave a toast to the King which was responded to by Mrs Lulu Mitchell. All sang the National Anthem.

Little Jean Dent and Ilah Keene pleased the guests with a song. A toast to Our Country was given by Mrs. Fred Parrott and responded to by Miss Phillis Bradshaw. Three boys, Messrs. Earl Grills and Allan Bridge sang a song entitled: "The Three Bears". Mrs. Arnold Mitchell gave a toast to "Our Homes" which was responded to by Mrs. Clinton Brown and Mrs. Ivan Bowerman. Mrs. Bowerman and Mrs. Donaldson introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Ferguson of Belleville, who gave a very interesting talk, one especially interesting and helpful to Mothers.

Mrs. White, president of our District gave a very interesting talk. Mrs. Mitchell extended a vote of thanks to Mrs. Ferguson. Mrs. White and all who had helped make the banquet a success. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Sparkling beauties are many of the new afternoon bags for early fall and dinner wear. A fine one is a long envelope of green suede with a pocket set with rows of colored stones each one beautifully set. The pocket, which is long is appliqued on one side of the bag.

QUINTE W. I.

The August meeting of the Quinte W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Andy Reid with an attendance of 26 members and 26 visitors.

Mrs. Connors, first vice president, opened the meeting. After the business, Mrs. Hopkins took charge of the programme. The roll call name a Political Leader past or present. was well responded to. Mrs. M. Leavens of Belleville gave a paper on Educational Activities. Mrs. Harry Brown, convener. Mrs. Leavens chose as her topic "The young child, the influence of home and parents."

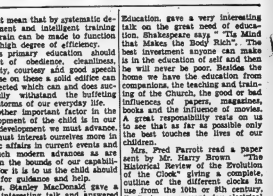
Education does not necessarily does it mean that by systematic development and intelligent training the brain can be made to function to a high degree of efficiency."



This primary education should consist of obedience, cleanliness, a love for nature, and good speech because on these a solid edifice can be erected which can and does successfully withstand the buffeting and storms of our everyday life.

Another important factor in the development of the child is in our own development we must advance. We must interest ourselves more in public affairs in current events and in such modern advances as are within the bounds of our capabilities for it is to us the child should look for guidance and help.

Mrs. Stanley MacDonald gave a very interesting talk and answered many questions concerning her trip to see the Ronne Quintuplets. Mrs. MacDonald said they are fine, very pretty and healthy little girls.

Miss Lily Weese, District convener of girls work spoke of her trip to Stirling on Achievement Day and the course to be taken up in the fall.

Mrs. Badgley, District convener of Education, gave a very interesting talk on the great need of education. Shakespeare says "Tis Mind that makes the body rich". The best investment anyone can make is in the education of self and then be never be poor. Besides the home we have the education from companions, the leadership and training of the Church, the good or bad influences of papers, magazines, books and the influence of movies. A great responsibility rests on us to see that as far as possible only the best touches the lives of our children.

Mrs. Fred Parrott read a paper sent by Mrs. Harry Brown "The Historical Review of the Evolution of the Clock" giving a complete, outline of different clocks in use from the 10th or 8th century, B. C. to our present day electrical clocks.

Mrs. Conner moved a vote of thanks to those who had given such wonderful papers and had helped make the afternoon one of education to all present.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem. Mrs. Reid and her conveners served a dainty lunch.

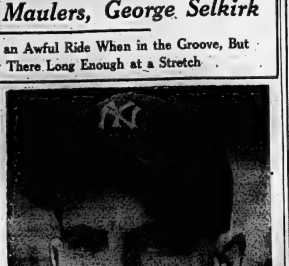
Baseball's No. 1 Tough Luck Guy Is Canada's Contribution To The Yankee Maulers, George Selkirk

He Gives That Ball an Awful Ride When in the Groove, But He's Rarely There Long Enough at a Stretch

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, — Twink Selkirk had another collision the other day, this time with Frankie Crosetti, and happily not serious. The Yanks' ill-fated outfielder merely had to be carried from the field this time, not sealed up in a hospital. 'It was the first good break Twink has had.—Io be in a collision and not come out with ribs misplaced vertebrae, torn shoulder muscles, a sprained wrist or a broken leg. Yep, Twink is beginning to get lucky.

A brief look back at the career of this amazing athlete discloses a chronicle of misfortune that rivals Hamlet.



To begin with George was in baseball seven years before he got a bark from the scouts. He played every position on the diamond in his sandlot days. The low¸e of the game was so deep in the guy that he didn't care where they put him so long as he could walk up there and take his cut. As a matter of fact, he is an outfielder by mistake. He was catching for the Cooper A. C. in Rochester, N. Y., where his family had moved from Huntsville, Ont., where George was born. There Rochester scouts picked him up. He was farmed immediately to Cambridge, Md., but when he arrived he discovered the Cambridge team expected an outfielder, not a catcher. Twinkletoes changed his life career very quickly changing the mask and pad for an outfielder's glove.

Seven years ago the Yankees picked him up at Jersey City, not so much because they wanted Selkirk, but to satisfy a debt the club owed. He was farmed back to Newark, optioned to Toronto and wound up in Columbus—all this in the season of 1932. He managed to get in a full season in the following year, part time with Newark, the rest with Rochester. Newark had him in 1934, and he bit so hard that the Bombers brought him in.

Took Ruth's Old Spot

George's tough breaks started at once. First of all, it was his job to make the fans in Rushville, that region of the stands in right field in Yankee stadium, forget all about Babe Ruth. That would have been a hard job for Ty Cobb, much less for George Alexander Selkirk, of Huntsville, Ont. But the guy was game. He put Ruth's old No. 3 right on his back and dug in. What a struggle! First it was a bum leg, then two bum legs, then an arm injury, then a bad shoulder. It got so bad that Joe McCarthy, noticing that the mental strain was getting George down, suggested that he abandon the No. 3 and try his luck with some other numeral.

But George refused. His reply to Joe was that he'd like to be tried just a little longer, because he would like to do the whole job, and removal of that old number would be a compromise with success. He'd do it or bust, and subsequent chance to come up. Twink was 29 years old.

HE GETS ALL THE "BREAKS"

The determined face of George Selkirk, New York Yankee outfielder, and the major league leader by,a wide margin in the matter of being put out of the game with events proved that bust was the proper word. He had cracked up a half dozen times, but always comes back.

Sinus trouble set in two years ago. Those who have had experience with the torture of drainage treatment a know what the guy suffered taking treatments in the morning and playing ball in the afternoon. Pain-racked, he refused to leave a game. The trouble affected his eyes, and his batting average dropped.

But last year when he started the season, everything seemed all right. No tape on his legs, his head feeling clear and fine, he started slamming the ball in a terrific clip. Toward the end of June he was leading both leagues with home runs, and hitting .348. Then, diving for a fly ball, he came up with ripped shoulder muscles. Just a tear, no breaks the x-ray indicated.

Torture on the Bench

Weeks passed with George on the bench, waiting for the muscles to heal. Perhaps you can imagine his state of mind. The Yankees have five or six star outfielders with minor league clubs, clamoring for a injuries. There's no telling what he'd do over a full season's route at the plate. But when he's in there he wields a powerful shillelagh.

last year, with not a very long major league career ahead of him at best.

Finally he started to throw again just tossing the ball a few feet at first, then moving back as his arm regained strength. One day he told Joe he was almost ready to play again. Joe asked him to throw a few. George grabbed a ball, only to discover that he couldn't bend his elbow. Trying to save his shoulder in the practice throwing, he had chipped a bone in his elbow. That was all for Twink—in 1937.

In spring this year at training camp, Joe shifted Twink to left field so he wouldn't have so much throwing to do. As usual, Selkirk started out at a fast pace, hitting and fielding like a fool. But the season was only a few days old when he crashed into a wall in Philadelphia while pursuing a fly, cracked up a nerve in his wrist. Back to the shelf!

Well, a few weeks ago he rejoined the team, but so far has not been able to quite get back into his old batting stride. He is hitting in the neighborhood of .270, which isn't the way for a man who is succeeding Babe Ruth to attack that apple.

Breakston and Raymond Hatton. The story is a simple, unaffected treatment of the difficulties encountered by Mickey Rooney when he purchases a second-hand automobile without telling; his father of his plans. Consequent difficulties drive him to a despair from which he is rescued by the wiles of Judy Garland.

Joe Penner is appearing in "Go From the City" an unrouious laugh jamboree featuring Harly Kay Sutton.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Great Guy"

Opening at the McCarthy Theatre, "Great Guy", James Cagney's first picture for 20th Century and National found a house filled with fans eager to welcome the popular redheaded, dynamic youngster; who has been absent from the screen for almost a year.

Needless to say they gave their favorite an enthusiastic reception when he appeared as Johnny Cave, a young deputy in the Department of Weights and Measures of a large city, who sets out to break up a powerful ring that is profiting greatly through a short weight racket.

The story is based on a series by James Edward Grand, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, in which Johnny Cave, a two-fisted earnest, ruggedly honest youth tries to make good in a new field. The character is one which gives Cagney every opportunity to show the kind of melodramatic action, which his admirers like best in him, and the story moves rapidly with plenty of surprises and suspense.

Mae Clarke, who scored with Cagney in both "Public Enemy" and "Lady Killer", two of his outstanding screen successes, plays opposite him in "Great Guy" and provides the romantic interest, effectively. Others in the well-balanced cast are Edward Brophy, James Burke, Robert Gleckler, Henry Mollor, Bernardine Hayes, Edward Gargan, Edward McNamara and Joseph Sawyer. It is a Douglas McLean production and is edited by John G. Blystone.

An excellent program of featurettes including Polly Moran in a hilarious comedy entitled "Sailor Maid", Litzi, Sybil Jason in an all technicolor treat, "A Day At Santa Anita" and a very clever and entertaining musical cartoon entitled "The Stork Take a Holiday" provide tribute to making up a swell screen show that all will thoroughly enjoy.

BURMA ELEPHANT TRAVELS AS EXPRESS PARCEL

Toronto, Ontario.—Far from her native of Burma, "Toots" 4 year old elephant, has crowned a job of travel into her young life. After capture and schooling, she was shipped from Rangoon, direct to Halifax, N.S., and from Halifax via Toronto to Erindale in care of the Canadian National Express which takes care of elephants as part of the day's work. "Toots" had fun during her railway journey playfully ripping off the bars from the car window, flattening her food pan flatter than the proverbial pancake, nothing boisterous, just good, clean fun. Given a bushel of fresh juicy carrots, "Toots" was happy and disembarked at the journey's end quite prepared to live happily in her new Canadian home. Her keeper, now at Erindale, near Toronto. Ordinarily, her menu was quite simple, just one bushel basket of hay daily plus a plentiful supply of fresh water. The Canadian National Express has transported a menagerie at various times bringing specimens of Canadian wild life to zoos in various parts of the world, and, in turn, bringing specimens of other wild life to Canada.

HOPES ARE RAISED

(London dispatches said Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, might indicate again the possibility that Czechoslovakia's independence, resulting in France's going to her aid, also might involve Britain.)

The new concessions were described as "material, but by no means going the full length of the sweeping autonomy demanded by the Sudeten Germans."

Approach

By J. F. Sanderson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 26.—(CP Cable)—Reports from Praha that the Czechoslovak government was considering a new approach to the problem of its Sudeten German minority, seeking minority was welcomed by the British government today as an indication of a spirit of conciliation necessary to an eventual solution.

The terms of the new proposals were not known here but it was pointed out concessions must not be made only by the Czechs if the danger to European peace is to be removed. Until the terms are known and the attitude of the Sudeten Germans is indicated, it was impossible to gauge the full import of the latest development.

Meanwhile Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, put the finishing touches to his speech on Scotland tomorrow which may clarify the British approach to the Czech question.

Appeal to Hitler Possible

He was not expected to enunciate any new policy, but may make an indirect appeal to Chancellor Hitler to use his influence in settling the problem which disturbs the peace of Europe.

It was believed in some quarters Hitler holds the key to the Praha discussions through his influence over the Sudeten Germans and their leader, Konrad Henlein, and if he could be persuaded to use his position for a peaceful settlement, he would end the crisis.

It was understood the Czechoslovak government's action move while welcomed by the British government, does not lessen appreciably the disquiet over the Sudeten German problem which continues to be regarded here as a major threat to peace.

AT THE BELLE

"LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY"

Judge Hardy's Family is turned loose for the fourth time in "Love Finds Andy Hardy," coming to the Belle theatre.

The same group which won wide recognition for his work in "Judge Hardy's Children," is found in the new episode, with important additions to the cast in Judy Garland and Lana Turner, making this the most pretentious of the series.

With George Betts again directing, an inside story of the drama would is to be found in every American family is unfolded in an amusing and realistic manner.

Attention has been given to the romantic problems facing young boys and girls in a mid-western city. Their heart-breaks and happiness, amusements and adventures are authentically painted against a background of the home.

Lewis Stone again plays Judge Hardy, kindly, un-tersanding and discerning head of a family of five. Mickey Rooney as his son, Andy, is a happy-go-lucky, irresponsable youth, growing up and finding that such things as girls exist in his world. Judy Garland has been given the cast bringing her remarkable singing voice and indisputable charm to the role of one of Mickey's three girl friends. She sings three songs in the picture.

Of interest is the debut of Lana Turner, sensational new discovery under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner supporting cast includes Cecilia Parker, for the fourth time daughter of the family, Fay Holden as the mother, Betty Ross Clarke as Aunt Milly, Gene Reynolds, Ann Rutherford, Mickey's "steady" girl, Marie Blake, Don Castle, Mary Howard, George

Philadelphia Pair Nugent and Wilson Smartest Buyers Also Sellers of Ivory in the Loop

Phillies Stop Pirates Twice With Butcher And Hallahan

BEES NOW FIFTH

Senators Tighten Hold on Fourth Place by Win Over Tigers

(By Sid Feder)

When all the returns are in from this year's baseball business you're going to find Jimmy Wilson and Gerry Nugent, have pulled the biggest rabbits out of the hat again.

Reading from left to right you have Jimmy in Buffalo in the side-kick Gerry Nugent, pulling their yearly feat one for Philadelphia in the open trading market, and Casey riding hard on a bunch of Boston Bees, who've got him in the first division, of the National Baseball League.

Wilson and Nugent have been the two smartest buyers and sellers of ivory for the past five years or so. Whatever they get rid of promptly falls apart in new surroundings (remember Chuck Klein?) and whatever they buy up for next to nothing winds up first in gold.

In the latest example of their hoss-trading Gerry came up a few weeks ago with Max Butcher, who had been fiddling around with the Dodgers and gave him a chance to show three years. The Phils sent Chunky Lafy Lamaster to Brooklyn for him.

Tried to Change Style

Max told Wilson his previous managers tried to change his pitching until he didn't know for sure which end was up. "Why, Max, you just go ahead and throw them the way you want to," Jimmy told him.

So Max did. And in less than two weeks he has gone the route four times whipped the Giants nearly twice, shut a tough shaver to Boston, and yesterday he stopped the Pirates 3-1 with seven hits in one end of a doubleheader, both sides of which the Phils took from the League-leaders.

In the other half, Will Bill Hallahan came up with his first win of the year, a five-hitter, for another 2-1 decision, thereby slicing the Bucs' first-place margin in the National League race to 4 1-2 games.

Bees Winging Along

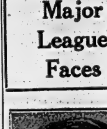
Getting along to Stengel. When he succeeded Will McKechnie at Boston this season, everyone predicted he'd be lucky to wind up somewhere between sixth place and Slacy. But Casey has those still stingless Bees with a 3 1-2 game hold on fifth place right this minute, and, from the way they tore into Cincinnati Reds in both ends of a twin bill yesterday, 6-4 (in 12 innings) and 3-2, it would appear they have serious designs on a money spot.



The Reds' double defeat, coupled with the Chicago win over the Dodgers, 3-2 and 5-4, boosted the Cubs into a third-place tie with Cincinnati. The second-place Giants outslashed the Cardinals for an 8-7 edge in 11 frames, to pick up a game-and-a-half on the Pirates, getting the deciding run without a hit, on a walk, an error, and a fly.

American League

In the American League, the Yankees rolled merrily along to a twin win over the Indians, making 16 hits good for 20 runs to score at 5-2 and 15-3. The Red Sox stayed 13 games back in second place by whipping the White Sox twice. Jackie Wilson taking the opener 5-0 Joe Having the nightcap 8-5.

The senators tightened their hold on fourth place with an 8-2 margin over Detroit, and the Athletics jumped onto seventh place by splitting with the Browns, Buck Newsome going 17 frames to win the opener 8-6 and Buck Ross' five-hitter taking the after piece 4-1.

OLD GEORGE UHLE COMES BACK ON PITCHING MOUND

Ex-Big Leaguer Used Twice to Finish Games

QUITE SUCCESSFUL

Newark Bears Have Practically Cinched Top Spot in Loop

(By The Associated Press)

They've wheeled old George Uhle out to the pitching mound and the 40-year-old ex-big leaguer is showing the International baseball league that he can still get them out.

Uhle who acted as a coach under Steve O'Neill when the latter managed Cleveland Indians and moved over to Buffalo in the same capacity when the former catcher took over the reins of the Bisons, is making a belated but successful campaign as a hurler again.

O'Neill gave the sign to relieve Johnny Marcum Sunday against Jersey City Giants and the bald-headed right-hander hadn't pitched a game since 1936, just doing an uprising that saved the game for the Bisons.

He got the call to go in again last night in the first game of a doubleheader when Marcum once more was getting his bumps, this time from Rochester Red Wings, and doubles off "Footsie" had almost dissipated a five run lead the Bisons had built up. Red Wings, when Uhle came in. He was credited for a single but he got the next two batters, one on strikes, to end the game. The Bisons came back to take the second game 2-1.

Meanwhile the champion Newark Bears moved a step nearer to cinching their second straight pennant by walloping Jersey City Giants 14-6. The win increased the Bears' lead to 18 1-2 games over Syracuse Chiefs, who ran into something unique in the way of a postponement. Failure of the Chiefs to embalm forced the Syracuse management to call off their game with Baltimore Orioles. Toronto and Montreal were not scheduled.

BOBBY PEARCE STRONG FAVORITE

First of Series of Races For Sculling Title at C.N.E. Tonight

Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP)—The king of professional sculling, Bobby Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., will together with three pretenders to his throne tonight in the first of three races for Pearce's world title. The belief is general that Pearce will defend successfully.

His opponents, headed by Evans Paddon, are all from Australia where Pearce was born and where he lived until taking up residence in Hamilton after winning the sculling events at the 1930 British Empire games. They will row a quarter-mile over the Canadian National Exhibition course.

Percy Lee, Northern Rivers District champion, and George Cook, champion of New South Wales, will accompany Paddon and Pearce but, according to veteran boatmen who have watched the quartet train, they'll be going along only for the boat ride. A lot of people think that's all Paddon will get out of it, too, besides his share of the purse.

Just how much money the huskies are rowing after is not known. When Pearce and Paddon were signed for the race there was talk of a $2,500 personal side bet, which Pearce still is willing to post but on which the Australian champion wants odds. Pearce won't give them.

Next Friday the quartet will race at a mile, building up for the three-mile feature event the following Friday, Sept. 9. Tonight's will be Pearce's first competitive race since the fall of 1937 when he whipped Bill Miller, the United States champion, with ease.

New York, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Most disappointed man in Big League baseball is Oscar Vitt—the guy his Injuns foisted on Tony Galento goes into the Poconos Friday to recoup from yesterday's upset. The hitting streak of George McQuinn of the Browns, who had connected safely in 34 straight games before he was stopped yesterday, has the rest of the league paying attention. . . . The tenuly Poo Baha can't get over Lou Gehrig's withdrawal from the National Championships . . . And are they furious.

Dick Coffman, Giant relief pitcher, is the apparel in his fewer than forty games this year—a record for the season. Harold Parrott writes in the Brooklyn Eagle that Mrs. Willa Moody never intended to play in the Nationals, preferring to quit (the amateurs) while she's on top . . .

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

The battle of the umps still rages merrily around these yere parts.... The C.O.D. is still in the throes of a verbal and pohmmar afternath with the Peterboro and Oshawa scribes tilting in typographical cross-fire, that has the fans wondering just what the outcome will be.... The Liftlock laddie comes out flatfooted with the statement that Curnew and "Babe" Shepherd, Toronto, have been engaged for the fourth tilt between the squads at Peterboro next Saturday, while the Oshawan yells "No dice".....

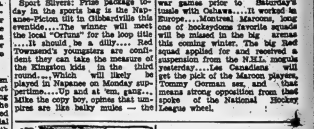
At the matter stands we are very much informed that the arbiters appointed to handle this important series, and who were named to act in such a capacity by Prexy Max Swanston, of the C. O. D. L. have received no communication as yet of their being kicked out on their ear.... In our humble opinion, we believe that presidents of baseball clubs and not the teams are appointed for just such a reason, and if the Peterboro fans are taking matters in their own hands, stormy weather may be ahead.

However, the Petes mentors are acting rather coldly about the matter, and if what the Peterboro sports scribe says is right, and we have no reason to doubt his word, they change their mind with startling regularity..... Any day they decide not to protest, the next they say they will.... However Saturday afternoon will tell the story..... And by the way, it's pretty tough if it doesn't dry across body's washing, and don't be surprised if you hear the attendance records are broken in the Pete's Park.... They tell us, the fans of both places are taking up the cudgels in defence of their respective clubs, and fireworks are liable to happen any time now....

A Kingston scribe, like this corner sought a spot high and dry and far from the scene of the battle during the melee at the Pale the other evening. Here is what he says....

"After the first Belleville player plugged the umpire several of the fans swung at him. From then on the meet severe crisis there is a note of humor and it was just absent during Monday's riots. One of the irate fans, who wanted to poke the Kingston arbiter mistook a native of his home town for Twigg and smacked him right on the nose. This sure speakt well for the kind of supporters who attend the Belleville contests."

President Harry Rollins has been requested to send him a full report of the circumstances surrounding the unfortunate episode at the Flats the other night, that ended in a near-riot..... The genial Harry was in conversation with Secretary Vernon McIlwraithe of Belleville, yesterday, who intimated that full suspension of the two players involved would hinge on that report..... In the meantime the game, that will decide the city championships between the Centennen and Corby's is hanging fire, pending the decision of the O.A.A.A. people..... In all likelihood the game will be played on Monday night, but that is not definite..... Harry stated yesterday that he did not desire to embroil the Point Anne squad in any controversy by playing the game before the decision is handed down by the governing body.....



As it is, if Reid draws a year's suspension, it will have an effect on Ray Mitchell's baseball career baseball squad who at present are sitting back waiting for a decision. The Point Anne-Picton series, with whom they tangle in the first season and who came through with some timely hitting and fielding, if the suspension by the Softball Body is handed out.

The suspension will prevent both players from participating in amateur sport or any kind for a year, and that means Reid is out of baseball, if and when the suspension comes through.....

One of the wiser heads at the Battle of Roman Flats tells us that he stopped over to pull up his socks when he heard the swish of a right hook go over his head.... He beat a hasty retreat, fully convinced that a sock on the foet is worth two in the eye..... Which makes it unanimous.

Sport Silvers: Prize pickings today. In the sports jag is the Napanee-Picton fill in Chibardville this eventide.....the winner will meet the local "Certus" for the loop title ....It should be a dilly.... Red Townsend's youngsters are confident they can take the measure of the Kingston kids this round.....Which will likely be played in Napanee on Monday supertime.....Up and at 'em, gate-spoke of the National Hockey League wheel.

more you yell at 'em, the more fixed they become in their ideas (and decisions).....Eighty-eight English soccer teams kick off on Saturday to start the long grind that ends next May. Five-second penalty by the English F. A. proxy contains an appeal to players for "fair play," and to help the referees, not hinder them..... Jack Sharkey and Max Schaaling and Belleville—Straightening out of the Corby's, Tunney's tangle is expected today.....Nod to Poet Perdue—why not have the Petersboro police indulge in a few more prize fights to fill-day's recess with chaws.....It worked in Napanee—Picton fill in Chibardville this eventide.....the winner will meet the local "Certus" for the loop title ....It should be a dilly.... Red Townsend's youngsters are confident they can take the measure of the Kingston kids this round.....Which will likely be played in Napanee on Monday supertime.....Up and at 'em, gate-spoke of the National Hockey League wheel.

Homer J. Herndon of Hartwell, Georgia, writes:

I have read everything of yours that I can find in an effort to discover something that may help me, but have found nothing by you nor anyone that is explicit enough to help me with a thing that is giving me my most trouble—short irons and shots. I frequently find myself taking three, sometimes four, to get down from 10 to 25 yards off the green.

"I have tried various methods of chipping only to find that I cannot make any of them work consistently. Now I wish you would please answer these questions: On a short chip shot, should the body be used or should the swing be made entirely with the wrists? If the body should not be used, should the weight be evenly divided between the feet, or should most of it be on the left or the right foot?"

Chip Shots

Mr. Herndon's questions are very much in order, although I'm sure he would have found the answer to them if he had read my instructions carefully. Many players seem to be entirely at sea when it comes to the part played by the body in making short shots. It should never be held absolutely still, but in moving it should do so only in response to the easy motion of the arms and hands.

Special mention must be made of Bill Pigden in the junior boys, who gave Mills a hard run for the title. The track and field points now move to tie new home on the west grounds, when the final score by added the west were victors for the pennant by a score of 153 points to 135 scored by the east.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 26 (CP)—Volume was about the best of any day this week on the Toronto Exchange, but at the end of the third hour transfers reached only 20,000 as stiffened a slight more and mining issues attracted a considerable following.

Golds were firm except for some of Macassa which slipped a few cents. Base metals were generally strong, ranging around 46 1-2. The Atlantic issues, weak yesterday, remained firm.

Heavy favorite all day, Wells Amulet rose another 2 1-2 cents after closing yesterday at 2.65. Fluctuations in Smelters and Noranda were slight.

Ford featured the relatively quiet industrial group, adding a gain of 1-4 at 21 1-4. Canadian Car and Foundry showed slight improvement while National Steel Car kept steady.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—After a feeble attempt to penetrate the side-lines professional speculative pack, Stock Market leaders today generally held back and took a scrambling spell at lower levels. Profit-taking centred on the rails and specialties in the group while rubbers following an early forward lead, reacted. A slight recovery and extreme gains in many cases were converted into losses of as much as a point an hour. There were modest advances in evidence at the close as the proceedings approached the finish.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by C. G. Fields and Co.

On the long view the prospects for Gold shares seem at least as encouraging as industrials generally. From all investment viewpoint, the outstanding characteristic of the gold share market is that it caters for all varieties of taste. When it is remembered that a dividend-paying gold mine offers a hedge against inflation and industrial depression ,the Gold share market's claim the considerable merit can be accepted on the present time a strong one.

Although senior golds stocks have made no further gains from the levels attained several weeks ago the accumulation seems to persist at present levels. A study of the portfolios of the many investment trusts in the United States reveals that important buying of Dome, Lake Shore, McIntyre, Noranda and Hollinger has taken place during the past three months. One American investment trust, which have over two million dollars invested in our senior gold issues are contemplating the possible investment of close to one million dollars in the Buffalo Ankerite, Barlowe, Macassa, Pickle Crow, Sylvanite, Little Long Lac, Consolidated Rambler and others.

According to advices from Ottawa, an announcement is expected shortly, in connection with the progress being made towards making Canada a producer of airplanes on a large scale. The information, which is unofficial, bears out the impression that the fact that the companies will do the final assembling and construction in Canada but the components will be manufactured in the United States required, with any profits accruing divided proportionately among the holding companies. Further details in connection with this move are expected very shortly and should prove very interesting.

International Nickel Recommended By Financial World

The Financial World, an American publication firm takes the opinion that the shares of International Nickel are suitable for investment in the present investments programs.

Considering depressed copper prices and idle demand for International Nickel's products during this period, the first half net of $1.06 per share constituted a creditable showing. Current indications, however, that an improvement from this level will be reported over the balance of the year. Better copper prices abroad—where most of France's copper and nickel production is sold—are presently benefitting operations. And with its dominant industry position, International Nickel may be expected to capitalize fully upon any industrial revival in the United States.

World of Bugs and Insects Revealed at Belleville Fair

Devastating Insects And Also Parasites Shown in Exhibit

By their scales and their mandibles, their colors and destructive specialties may be known the 20,000 of late years Belleville and district residents have been able to see the more and more comprehensive knowledge of the insects of the world, the large and the minute, the valuable gardens and the more common kinds who ravage the family garden. Through the annual exhibit of the mysteries of the insect world shown at the Belleville Fair by the local Dominion Entomological Bureau branch under the care of Mr. A. B. Baird, B.A., chief of the laboratory.

Perhaps the only one of its kind in the world, the exhibit arranged by Mr. Baird, conceded one of the most interesting entomologists in his specialized calling, has become one of the most popular and most interesting exhibits to be seen at the Fair. A world in miniature, peopled by inhabitants whose lives are as predatory and grim as the fabled jungles, the pulsing exhibit is brought through the courtesy of the Dominion Government to the doorsteps of local residents. There one may view through microscopic lenses and with the aid of the daily dramatic struggle of the survival of the fittest.

Spruce Saw Fly

In these carefully screened boxes one may view the latest threat to the spruce trees—spruce saw-fly whose inroads in the timber stands of Northern Ontario lately has been the subject of concentrated effort by the forestry entomologists of the country aiming at their control. In other small cages one may see the progression of the spruce destroying corn borer, a more real enemy of district growers as he advances from the egg stage to the grub, and finally to the crawling worm which destroys the corn from within the pulsing stalk. Then there is the pea weevil, the potato beetle, the cabbage worm, the cut worm, the wire worm, the grain weevil, the grain moth, the flour beetle, the meal worm, the bean weevil, the bean moth, the clothes moth, the carpet beetle, the fur beetle, the silver fish, the cockroach, the bed bug, the flea, the louse, the mosquito, the fly, the gnat, the midge, the wasp, the bee, the ant, the moth, the butterfly, the beetle, the bug, the grasshopper, the locust, the cricket, the katydid, the walking stick, the dragon fly, the ant lion, the termite, the thrip, the scale insect, the aphid, the leaf hopper, the tree hopper, the plant louse, the mealy bug, the white fly, the cicada, the caterpillar, the sawfly, the leaf miner, the leaf roller, the bark beetle, the ambrosia beetle, the wood borer, the gall insect, the tent caterpillar, the gypsy moth, the brown tail moth, the tussock moth, the fall web worm, the cecropia moth, the polyphemus moth, the luna moth, the sphinx moth, the tomato worm, the hornet moth, the clear wing moth, the cutworm, the army worm, the corn ear worm, the fall army worm, the pale western cutworm, the bertha army worm, the variegated cutworm, the dingy cutworm, the greasy cutworm, the spotted cutworm, the red backed cutworm, the black cutwor

Three Bears and Goldilocks

By MARY CARR

Once upon a time there were three bears—a great big bear, a middle-sized bear and a little bear. . . .

The great big bear was John Holman. He was twenty-four, and he was an exceedingly attractive young man. He was a bear. Barbara said so.

The middle-sized bear was Hollis Holman. He was fifty-five, and an exceedingly attractive middle-aged man. But he was a bear—Barbara said he was.

The little bear was Darius Holman. He was seventy-nine and he was a most lovable old man. Barbara said he was. But she said he was a bear. And Barbara knew.

Barbara was the Goldilocks of this story, and she lived in the house of the three bears. She had a recently come there to live, as the wife of the great big bear. Now, on a soft August morning, after an breakfast looking most tantalisingly attractive,

"You're just bears, all of you," said Barbara. "And I'm not going to pay a bit of attention to any of you say. I'm going to take John's car, and father Hollis' rake's cost, because I haven't any and I might have to get out, and grandfather Darius' money, and I'm going right straight over that mountain all by myself, no matter what you think. Give me ten dollars, grandfather, will you, because John's so cross I don't like to ask him for any."

Grandfather Holman chuckled as he reached for his wallet. "I think you're a stubborn young lady, Barbara," he said, "but as you'd go whether I helped you out or not, why here it is." He took out a twenty-dollar bill and handed it to his grandson's wife.

"I wish you wouldn't, Goldilocks," said young John. "It'll be sickly as the dickens on those high hills. Why can't you telephone—send 'em a check and telephone you can't come?"

"It isn't just the money they want—though grandfather was darling to give me all this. But it's that they want me, too. I've got to go."

There's nothing better!

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"

In the end both Jim and Hollis Holman gave money to Barbara for Harvest Home day at her pet charity, the Children's hospital at Brompton.

"But be careful," cautioned her husband as he and his father got into his car to drive to business. "What time'll you be home?"

"Oh, by five o'clock, anyway. Don't worry, John. I'll be careful."

When John and his father got home that night from work they entered the warm, lighted house in anticipation. A howling storm raged outside.

"Here, grandfather," called John from the living room. "So you won't have to take the car down to meet the bus for him. Too bad, grandfather, we didn't get home earlier to meet you. Slow traveling though, in this weather. . . Where's Goldilocks?"

"I don't know," said the old man. "I just got in three minutes ago, and stopped here to take my bones on the way upstairs."

John and Hollis upstairs. Their room was empty. And just at that moment the front door came running breathlessly in from the garage. "Just ran the car in," he said, "in spite of the storm. Goldilocks' car isn't there."

"I know," said John. Grandfather Darius joined them in the hall. His three men looked at each other.

"Those slippery roads,' said Dar-ius.

"I'll go upstairs and get my raincoat on," said John—"so if I have to drive over that way, you know—"

Hollis had rushed to the telephone. But finally he was told that the wires to Brompton were down.

"Well," John said—"guess I'll have to go over to Brompton—over the road she took"

"I'm going too," said grandfather Holman. "I'm not going to sit home here and wonder whats happening."

Ani grandfather Holman started upstairs. "I'm going to get my rubber overcoat," he said. "It's in a leather bag in my closet."

A moment later a hearse shout came from upstairs. "Holman! John!" he called. "Come here."

When John and Holman precipitately answered his hurried call they lip-toed behind him, at the behest of the finger held warningly over his lips, into the guest room. In the bed was the old man himself with which the old man had armed himself to help in the search or Barbara. There they saw Goldilocks curled up on grandfather Holman's bed, sleeping peacefully.

"Oh—she" said Goldilocks, sleepily opening starry eyes. "Why, what's the matter? Why the lamp light? What time is it?"

Goldilocks stretched luxuriously and then jumped nimbly to her feet, there before her, she said. "It's like Goldilocks getting caught by three bears. You see, I was cold, and this a warmer room. . . .

"But where's your car?" asked Father-in-law.

"Yours, you mean, don't you dear?" laughed Barbara. "I ran off the road—but it was right down in the village. So the garage man there brought me home and he's hauled the car to his garage to fix it. Final—guess that's what made me run off the road. Well, come on. Three Bears, and let's get ready for dinner".

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, August 27

By GENEVIEVE REMBLE

A RATHER active and prosperous day is indicated based on the lunar transits. But while there may be certain gain in business, in activities and attempts at new undertakings, with some advance in emotions and in the good graces of superiors, there also is a sign of a sudden upset or unwelcome minor venture. It may involve small loss, or an irritating situation in which personal correspondence may play a part. Be careful with writings.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly active and progressive year, with some recognition or favors in employment, or even further satisfactory activity in business. Yet, an irritative or aggravating situation may suddenly arise involving a small loss, or creating much concern in relation to a private matter or letter. Discretion in this direction is enjoined.

A child born on this day may be rather well equipped for successful employment or gaining the good graces of influential persons who will advance his career. It may have intellect, refinement and merit but its financial experiences may be fluctuating or uncertain.

MOIRA W. A.

The August meeting o the Moira W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Kelheson on Friday the 19th., with a good attendance. It being visitors' month, a large number of visitors was present.

After a delicious dinner, the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Frank Emerson. Quiet music was played by the pianist, Mrs. J. Williams. Opening hymn 240 was followed by prayer by Mrs. Thompson. A discussion on Foreign Work by Mrs. Henry Emerson proved very interesting. A solo by Miss Irene Vandervaart of Belleville "In the Garden" was greatly much enjoyed. Mrs. Angus Mumby gave an instructive talk on China, exhibiting several relics sent her by her aunt Mrs. Grace Simmons of China. Mr. Sam Kelhesson contributed a selection on the accordian. A reading "The Garden" was given by several of the young ladies, Mrs. Ken. Hall, Sec. C. Townsend, Mrs. A. Emerson and Misses Betty Foster, Lily Poste and Dorothy Ellimen. Is there?"

"Never useless, my darling," he said unsteadily. "Just to know that you are you, and somewhere, near me."

"Don't, Chris."

"Why not?" he said roughly. "Isn't it at last time to speak the truth? I'm sick of camouflage. I've reached my limit."

"Please! You have your own life. You have your work."

"My work," he said. "Yes, I've got my work, and that's all I have got! I'm a man like other men and—Sorry, Beverly dear, I shouldn't have said that. And don't look like that. I'm all right. Don't worry about me."

Some one opened the door then and glanced in. "This was her room. Look, even her toilet things are still there."

"It's hardly decent, is it?"

It was Katie shoving a visitor around. She gave Chris an angry glance and closed the door.

An hour or so later Chris found Katie in the lower hall, flushed with anger, tapping a high-heeled pump on the floor.

"Well, of all things!" she said shrilly. "Was this any time to hide away with Beverly Ames?"

"We were not hiding. That's absurd."

"Then what were you doing shut up with her in that room?"

He controlled his anger. "If it were true, would it really matter to you, Katie, one way or the other?" he asked quietly.

"I'm not going to be laughed at behind my back. That's fair."

"And that's all?"

"That's enough, isn't it?"

She was still angry when they got into her car and she put her foot on the gas. They shot down the driveway through the traffic and into the street, blind to caution, blind to a policeman's signal, and finally all but blind to Mrs. Andrews who was in the course of crossing the street.

Chris saw it coming and braced himself; saw Katie clap the only thing left to her to do. She twisted the wheel violently, there was a crash and the sound of breaking glass. He saw Miss Andrews safe in the street and then he found Katie beside him, and then he felt a sharp pain in his right arm, and saw blood pouring down.

He sat there dimly, clutching at his arm.

"Chris, are you hurt?"

"Only my arm," he said. "Get my coat off. I've got to stop this bleeding."

And with the aid of the policeman he did stop it, using his own handkerchief for a tourniquet. He even managed to walk back up the driveway again, the officer steadying him.

"You'll be all right, sir. Just keep on so."

"Damn it all, man, don't hold me up. My arm isn't hurt."

"Well, you've had a shock and you've lost a lot of blood. Just take it easy."

All perfectly reasonable. Calm and reasonable. "Walk along. One step after another. What's a cut in the arm? Don't make a fool of yourself, Chris. Keep on. Don't make the steps! I'm like a scared kid. I must keep on. Keep on."

"Sorry, Officer. I'm afraid—"

"They were the last words he spoke," Chris told Beverly.

He became conscious again late that afternoon. He was lying in a strange room and with a nurse sitting beside the bed.

He did not move. He lay there trying to orient himself. He knew where he was. He knew Katie. And the nurse rustled to her feet.

"Mr. Andrews!" she said. "Doctor!"

"I don't know. My head aches. What happened?"

"You've had a little accident. You're all right. If you'll try to sleep—"

"My wife—is she all right?"

"Absolutely. She left you."

He said nothing. He looked down and saw his right arm bandaged and lying on a pillow. The nurse followed his eyes.

"How about this? What have I done to it?"

"Nothing much. A cut. It's been attended to. You'll be up and around in a day or so."

But he hardly heard her. He knew hospital talk too well to take what she said at its face value. He knew the fixed professional smile of the nurse too. He focused his attention on the arm. It felt dead, dead and heavy. He tried to flex his fingers, but there was no response. Perhaps it was the bandage. But as he told himself that, he felt a cold shiver of sheer horror. It was not the bandage. His mind was clear now, his keen professional mind. He knew what had happened to him: the musculospiral nerve had been cut, and only Providence could save him from a useless arm. In that case he was through. Almost before he began he was through!

"Get somebody in here," he said. "I want to know what's happened. Go on," he said sharply when she hesitated. "I don't care what time it is. I've got to know."

It was Ted Lawrence who came in, from a chair in the hall; a Ted suspiciously cheerful, grinning down at him.

"Now will you take a vacation?" he demanded. "I've been. He couldn't smile like that if the trouble were serious.

"That's the truth, is it?"

"That's what they tell me."

He lay back and closed his eyes. The relief was almost more than he could bear.

"Where's Katie?"

"I took her home and gave her something to make her sleep. She's all cut up over this; no joking. Chris, Miss Ames herself all over the place, poor girl."

Some time later that night they told Miss Morphie. It stilled the pain, but it did not stop his mind from racing. It flung itself in wide and wider circles. It took in his whole life, his errors, his ambitions. He remembered work. And then it contracted, until his world became a pillow with his right arm on it, and a numbness which might yet be the final catastrophe.

He did not know the truth until the next day. Then something like a delegation filed in and examined him. But he did not need to be told what they found. It lay there on the pillow beside him. He lifted the arm himself and saw the "dropped hand" of paralysis.

"A nerve severed." He said bitterly, "And then how long, if ever? You fellows know what it means."

"Chris, my dear, you're not going to give in like this?" Beverly said. "You're not a coward. You're not going to be beaten by a thing like this. You're not going to be beaten by anything. You're not going to be beaten by me."

"They quoted cases to him, reasoned with him, listened, making smiling. They were good fellows. They meant well. They stood over his bed like a group of doctors talking their jargon, making small jokes for his benefit.

He was operated on a few days later. He had lost a good bit of blood, and he was not in any hurry. But he was impatient, furious, when he listened.

"I can't lie here," he said. "Get it over, or by the Lord Harry I'll get up and do it myself."

So they operated, going in carefully, finding the nerve ends and uniting them. After that he was again in his bed for a time, trying by sheer will power to give strength and motion into that dead hand. And then, despair! It lay on his pillow in its cock-up splint, still inert, unresponsive. He could sever the nerve ends by his heart.

"Enough," he thought day and night. "I'm through! I'm through."

CHAPTER XLVII

Chris hardly saw Katie sitting with unaccustomed patience by his bed; a Katie who had taken over which she tried to help with powder. A Katie determinedly cheerful. Until one morning when a regretish egg, small jars of broth. But Chris refused. Katie for all that, not coming too close, never offering to touch him. Standing a little way away from the bed, watching him breathlessly.

"Have a good boy and eaten your spinach?"

He would try to answer in kind. "Absolutely, my dear. I've had it hoed and weeded."

When Katie left the room, however, she had little to say. Her old chatter was gone. Caught off guard, she had betrayed herself, and if he noticed it at all, it was to think that she was sorry for herself rather than for him.

"I'd better go, Chris. I'll see you tomorrow."

"Right. Better get out and stir some air. I'm not good company."

Once he wakened from a doze however, to find her furtively wiping her eyes. He was astonished. She even made a move to pray for that helpless right hand of his to-ward her.

"What is it, Katie?"

"You will be able to use it again, won't you?"

He looked at her. Did she care that she had destroyed him? Or was she merely anxious for her own security?

"You mustn't blame yourself too much, my dear. We both contributed to what happened," he said wryly. "We'll get along somehow, you know. Don't worry. Time's a medicine. It that's it. We may be in spite of all reassurances. Meanwhile, you'd better get back to your own life. You have your own life. You have your work."

"Don't, Chris."

"Why not?" he said roughly. "Isn't it at last time to speak the truth? I'm sick of camouflage. I've reached my limit."

*The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

"It's all right, son," he said. "Go to sleep. It's all right."

The small boy relaxed in his arms, and he sat there in the semi-darkness, his long legs stretched out in front of him, the child sleeping with his head on his shoulders. So he would have sat, he thought, in the warm darkness of his own house, holding his own child. But there was comfort in the contact of the small body, and after a time he, too, relaxed. It was as if they had each something to give the other, man and child, and that something was escape from loneliness. He tightened his hold unconsciously.

When the nurse returned some time later, Chris had gone, and the child lay quiet in his bed.

CHAPTER XLVI

The new hospital was formally opened the next day. No patients had yet been removed, and the big wards stood open and empty in their spotless newness, the private rooms gay with chintz and flowers. By Lewis's will the old house was the nucleus, the core around which the great buildings had been erected.

The staff was there, such nurses as could be spared, the city fathers even much of the city itself. Press photographers were lining up people in what had been the private room, taking their pictures by flashlight.

People pointed Chris out. "That's Doctor Arden." His big figure towered above most of them, and they knew that he was conspicuous. They crowded around him, paying tribute, looking up at him, eyes shining his success.

"Is that Doctor Arden? But how young he looks!"

"He's the coming man, my dear. Look at his hands! I say you can always tell the surgeon's hands."

Always afterward he was to remember that voice whispering behind him, and the half-amused pride with which he kept still the hands! The hands of a surgeon! But he moved on. He saw Katie gay and laughing and surrounded by a small court, mostly men. She waved to him as he passed with Miss Beverly, looking tired but smiling. And here and there, mingling with the old-fashioned hats, the men and women who for so long had carried the hospital through its years of struggle. Their work was done now and so they had dwindled into corners, tired with good work, no longer important, and facing an uncertain future where they were no longer needed.

He was late, and most of the crowd had gone, when at last Chris made his way upstairs to the domestic Lewis Suite. Here, in this upper room with the bronze plate on the door, Annie Lewis had died. Now it was the Annie Lewis Memorial Suite. She had loved stained, but like other furnishings as he remembered them; and Stanton Lewis's recent death, in the room where once he had retired to his solitary nights, was now permanently attached to it as a sitting room.

Strange burst remorse in that, perhaps, some sense of restitution; the door to be left open now, and the two rooms used as one. What Lewis felt, writing that—as he had written it—with his own small cramped hand.

Chris moved over to the window and stood looking down on the new river, sparkling in the late sunlight. It was the river which had divided his life, he thought, not clearly as it divided its two banks, but in the good graces of his superiors, there also is a sign of a sudden upset or unwelcome minor venture. It may involve small loss, or an irritating situation in which personal correspondence may play a part. Be careful with writings.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly active and progressive year, with some recognition or favors in employment, or even further satisfactory activity in business. Yet, an irritative or aggravating situation may suddenly arise involving a small loss, or creating much concern in relation to a private matter or letter. Discretion in this direction is enjoined.

A child born on this day may be rather well equipped for successful employment or gaining the good graces of influential persons who will advance his career. It may have intellect, refinement and merit but its financial experiences may be fluctuating or uncertain.

MOIRA W. A.

The August meeting o the Moira W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Kelheson on Friday the 19th., with a good attendance. It being visitors' month, a large number of visitors was present.

After a delicious dinner, the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Frank Emerson. Quiet music was played by the pianist, Mrs. J. Williams. Opening hymn 240 was followed by prayer by Mrs. Thompson. A discussion on Foreign Work by Mrs. Henry Emerson proved very interesting. A solo by Miss Irene Vandervaart of Belleville "In the Garden" was greatly much enjoyed. Mrs. Angus Mumby gave an instructive talk on China, exhibiting several relics sent her by her aunt Mrs. Grace Simmons of China. Mr. Sam Kelhesson contributed a selection on the accordian. A reading "The Garden" was given by several of the young ladies, Mrs. Ken. Hall, Sec. C. Townsend, Mrs. A. Emerson and Misses Betty Foster, Lily Poste and Dorothy Ellimen. Is there?"

"Never useless, my darling," he said unsteadily. "Just to know that you are you, and somewhere, near me."

"Don't, Chris."

"Why not?" he said roughly. "Isn't it at last time to speak the truth? I'm sick of camouflage. I've reached my limit."

"Please! You have your own life. You have your work."

"My work," he said. "Yes, I've got my work, and that's all I have got! I'm a man like other men and—Sorry, Beverly dear, I shouldn't have said that. And don't look like that. I'm all right. Don't worry about me."

Some one opened the door then and glanced in. "This was her room. Look, even her toilet things are still there."

"It's hardly decent, is it?"

It was Katie shoving a visitor around. She gave Chris an angry glance and closed the door.

An hour or so later Chris found Katie in the lower hall, flushed with anger, tapping a high-heeled pump on the floor.

"Well, of all things!" she said shrilly. "Was this any time to hide away with Beverly Ames?"

"We were not hiding. That's absurd."

"Then what were you doing shut up with her in that room?"

He controlled his anger. "If it were true, would it really matter to you, Katie, one way or the other?" he asked quietly.

"I'm not going to be laughed at behind my back. That's fair."

"And that's all?"

"That's enough, isn't it?"

She was still angry when they got into her car and she put her foot on the gas. They shot down the driveway through the traffic and into the street, blind to caution, blind to a policeman's signal, and finally all but blind to Mrs. Andrews who was in the course of crossing the street.

Chris saw it coming and braced himself; saw Katie clap the only thing left to her to do. She twisted the wheel violently, there was a crash and the sound of breaking glass. He saw Miss Andrews safe in the street and then he found Katie beside him, and then he felt a sharp pain in his right arm, and saw blood pouring down.

He sat there dimly, clutching at his arm.

"Chris, are you hurt?"

"Only my arm," he said. "Get my coat off. I've got to stop this bleeding."

And with the aid of the policeman he did stop it, using his own handkerchief for a tourniquet. He even managed to walk back up the driveway again, the officer steadying him.

"You'll be all right, sir. Just keep on so."

"Damn it all, man, don't hold me up. My arm isn't hurt."

"Well, you've had a shock and you've lost a lot of blood. Just take it easy."

All perfectly reasonable. Calm and reasonable. "Walk along. One step after another. What's a cut in the arm? Don't make a fool of yourself, Chris. Keep on. Don't make the steps! I'm like a scared kid. I must keep on. Keep on."

"Sorry, Officer. I'm afraid—"

"They were the last words he spoke," Chris told Beverly.

He became conscious again late that afternoon. He was lying in a strange room and with a nurse sitting beside the bed.

He did not move. He lay there trying to orient himself. He knew where he was. He knew Katie. And the nurse rustled to her feet.

"Mr. Andrews!" she said. "Doctor!"

"I don't know. My head aches. What happened?"

"You've had a little accident. You're all right. If you'll try to sleep—"

"My wife—is she all right?"

"Absolutely. She left you."

He said nothing. He looked down and saw his right arm bandaged and lying on a pillow. The nurse followed his eyes.

"How about this? What have I done to it?"

"Nothing much. A cut. It's been attended to. You'll be up and around in a day or so."

But he hardly heard her. He knew hospital talk too well to take

CHAPTER XLVII

Chris hardly saw Katie sitting with unaccustomed patience by his bed; a Katie who had taken over which she tried to help with powder. A Katie determinedly cheerful. Until one morning when a regretish egg, small jars of broth. But Chris refused. Katie for all that, not coming too close, never offering to touch him. Standing a little way away from the bed, watching him breathlessly.

"Have a good boy and eaten your spinach?"

He would try to answer in kind. "Absolutely, my dear. I've had it hoed and weeded."

When Katie left the room, however, she had little to say. Her old chatter was gone. Caught off guard, she had betrayed herself, and if he noticed it at all, it was to think that she was sorry for herself rather than for him.

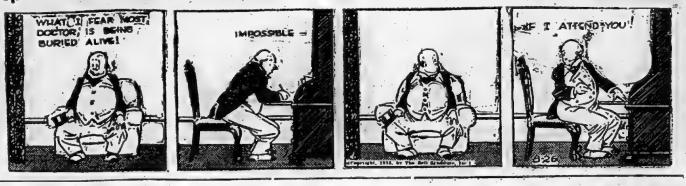
"I'd better go, Chris. I'll see you tomorrow."

"Right. Better get out and stir some air. I'm not good company."

Once he wakened from a doze however, to find her furtively wiping her eyes. He was astonished. She even made a move to pray for that helpless right hand of his toward her.

"What is it, Katie?"

"You will be able to use it again, won't you?"



He looked at her. Did she care that she had destroyed him? Or was she merely anxious for her own security?

"You mustn't blame yourself too much, my dear. We both contributed to what happened," he said wryly. "We'll get along somehow, you know. Don't worry. Time's a medicine. It that's it. We may be in spite of all reassurances. Meanwhile, you'd better get back to your own life. You have your own life. You have your work."

We were eatig supper being liver and onions in pop's honor, and I waited till pop was looking satisfied with life on account of being half ways through his 2nd helping, and I said, Ma and Shorty Judge was in the front room this afternoon, and he gave me a push and I wasnt going to stand that so I gave him a push back, and he's not as cool of a ballooner as what I am, so he went over backwards and one of his elbows went through a pain of glass in the back window and broke it, but Shorty didn't cut himself.

I'm glad of that, but perhaps not as glad as I ought to be, pop said. Horse blanket to blanket, that will cost me 75 cents or a dollar just for a lot of slepeless nonsense. Is there any reason you wild Indians cant push each other out in the street where there's plenty of elbow room uninterrupted by valuable pains of glass? he said, and I said, I'd never of thought of pushing him if he hadn't of pushed me first for no reason.

By golldee if his parents had any sense of decency they'd send a man down here to put in a new pain of glass, pop said, and ma said, That's what I was thinking. I notice these confirmed pushers and shovers always wait till they get in somebody else's house before they start their ruff tactics, and their parents are 8 tents to blame and ought to be made to pay for it. Why couldn't he start pushing you in his own house? she said.

Well O, ma, that's just what he did, I said. I didn't say we was in our house, and Shorty's mother said the same thing. I mean she said you ought to send a man up to fix it, are you going to do it? I said, and pop said, No, you're going to do it out of your savings.

It will just serve you rite, we'll just wait to see if Mrs. Judge calls up and mentions it as an said.

Making me feel partly lucky, on account of Mrs. Judge being much better natured than what she sounds.

"Cap" Stubbs and Tippie— By Edwina

DEFENCE MINISTER

This was a denial of Col. Drew's statement that the total cost of the guns was expected to be $2,000,000 and that the maximum profit permitted was $467,000.

Mr. Mackenzie's Ottawa statement recalled that in the House of Commons last February he suggested all defence department contracts be referred to the public accounts committee for examination. His statement said that "this article makes many statements which are not facts and by misapplication of facts may cause readers to draw false conclusions."

Flaxton Not Interested

Hugh Flaxton, youthful Liberal member at parliament for Toronto Trinity, who was mentioned in the Drew article, said in Toronto, "I am in no way, either directly or indirectly interested, in or connected with the Inglis Company which is located in the constituency which I represent."

Col. Drew charged that three employees of Flaxton and Company, Toronto law firm, are directors of Investment Reserves Ltd., and that five directors of Anglo Engineering are employed in the Flaxton and Company office. He said both these companies held stock in the John Inglis Company and asked what was Mr. Flaxton's position "in the suite of offices occupied by Flaxton and Company."

Resignation in 1935

Mr. Flaxton said he "resigned from Messrs Flaxton and Company on Oct. 19, 1935, due notice of which Drew had as per articles of dissolution which were published in the Ontario Gazette of March 14, 1936, in accordance with the Partnership Act."

Mr. Mackenzie's statement referred to the use of the word "mysterious" by Col. Drew in relation to the contract and pointed out the contract was tabled in the House of Commons last session and given to the press.

He stressed that the British and Canadian contracts are identical and were given in accordance with the British policy of establishing "shadow factories" as a means of developing reserve manufacturing against an emergency.

Contract of British Type

The British government had developed a type of contract agreement to fit the purpose and the Inglis contract was exactly of that type. The British government had returned down a Canadian suggestion that tenders be called, relying on voluntariness any delay. Mr. Mackenzie declared the saving to the Canadian government through the contract being a dual one was estimated at $1,300,000.

The safeguards incorporated in the contract were identical with the British government's established practice, particularly those which defined the items of cost on which profits might be earned and those on which profits might not be paid.

Col. Drew had listed a large number of items of cost, paid by the government, which enter into cost and on which the government, he said, also paid 10 per cent profit. Mr. Mackenzie replied, that "the implication of his statement 'nothing is forgotten' is definitely misleading."

No Access to Records

The Minister of Defence also commented on a note, preceding the article which said the "author's statements are based on departmental records as of Aug. 5." Mr. Mackenzie said Col. Drew had no legitimate access to any departmental records of any date.

Col. Drew's article said the contract itself "and what lies behind the formation of Canada's armament industry, are matters of public concern because this company accepts the responsibility of becoming the only source of the essential arms for Canada's land forces. For good or evil the stage is now set for the private manufacture in Canada of primary implements of war."

He reviewed the background of the contract and suggested that while the government may not have appointed Major James Hahn, promoter of the Inglis Company, to go to England in 1937 and 1938 to survey munitions production, the government obligation itself up to a maximum of $20,000 to pay the cost of "preliminary investigation, planning and engineering services carried out" by the company. He suggested Major Hahn must have had some undisclosed status.

Refers to Inglis Company

Col. Drew declared the John Inglis Company is be a concern organized in November, 1936, with Flaxton and Company acting as solicitors. The new concern obtained the use the name of the John Inglis Company whose property it acquired.

The magazine article went into the financial structure of the company, saying investment Reserves Ltd., on April 30 last held $2,888 of the 258,000 shares. Anglo Engineering Co. Ltd., 23,333 Major Hahn 107,964 and the Toronto Brokerage firm of Cameron, Pointon and Merritt 23,000.

In concusion Col. Drew asked 20 questions relating to the contract the John Inglis Company and the other companies, declaring Prime Minister Mackenzie King can answer them satisfactorily.

Col. Drew's Article

Entitled "Canada's Armament Mystery", Col. Drew's article recalls that on March 31, the Canadian Government contracted with the John Inglis Co. for manufacture of 7,000 Bren machine guns. A similar contract was entered into with the company by the British Government for 5,000 of these weapons.

The necessary manufacturing machinery, says the article, was to be supplied by the Canadian Government, and total cost of the guns whose property it acquired.

The agreement was characterized by Defence Minister Mackenzie as "one of the finest contracts that ever was signed in the public interest of Canada", and the two contracts provided for payment on a cost plus ten per cent basis, the article continues.

The Canadian Government pays two-thirds, Col. Drew says, and the British Government one third of the cost of the guns, and operation costs, with ownership of the machinery remaining with the government.

Public Concern

"The contract itself, and what lies behind the formation of Canada's new armament industry, are matters of public concern", said Col. Drew, because this company accepts the responsibility of becoming the only source of the essential arms for Canada's land forces. For good or evil the stage is now set for the private manufacture in Canada of primary implements of war."

The article reviews the post-war commercial activities of Major Hahn and declares the present John Inglis Co. to be a concern organized in November, 1936, by Major Hahn, with Flaxton and Company, a Toronto law firm, acting as his solicitors. This concern obtained permission to use the name "of the

Statement Analyzed

At considerable length Col. Drew analyses statements made by Mr. Mackenzie in the House of Commons relating to the Bren gun contract and to the Defence's Department's requirements in these weapons. He suggests the while the government may not have appointed Major Hahn to go to England in 1937 and 1938 to survey munitions production, the vernment obligated itself up to a maximum of $20,000 to pay cost of "preliminary investigation, planning and engineering services carrid out" by the company. He suggests Major Hahn must have had some undisclosed status".

Col. Drew charges Mr.Mackenzie was not correct when h told he House of Commons that it to Defence Department had no contil over he Bren gun specifications, since he Minister granted a licence and established specifications to he Jon Inglis Co.

Drew's Claim as to Profits

The over-all limitation of profit on the 12,000 guns is $42,000, says Col. Drew, but declares ther clauses written into the contrct open he way "to add a very substantial ligure to the profits". He clares he government "pays the sacries of all Co., although their activities are not confined to the manufacture of machine guns."

The Government also pays trawling expenses both payable from the date of the contract "whether any machine guns are delivered or not".

Col. Drew lists a large number of items of cost, paid by the government, which enter into cost, and on which the government, he says, also pays 10 per cent. profit.

Details of production agreed upon are examined by Col. Drew and he declares the public have a "right to know what salaries Major Hahn and his associates are receiving".

Examines Financial Structure

Col. Drew examines the financial structure of the John Inglis Co. nominal capital, he says, is 250,000 whose capital, he says, is 250,000 shares of $6 par value. The proprietary of the old company he says was bought from Stanley Burse, officer of the brokerage firm of Cameron Pointon and Merritt, Toronto, for $100,000 cash and 107,964 shares of stock the new company assuming an existing first mortgage of $150,000. He then discusses in detail the manner in which he says the company was set up.

Major Hahn's holding are subjected to Col. Drew's scrutiny and his relation to the other companies commented upon. In conclusion Col. Drew asks 29 questions relating to the contract, the John Inglis Company and the various other companies, declaring they are questions which Prime Minister Mackenzie King alone "can satisfactorily answer."

Demands "No Secret and No Mystery"

"This private enterprise is a virtual monopoly engaged in the public service and supported by public funds," he says. He demands there be "no secrets and no mystery".

The urgent need of the nation must not provide the opportunity for large profits to friends of any government," says Col. Drew. Canada is waiting for an answer."

Have Your Coupons Ready

Three patrons of Belleville Fair this year will have reason to long remember the occasion with pleasure for three lucky patrons will have the privilege of purchasing an automobile for the small sum of one dollar. Each evening after the grand stand performance, there will be a drawing to see who holds the lucky ticket entitling them to purchase one of the three automobiles presented by the Belleville Fair Board for one dollar. The coupon holder must be on the grounds and must present the lucky coupon when the number is called. This will be an interesting ceremony nightly and loud speakers will be used so that everybody holding coupons can hear plainly.

Just a tip to coupon holders—have your coupons listed in order on a sheet of paper so that you can see at a glance whether the lucky number is yours.

Those who fail to win the first drawing will have a chance at the two other drawings and so "hope will spring eternal" in many breasts until the last drawing is made.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. B. Thomson
Science Service Meteorologist

Underground temperatures!

Men who study underground testify to the uniform temperature there. The changes in temperature from day and night that occur at the surface are not noted 3.5 feet underground; and the seasonal changes in temperature disappear at 60 or 70 feet below the surface. This is called the invariable layer; it is not constantly so but usually. If water is obtained from a spring at that depth, its temperature will remain unchanged throughout the year, and very probably would be the same as the yearly average temperature of the air at the surface.

Charge Conspiracy of Guards To Cover Facts in Prison Deaths

Philadelphia, Aug. 27 (AP) — Coroner Charles Herrell charged today there was a "definite conspiracy on the part of guards to cover up what really happened" at the Philadelphia County Prison where four convicts met mysterious deaths in super-heated punishment cells.

The guards obviously rehearsed their stories in an attempt to whitewash the whole affair," the coroner said.

"The conspiracy" had temporarily delayed his plans to arrest "higher ups" and a "blackjack squad" of guards who are blamed for turning steam on in a battery of large radiators outside the cells and "deliberately baking the prisoners to death".

"The guards obviously rehearsed their stories in an attempt to whitewash the whole affair," the coroner said.

CHANCELLOR SAYS BRITISH STAND IS FOR PEACE

War Not Inevitable Says Chancellor, if Nations Work for Peace

WARNING STANDS

British Armaments Cause No Suspicion, They are Force for Peace

Lanark, Scotland, Aug. 27 (CP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today definitely told Great Britain on the side of peace and justice when clarifying the Chamberlain government's foreign policy to an anxious world.

The Chancellor served notice that Prime Minister Chamberlain's warning to Germany over Czechoslovakia in the House of Commons August 24 "holds good today".

In hour long talk the chancellor was scheduled to speak he revised his speech to put his own punch behind Mr. Chamberlain's blunt warning that Britain might be forced to fight.

"The beginning of a conflict is like the beginning of a fire in a high wind," he said.

"It may be limited at the start. But who can say how far it would spread or what destruction it would do or who may be called to beat it out?"

Fire to Take Pressure Off Quarrel.

In another last-minute insertion, Sir John added this warning:

"This very case of Czechoslovakia may be so critical that it would be impossible to assume a limit to the disturbance that a conflict might involve and everyone in every country who considers the consequences has to bear that in mind."

Without mentioning Chancellor Hitler of Germany, Sir John said that an unmistakable plea to the Fuehrer to take outside pressure off the Czech minority quarrel.

Sir John spoke at a Conservative rally in this Scottish town after two conferences during the week with the Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, after a week of alarming reports from Prague and Berlin over the Czech situation.

He emphasized Britain's position on Czechoslovakia was "fully and accurately" stated by Mr. Chamberlain March 24 in the House.

"That declaration holds good today," he added. "There is nothing to add or vary in its substance."

Mr. Chamberlain at that time declared to give a new commitment to go to war over an invasion of Czechoslovakia, but added: "Where areas or issues are concerned whose obligations are not alone involved, but which are more remote, it is unlikely to be confined to those who have assumed such obligations. It would be only the prelude to that where it would end and what governments might be involved cannot say."

At that time Mr. Chamberlain's speech was interpreted as a warning to Nazi Germany that if France went to the aid of Czechoslovakia as the result of her pact with that state created nation, Britain although not bound in the same way might also be extremely difficult to hold aloof in July.

Sir John defined British foreign policy as "peace through the League".

Plea to Assist Runciman.

He made this plain in his appeal to Hitler and the German nation;

"I am convinced that all reasonable persons in every nation must desire to assist rather than to hamper him (Viscount Runciman) in his efforts to bring several elements of the Czechoslovak problem to a just settlement.

"Meanwhile, it is the duty not only of us but of all governments to see that all concerned in world peace—to do nothing to imperial a satisfactory solution."

Goodwill Necessary.

"The problem presents what not insoluble, he said, but to find a solution "contributions from all concerned are needed. There must, he said, be good will on both sides to the dispute, and the mission of Lord Runciman went to Praha as mediator.

"These sentences could be interpreted only as a direct appeal to Hitler to line up with Britain on the side of peace and let the Czech government and people of German race in their dispute amicably with Lord Runciman's assistance.

Sir John referred to European relations with "a system of government by force" which he said "is not the concern of us . . . will accept for ourselves." But he emphasized this did not mean that international machinery was "no reason why we should not conduct our foreign policy through friendship was impossible."

Visiting the Mayoralty office to pay his compliments to the city's chief executive, Mr. Enders was told that the Mayor was in Toronto attending the opening ceremonies of the Canadian National Exhibition.

"I came back expressly to attend this annual event," he said. "Over in England we think the exhibition is one of the best in the world. Almost seventy-five British towns were on the same boat as I was, all going to Canada to see the "Ex" for the first time."

EX-CONVICT FOUND NAILED TO CROSS NEAR AN ASYLUM

Cross Lying on Ground and Man's Clothing Burned

A GRUDGE CRIME

Reno, Aug. 26—(AP)—A man found nailed to a cross near the Nevada Insane Asylum at Sparks, Nev., today was identified by police as Ed. Collins, released from San Quentin prison in 1933.

Police Captain B. R. Addenbrooke said Collins was taken to a hospital where he said the man was not in danger unless infection set in.

Collins was found nailed to a cross lying on the ground, his clothing burned.

Collins, after hospital treatment, was quoted by Captain Addenbrooke as follows:

Refused Help

"I was walking home tonight when a car stopped and two men I had been to a meeting. Two men I never grabbed me and asked me to help them pull a job.

"I told them I'd be going straight.'

"Then one of them said, 'All right. If you want to be a little tough, Chris, we'll make one out of you.'

"They drove out near where you found me and stopped the car.

"Then they took off my clothes and nailed me to the cross."

Addenbrooke reported Collins told him he had known, the men prior to his arrest on a robbery charge in California. He said he served a prison term. Collins said he was unable to identify them except as "Swede" and "Joe."

NERVOUS TENSION GRIPS LONDONERS; GRAVE SITUATION

Possibility Adolf Hitler May March into Czechoslovakia

PRESS COMMENTS

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Nervous tension gripped the average Londoner this morning while taking a look at his morning paper.

His morning paper was filled with disquieting reports from Prahs and Berlin—reports going to the length of suggesting the possibility of Chancellor Hitler marching into Czechoslovakia.

The British government has taken an extremely serious view of the Czech situation for the past week or ten days, but until today or so two has the average Londoner shared the tension. Heretofore the Londoner has been inclined to dismiss a threat of war as another instance of "tension Hitler Style."

Veiled Threat.

In the main the disquieting reports, the most alarming was the persistent but unconfirmed one that German officials warned various European nations she has tired of waiting for a solution of the Sudeten German minority problem in Czechoslovakia and may be forced to take drastic steps. This was interpreted in some quarters as a veiled threat of invasion.

Germany is reported to have told the Balkan nations that support for the Sudeten Germans "with all the means in her power" should not be construed as a threat to Czechoslovakia. This failed to relieve the tension to any appreciable extent.

No Immediate Danger.

Informed opinion takes the view that the crisis in the lake of Bell, is the only one in the whole world and there is no immediate danger of another war. It is said that the Czechoslovak domestic quarrel seemed to be up to the Sudeten Germans and their leaders in Berlin to settle now the Czechoslovak government has made concessions to the grievances of the Germanic minority. British interest is in the Lord Runciman's efforts" to lessen the tension in Czechoslovakia.

A government statement welcomed the "conciliatory attitude of the Czechoslovak government in offering a new basis for negotiations with Nazi-supported, autonomy-seeking Sudeten Germans."

Discipline Released.

Official circles welcomed the action of the Sudeten German party in releasing the discipline of its members of the Henlein organization that had forced them to use force in "self defence".

Of the Praha government's concessions, the statement said:

"It is to be hoped this contribution may meet with a constructive response and that every effort will be made in all quarters concerned, directly or indirectly, to refrain from any action which may heighten the tension."

Invited—

"Issue by the Sudeten Deutsch (Germans) party of an invitation to relaying the admirable discipline hitherto displayed it much deserves."

The Government statement given out after a meeting of the cabinet of Sir John Simon Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the same subject, was received with surprise and was generally accepted as an indication of the British Govern-

COUPLE IN CITY WALKING WESTWARD

A little foot-sore and weary, but with that spirit that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giroux, French-Canadian couple completed a journey of three hundred mile of a walking trip from their native Caspe to Toronto, today when they arrived in this city.

The couple who left their native village on Aug. 1 have travelled through the northern part of New York State along the banks of the St. Lawrence River.

They are enroute to Toronto where they expect to find work, and if unsuccessful there will journey on to Hamilton.

They have only had one lift, Giroux claimed, since leaving home and prefer to travel the broad-highways on foot.

RUSSIANS TOO BUSY TO EXPORT COAL

Russians have been too busy with internal economic affairs this year to ship coal to Canada, it is reported by one local fuel dealer who declares that stocks of this coal have been almost impossible to get. Ordinarily at this season the Montreal docks are piled high with this coal, but this year hardly any shipments have been arriving and as a result considerable demand also exists for this fuel.

3 Deer Seen Again Near Rosemore Church

A small red deer buck and doe which leap nimbly over fences, still unafraid along the concession roads and raid vegetable gardens of Prince Edward County in the vicinity of Redneersville lately, were observed near the Rosemore Church this week. The deer are believed the same animals sighted through their back porch above section for some time past, and are blamed for considerable damage that has been done lately in garden plots. When alarmed or alarmed, the animals disappear pheasom-like into convenient shrubbery.

LARGEST DISPLAY SEEN IN YEARS GREETS SHOPPERS

City Market a Riot of Color: Heavy Offering At tracts Crowd

PRICES STEADY

Taking on the appearance of a miniature fair, something that augurs well for the Belleville Exhibition that opens here next week, a display of farm garden and dairy produce crowded the Victoria market stores to be the heaviest offering seen here in many years, greeted Saturday morning shoppers on the city market today.

The radial place itself was a riot of color, with every available inch of space occupied by farmers with wagons to capacity with colorful fruits, vegetables and flowers. Customers could write their own brisk competition as a large clientele thronged the booths of the city hall that was a filling sequel to the fine display, and prices suffered.

Prices however, showed but little change from those of a week ago. Eggs shot upward a few cents, but general quotations remained at practically the levels as the previous Saturday.

A vivid scarlet touch augmented the general color scheme of the produce, in the form of an abundance of home-grown tomatoes. Firm in texture, well-shaped and fully ripened, these vegetables sold well at ten and fifteen cents for basket lots with bushels going at thirty-five cents per bushel. Near noon the latter quantities were offered at thirty cents.

Corn plentiful

Sweet corn was also plentiful with Yellow Bantam and a white variety reacting well at ten cents per dozen and in some cases three dozen for twenty-five cents. Potatoes were quoted at fifteen cents and twenty cents per peck with bushel lots reaching a low of fifty cents in spots. Giant cabbage and cauliflower sold well at from eight cents per head, with new carrots, beets onions and celery selling at regular prices. New radishes were offered at three bunches for five cents.

The gold of the peach and the blue and green of new plums enhanced the color of the vegetables. Select peaches were offered at forty-five cents per basket with other grades moving well at thirty-five and forty cents per basket. Burbank plums were offered at forty cents per basket with Imperials at thirty-five. Green gages were quoted at seventy cents per six-quart lot.

Duchess and Wolf River apples headed a variable display of this fruit with the former moving well at thirty cent- per peck. The Wolf Rivers were offered at the same price with Yellow Harvesters selling at twenty cents per basket. Blockberries were offered at fifteen cents per box.

offered from ten cents to the giant that sold at from twenty to thirty-five cents. Encouraging strawberries were available at one booth within the vendor display of his stock at thirty cents per basket.

Eggs moved a shade lower in the trade, market with "A" selects selling at twenty-nine and thirty cents per dozen. Medium were quoted at twenty-seven cents with pullet offered at twenty cents.

Young chickens were available at from sixty-five to ninety cents per pair while fowl and older birds were offered from eighty cents to one dollar per pair. Butter remained steady at sixty-five cents per two-pound roll, with "singles" being at thirty-three cents.

Whitefish at twenty cents, lake trout at twenty-five cents. Fresh herring and lake perch at six for twenty-five cents rounded out a variable fish display.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE IN BOTH ARMIES

Shanghai, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Chinese and Japanese artillery pounded each other today in a terrific Yangtze Valley struggle that has redoubled Japanese drive toward Hankow before winter closes in on advance aircraft, warships and infantry joined in the offensive.

An intensive artillery duel raged west of Lu-Shan, Mountain, miles south of Kiukiang and close to the 90-mile Kiukiang-Nanchang railway, defences of which the Japanese hope to crush.

Japanese reports said Chinese resistance was strong and that severe hostilities were continuing in "terrific heat" which has been up to 100 degrees.

Japanese aviators said they bombed a Chinese truck train filled with soldiers between Nanchang, important Chinese air base, and Tehan, 80 miles to the north. Three hundred were reported killed. Chinese said the invaders' pressure was lessening.

Southwest of Hangchow, on the southeastern coast, Chinese troops were driven away by overwhelmed a Japanese garrison, inflicted heavy casualties, and capturing 22 armoured cars and tanks.

FAIR NOTES

Everybody loves a circus, and the smell of the tanbark and sawdust carries a thrill to many which nothing else on earth can create. Hence the action of Belleville Fair Board in securing a real circus as a special attraction for the 1938 Fair is sure to meet with general appreciation, especially as circus fans in this district have been deprived of circus entertainment this season. Garden Bros. Circus includes sixty-five trained animals, there is a thrilling lion act in which the kings of the jungle do the most amazing tricks under direction of an experienced Trainer Lion lamer, Capt. Wm. Schultz. This act takes place in a steel cage so that spectators are amply protected from these huge jungle cats. "Lindy" the sagacious elephant, only nineteen years old, born about the time Lindbergh was making his epic flight to Paris, makes many friends wherever he goes, and many are the tricks that elephants master and then some.

High School Horses, Liberty Horses and other high class equine acts feature a bright and sparkling performance while the performing dogs, ponies and monkeys are a veritable aggregation of clowns, but also a big hit with the grown-ups.

Another big feature is the Slide for Life of Mademoiselle Lili who attached to the wire with her teeth, makes the sensational slide of 500 feet.

Other big features are presented and the entire circus program is presented in front of the grand stand at the Fair Ground nightly, additional seats being arranged to provide a seating capacity of 3,000. When the circus equipment is arranged parking will be in the infield and ample pinch themselves to prove they are not under the Big Top of Ringlings Barnum and Bailey.

Garden Bros. Circus is a truly Canadian enterprise and opened last spring in the Coliseum at Toronto where it played a week to large attendance, making an instant hit. The proprietors are William and Bob Garden, well known in Canadian entertainment circles for years.

Bob Horan, the genial announcer for the Garden Bros. Circus, is a trouper of many years experience starting out many years ago from his home in Peterboro with the Walter L. Main Circus. Since then he has been connected at one time or other with all the big travelling shows, stage and circus, from Lincoln J. Carter to Barnum, Forepaugh, and Ringling.

To make the circus picture complete there is a regular side show, with its Congress of Freaks and Curiosities gathered from the four corners of the earth, as the barkers will tell us.

Any one of the three brand new automobiles which will be given away free to the holder of the lucky token during the Belleville Fair, will be a prize indeed, a prize which many other fairs which have been presented since the Fair came into being.

But, in order that no mistakes may be made in this presentation of the car, those who hold tickets are advised to make a careful numerical list of all numbers which appear on these coupons as they immediate receipt once may be made. Numbers will be called in front of the Grand Stand following the open air performance each evening. Many who attend will have duplicate tickets, but it is impossible to duplicate prize chases in the stores during Fair Week. Insist upon getting these slips. The very one that is overlooked may be the one which carries the winning number.

These corresponding stubs will all be collected each day and taken to the Fair Grounds where they will be dumped into the big drum. A thorough shaking will be given them before the first number is drawn.

Highlight of the opening day of the Fair next Tuesday will be of course the appearance here of the Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture who will officially open the Belleville Fair shortly after noon. This day will be Children's Day when for 10c admission to the Fair Grounds and children will be supervised by Orrmonde Butler, counsel for the accused, the latter admitted that the "battery might have picked up a little bit, after standing for some time."

For the lovers of music there will be daily afternoon and evening concerts by the Belleville Citizens' Band. There will be hundreds of other features, through the grounds. There will be many other prizes amounting to hundreds of dollars which will be given away by merchants at their booths in the various buildings. There will be fun for young and old.

FOUR INSURGENT

The thunder of heavy guns from batteries at Ceuta—a Spanish seaport across the strait in northern Morocco—awakened the passengers on British naval power early this morning. Thousands watched the battle from the cliffs of Gibraltar, the famous Rock of Gibraltar.

The sky was lighted up by the recurrent, brilliant flash of guns and the restless beams of searchlights from Ceuta and Carnero Point.

Near Scene of Nelson's Victory.

The Insurgent cruiser Canarias and three Insurgent destroyers were reported off Algeciras, Spanish fortified seaport five miles west of Gibraltar, which is under control of the Government ship.

This was the first important Spanish naval engagement since the Spanish government fleet torpedoed the 19,000-ton Insurgent cruiser Baleares off Cape Palos in the Mediterranean March 6. Six hundred of the Baleares crew of 800 went down with the vessel off Cartagena.

The engagement was in the same general area where the famous British naval hero, Lord Nelson, defeated the French in the historic battle of Trafalgar on Oct. 21, 1805.

HOLD JUDGMENT ON DRUNK DRIVING CHARGE IN COURT

Traffic Officer States Wm. Shier Was Intoxicated

REBUTTAL EVIDENCE

Judgment was reserver until Sept. 9th by Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C. in local police court today at the conclusion of the hearing of evidence in the case of William Shier, charged with being drunk, while driving a car on Aug. 1st.

Accused has already been found guilty on a charge of assault arising from the same date.

Traffic Officer Sam Irvine called to the stand by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, testified, that he had considered Shier to be intoxicated on the property of one D. Ketchenon on the Trenton-Belleville highway on the date mentioned. He was intoxicated, and staggering about in the field. "On account of liquor" the officer told the court, but did not state that any liquor had been drinking.

Shier on the stand stated, that he had been picked up by two city police officers, and brought to Belleville where he had subsequently been released by a police sergeant who said he was not drunk. He had been in the Ketchenon field looking for the crank of his automobile, he said, when a car that he was not sure was driven by Mrs. Jesse Crawford, run down, and it could not be started, and he walked on to Belleville.

Albert Chapman, called to the stand testified he had been accused in a number of years. He claimed that Shier was not drunk on the date mentioned, but that he always walked with a peculiar gait.

Shier stated that he had a record, or that he told about "No," Crown Attorney Donnan asked. "No, I did not" replied the witness.

"I suppose he gave you yours" Crown Donnan said with sneering.

Constable Ervine recalled to the stand, told the court that he had moved the Shier, car that day, "it started with the battery" he said.

Under cross-examination by Orrmonde Butler, counsel for the accused, the officer admitted that the "battery might have picked up a little bit, after standing for some time."

AN AIR PIONEER GOES

Commander Frank M. Hawks, New York sportsman, died as his plane crashed this week. Internationally known speed plane and glider pilot, he was forty-one years of age and had made 214 point to point records, including the first transcontinental non-stop flight in Canada from Vancouver to Kingston. He once said he expected to die in an airplane.

Into ten years he had crowded achievement upon achievement in the New World and in Europe.

He was one of the great pioneers of aviation for he had passed through the years which saw many of the greatest advances and he made his own contributions to this progress. He early realized the importance of transport by air and one of his first aims was to "net-work the United States with a system of swift roads of the sky" as a New York Times writer puts it.

He is credited not only with achievement of losing at an earlier age than the ition which made him a leader among young and old in aviation. One year ago he retired from active work. He had served well.

There is pathos to be felt in his death. That he might have lived to die rich in years, now never to be marked by him, would have been the wish of all who have heard of his prowess in the air. But fate sealed him for her own.

A MAN AND HIS CLOTHES

Man and his clothing naturally have come to the fore in the heat wave. While women can go around in airy frocks and dress in a manner which provides comfort, man sticks to the custom of his male ancestors and does not seem to advance. Something of the kind endure, because in clothes at least he is so conservative. He does not desire to be thought eccentric, or in advance of his time and those few who dare to go out ahead of the mass of men are looked upon as anxious for notoriety and name.

The editor of the Woodstock Sentinel-Review deals with these men and accuses them of losing at an earlier ag ethan the women their grace of form. Whatever may be opinion on that, here is what he states:

"Quite a number of men in various parts of the country are asking the question why their sex, as a class, has not adopted a more comfortable type of clothing for summer. What the modernists have in mind is the shorts and blouse combination that has been affected by some men. However, the appearance of some of those who have appeared thus attired is not likely to prove an impressive advertisement for the gear. Unfortunately the majority of men past thirty years of age have developed figures that do not lend themselves gracefully to extra exposure. Protruding stomachs, knobby knees and flabby muscles are somewhat disguised by a coat and long trousers.

"It is often said in tones of criticism that women have made far greater progress in liberating themselves from the chains of uncomfortable attire than men. That is actually the case, but at the same time it must be admitted that women generally are adhering to the skirt though some of them have gone a distance in the matter of scanty attire. Women, as a class, seem to have been more successful than men in retaining youthfulness of figure and that is a pronounced asset when it comes to adopting meagre clothing. On athletic fields, men wear the minimum of clothing and youth can get away with this nicely because lithe figures are appropriate, even in a loincloth, but among the older men who have acquired bippopotamus lines there will not be much enthusiasm for shorts and Little Lord Fauntleroy collars, or shorts and suspenders such as are now occasionally seen.

"Men could adopt a rational form of their present orthodox gear and give themselves much more comfort than they now have. There are many lightweight materials that ought to supplant the traditional tweeds and worsteds for suits. Too many men stick to winter-weight clothing when they could array themselves in smart-appearing garments that would give them some chance to avoid heat prostration."

The question is not settled for this year and for next. Some however do see changes slowly moulding the style of man's attire for comfort.

But women however do seem to have achieved success in attire. In this they are possible in the extreme and to practicality they add beauty in design and color combinations.

Literature is an avenue to glory, ever

AUGUST'S PASSING.

A quiet hush heralds bright August's passing,
A stillness broods o'er wood and stubble fields;
We stretch a hand to stay the sunshine slipping
Away, with all the joy that August yields.

But, as we watch, her steps are passing by us,
And with glad glance, which like the sunshine gleams,
She waves adieu, and we are left to cherish
The haunting memory of our August dreams.

"AWAY DOWN UNDER," AS WE ARE ACCUSTOMED TO VIEW AUSTRALIA, is not so far away, any more, as distances go measured in time it takes a letter or person to get there, given sufficient money for air passage. London Times records the departure of the flying boat Calypso for Australia with two tons of letters and postcards, marking the first flight at the reduced postage rate of 1-3d per half ounce. All first-class mails for Australia from England are now sent by air, arriving in ten days instead of five or six weeks. Second class mail including newspapers, circulars, etc., will go by ship.

PENSIONS FOR AGED AND DECREPIT, MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT not in possession of incomes amounting to more than one hundred and fifty pounds has been suggested in the British parliament, but met with small response. Seems like British members of parliament with me-agre incomes are not very plentiful.

GOLD RECOVERED FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA where it had rested since 1799, forms one of the most dramatic stories of the present. This gold was sent to pay the soldiers fighting Napoleon and consisted of one hundred and forty thousand pounds in coin, and one million and sixty thousand pounds in bar gold. The ship went down in a storm and only half a million dollars worth has been recovered in the many attempts since then in the last 139 years.

FOLKS OF FIFTY OR OVER CAN REMEMBER THEIR FIRST PAIR. Could they recapture the thrill of the first fair they ever attended no greater pleasure could be imagined. Young folks of today seek and seldom find the thrills which came so easy to their parents. Entertainment has become so frequent and frenzied that even the circus, once sure fire thrill-makers have had to retire from the entertainment scene with capital badly lacerated. Nothing less than a flight across the ocean in an egg crate can thrill the masses nowadays and the young generation—but old timers still get plenty of thrills out of things which may be considered old-fashioned by the younger set. What's the world coming to? Surely the world is not drifting far from the old saying of soup purses with thrills left out. What's the reason and what's the answer? Is the world getting too sophisticated, overeducated, or what?

SECRETARY JOHN KETCHESON OF THE BELLEVILLE FAIR, says he has seen fairs come and go for thirty years and the Belleville Fair of 1938 is as far ahead of the fairs of thirty years ago as can be imagined. As an expert observer he says there has been steady improvement in all branches of the fall exposition of agriculture and arts. This might interest folks who imagine that having attended a fair five or ten years ago there is nothing new to see. Attendance at this year's Belleville Fair will show them that they have been nursing a mistaken theory and missing something really worth while.

BELLEVILLE SHOULD PUT ON ITS BEST BIB AND TUCKER FAIR WEEK. Our colored lights will give the evenings a touch of fairyland, a Belleville bright and beautiful, while the days should be brightened by bunting and every flag displayed before business places and residences. Bellevillians should be proud of the Fair and should show it in smiles and decorations. Visitors will be here from far and near next week. let's give them the best impression possible of a prosperous, progressive city.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

At the annual tournament of the Cobourg Bowling Club, the Belleville rink skipped by Mr. R. J. Wray won the finals. The prizes donated were electric grills. In the final game Belleville was pitted against Port Hope. The following composed the Belleville rink: W. B. Biggs, Rev. C. G. Smith, Rev. A. S. Kerr and R. J. Wray. The score was 23 to 9.

Mr. Harry P. Ellis, who has been secretary of the boys' work at the Belleville Y. M. C. A., has resigned to accept a better position with the Y. M. C. A. at Calgary and will leave Sept. 1st. for that city. Mr. Ellis has been a faithful and successful worker. The boys regret greatly to part with him.

Mrs. R. Hayes, of Portland, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J.

30 YEARS AGO

August 27th., 1908.

The only event yesterday in the sailing races was a contest between the dinghy for the possession this year of the Corby Cup. There were four entries, namely, J. Munroe's 16 footer; A. R. Wallbridge's 14 footer; Jack the First and the Senga. The result was victory for the Munroe boat, which beat the Wallbridge dinghy.

We are informed the the Rolling Mills will operate, the 9 inch mill next week making "merchant" bar iron. The other mills will roll iron as required.

The new Postal Director at the Y.M.C.A., Mr. L. H. Wilkes, will arrive here on Tuesday and will be tendered a reception and supper at Wallace's restaurant the same evening.

The Arctic passage way connecting Queen Victoria School and the old stone grammar school is now "level with the

The Defective Child

A physician had four girls arrive in the home before a son was born. The little boy was the idol of the mother and four sisters but the father finally told his wife and daughter that they were spoiling him and that he would always remain a baby if they continued to pamper him and let he have his own way.

As a matter of fact the father found that his boy was not remaining a baby because the family were spoiling him but because he was really a 'defective'. As he grew older he had him play with children his own age and gave him a careful examination, to make sure that there was no physical defect present. With a little speaking at home he was able to make a fair showing at a nearby private school but at the age of 12 he was mentally aged 9. As there was no signs of beginning puberty (that is emerging into manhood) his father put him on gland extracts—the thyroid extract to remove some of the excess fat and the pituitary gland extract to develop the man or the usual age of puberty (14 to 16) the boy was about normal or not less than 80 per cent.

The physician afterwards stated that while the glandular changes might have occurred at the puberty age anyway he was afraid to wait and take chances and therefore started the gland extracts with the satisfactory results above noted.

In speaking of the defective child, Dr. Esther L. Richards Baltimore, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, says "The mentally backward child should be recognized at as early an age as possible. He shows very limited imagination in play—he does the same thing over and over, such as pulling a book in and out or banging it in and out and down. His powers of initiative (starting or doing new things) are small and he is content with happy routine actions and words. He learns new words very slowly. He should not know or be told the truth so that time will not be wasted on procedures that will be of no help to the child."

GRADE A

—During the recent hot spell, a friend of ours lunched at a large, highly organized, air-cooled suburban restaurant. Being a stranger, he ordered a glass of nice, cold milk. "Grade-A milk, please," he said. The waitress looked surprised. "Why, you just order milk, sir?" she suggested. "It like Grade-A milk," said our friend. "All right" the girl said with a sigh. "but it'll cost you a nickel extra." He said he didn't mind paying it. "But I still wanted Grade A." Grade-A milk is all we got", she said, breaking down. "We have to sell it, because when peo-

Col. Drew Answers Defence Minister

Toronto, Aug. 27.—(CP)— Lieut. Col. George Drew, author of a magazine article criticizing government contracts for manufacture of Bren machine guns, today issued a statement asking acquaintance of "a political or other non-political committee before which I may have the opportunity of fully substantiating everything I have said."

Col. Drew's statement is in reply to one issued Thursday by the Department of National Defence under the authority of Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie, in which certain allegations in the article were denied.

He asserts that questions regarding the financial structure of the company manufacturing the guns, and other references, were ignored in the department statement.

Col. Drew's Statement.

The statement:

"The statement of the Hon. Ian Mackenzie, published in reply to my article in the Canadian Forum of September is describing the Bren gun contract, is inaccurate in every detail.

"According to Hansard he said in the House of Commons on June 22 that 'there was no co-operative contract, that the contract with the British war office was signed by the Toronto Brass Works (Canadian) Limited) entirely separately from the contract with the Canadian government.'

"He now says: 'Major Hahn's proposals were referred by the Department of National Defence and by the interdepartmental committee to control of profits. They were modified and in that form submitted to the Toronto Brass Works.' In other words the Canadian government settled the basis of the two contracts and then submitted the proposal of the British government. Which of these two statements is correct?

"I shall deal with his other statements in the order in which they were made.

Figure Quoted

1. "The figure of $6,000,000 used in my article in Maclean's Magazine and which he says is no; correct we have from a letter which was given out by Mr. Mackenzie's own department in the House.

2. "Mr. Mackenzie suggests that I sought to mislead the public and did not make it clear that I was referring to both the Canadian and British contracts. I said that while the limitation of profits was stated to be $457,000, I could not have made it clearer. My exact words were, "there is a provision in the Canadian and British contracts which appears to limit the profit to ten per cent with an overall limitation of $457,000 for the 12,000 guns covered by the two contracts."

3. "I did not misquote the wording of the contract was mysterious. It did contain the exact wording is clear. What is mysterious is how the contract was ever signed with a company which had no machinery to make machine guns and four of whose board of directors are merely office employees of the Dominion Permanent Building which is the address of Plaxton and Company. It is also somewhat mysterious that the whole of the stock of the armament company which has contract is held by two other companies—Investment Reserves Limited and Anglo Empire Limited, all of whose directors are also employees at 1207 Dominion Permanent Building.

It is possible that these directors have the stock of the Ingils Company which has a value, on the basis of the price at which it is at present being sold to the public, of over $800,000? Who does own the stock? That is the question which Mr. Mackenzie must clear up.

Asks Further Information

4. "The Minister of National Defence owes a further explanation to the public, when he now quotes in his own defence, words used in the House that had no relation whatever to this contract. He says that he told the House on February 14th that "all these contracts or as many of them as may be considered necessary, should be referred to the public accounts committee." The Bren contract had not been signed at that time. It was not in fact signed until March 31, six weeks later. It was two months later to the day that he first told the House of Commons about it.

5. "Mr. Mackenzie says that: "The war office came to the conclusion that Major Hahn was qualified to undertake in Canada the manufacture in Canada of Bren guns. Major Hahn was asked to submit definite proposal and to try to interest the Canadian government." Surely this is putting an extremely low estimate on the intelligence of the Canadian public. At that time Major Hahn had no factory and had sds and Great Britain is machinery belonging to the Canadian government. Surely Mr. Mackenzie is not going to ask us to believe that the British government was dealing with Major Hahn unless he already had the assurance of the use of this machinery.

Question of Tenders

6. Mr. Mackenzie says that the decision tender was given to Hahn because then plan was not acceptable to the British government. Does the Canadian government then admit that it is taking orders from the British government in regard to the way it will make its own arms in Canada?

7. Mr. Mackenzie estimates a saving to the Canadian government of $1,500,000 because certain contracts were signed in this way. Is there any evidence whatever that Canada would not have saved a great deal more if they had proceeded with their original plan to make these guns in a government arsenal? Is there anything to suggest that the British Government would not have been equally willing to have brought 12,000 Bren machine guns over as government arsenal? Does Mr. Mackenzie suggest that Major Hahn is the only person in the whole Dominion of Canada with whom the British government is prepared to deal.

8. "Mr. Mackenzie says that I omitted to mention that there were large items of cost to be added from the list on which profits may be charged." There are not many but there are some. Sales tax, royalties, interest on bank loans, and depreciation on the company's own property are the only exceptions.

Records

9. "Mr. Mackenzie implies that the department's records are referred to in my article are records in his department which I had no right to see. The article makes it perfectly clear that the department records referred to are company records which have no relation whatever to the contract. These records are open to the public and may be seen by anyone. Nothing in the article contains no statement which is not available to any Canadian who takes the trouble to look for investigation.

"The Minister chooses to ignore all questions regarding the financial structure of the John Inglis Company and the two mysterious companies which own its stock. He also ignores all references to the trafficking in this stock and the appointment of a new broker to the confidential position of treasurer of the Inglis Company. The Minister's responsibility did not end with the signing of the contract! It provides that Mr. Mackenzie or his agents are to inspect all company records. Too contract also provides that Mr. Mackenzie must be satisfied before there is any sale of this stock. Is Mr. Mackenzie satisfied?

"An Ottawa dispatch quotes Defense Department officials as stating that any article in reply to that of a "mud-slinging campaign of ambitious politicians." The name words. incidentally, were used by Mr. Plaxton, M.P., in Toronto. This is no answer to the specific questions asked in the public interest.

"Every statement I have made is correct and I challenge the Minister of National Defense to appoint a judicial or other non-political committee before which I may have the opportunity of fully substantiating everything I have said."

POSTMARKED

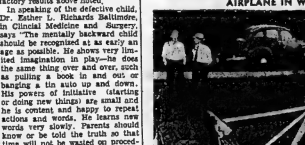
Letters from Canada are now apparently carrying the words, "Observe Sunday," on the postmark, and the Manchester Guardian is slightly mystified at receiving such "an unexpected piece of advice" with its mail. There is perhaps reason for surprise but the explanation of the procedure is forthcoming as it is simple.

This is merely a case of Canada asserting her moral leadership in a way that the world could resent. It is doubtless only the beginning, and the Guardian need not be surprised if it is urged to "Remember Mother" on Mother's Day, to "Remember Father" on Father's Day, and to "Buy In With Flowers." If and when the florist interest happens to be predicted at with the postmaster-general, says the Toronto Telegram, sold-ing.

While the idea is excellent it is to be hoped that the authorities at Ottawa exercise a proper discrimination in their promotions. It would hardly be proper, for instance, to recommend Sunday observance to Mahometans, Brahmins, Buddhists or Soviet Communists. Separate messages should be used in such cases and special messages should be kept on hand for the remembrance in all parts of the world.

Letters to China and Japan should begin "Dear Sir," Letters to Spain might begin "Hello in Their Little Nests Agree"; and Frenchmen might be warned with mail that "Le Jour Dieud Driving Against Itself Cannot Stand."



The present purpose is serious and "inspirational", but infinite possibilities of harmless fun present themselves. What, for instance, could be more quaint than the swastika on the postmarks for Russia, or the hammer and sickle of Communism on letters for Germany and Italy? Innocent pleasantries like these, coming from Canada, would be appreciated equally in Rome, Berlin and Moscow.—Halifax Star.

The plant which has been operated as Cranston Bakery has become inadequate, and the larger building will meet the needs. In making the change the owner is installing a complete modern plant and the same delivery system now in use will be continued. ## Canadian Bar Association

Quotations from Report of the Registrar Col. Wm. Ponton, K. C. of Belleville

From the report of Col. W. M.claim All's Well. All's Well."

Ponton, K.C., Registrar of the Canadian Bar Association, which met recently in Vancouver, are taken the following paragraphs:

"Each meeting of the Canadian Bar Association has a flavor and significance of its own and is like the Empire—its own reason d'etre."

"Few realize how much our lives our property and our cherished liberty depend upon the administration of justice.

"Keep ye the law, be swift in all obedience

Clear the path of evil, drive the road and bridge the ford,

Let us see that each his own shall see where he has sown.

By the peace among our peoples, let men know we serve the Lord.'

May our departed have rest and peace in saecula, saeculorum."

"Those who have been spared to serve in this living organism have in today's manifold opportunities. There are still 'acres of diamonds' in the professional field. Let us take occasion by the hand and together, The Golden Goddess, Good Luck is a precious if elusive will, training, and industry, plus readiness with an equal seed of opportunity always at hand. Luck and pluck are good comrades."

"Again are celebrated and record historic anniversaries, which have been worthily observed. Magna Charta and Runnymede the real Field of the Cloth of Gold) have received every due and unusual attention, thanks largely to the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada and Sir William Mulock and all who have realized that the basic principles of that wonderful charter of our civil liberties are still with us. Their perpetual fine hundredth anniversary of the placing of the book of the Law and the Gospel not without interest to lawyers who serve openly the Great Law Giver and the Great Advocate. Our object is thus quaintly expressed:

'One Book of the Words Bible, of the largest volume in England, be set up in summe convenyent place within the Church that.... parishioners may most commodiously resort to the same and reade it.'

"We have not failed to observe the hundred years since Lord Durham visited Upper Canada (after a term in Lower Canada) and wrote his great report which is still stirring many of the complexities of Canadian politics and law but not all. In 1838 Queen Victoria was crowned, and lawyers (both men and women) can never forget the splendid tribute of praise of the Statesmen who 'at her table sat' in connection with law reform and that broadening out and evolution of the science and progressive spirit of the law is now administered.

"And in a few weeks from now we will be celebrating the 20th year of the great Armistice when at the eleventh hour of the eleventh month of 1918, the bugle sounded what we earnestly hoped and prayed would be the truce of God and of that peace with honour for which our Canadians sons and daughters had so gallantly fought and wrought as 'the spent head of the British army'.... When after two decades from the great sacrifice, the world is still a chaotic cauldron of vociferous bankrupt ideas. Time may be of little account in so far as each passing year keeps its appointment with eternity. Meanwhile we cannot foresee what the future may send against us, but remembering who and what our fathers were, and the rock from which we were hewn and trusting to our instincts, we may face that future. If not with a light heart, at least with a steady one, provided that Canada does her duty with the other Dominions of the Empire and Canada, marks, terms and terms digests the full significance of the inscription in old Quebec.

"Here stood her new and old defenders, uniting, guarding, saving Canada.' Canada great part of a

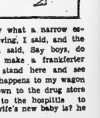
Me and Shorty Judge was walking along just walking along and I said, O boy, a hot dog sandwitch with sauerkrauz for a nickel, imagine.

Meaning a little red wagon on 2 wheels with a sine painted on the side saying, The World's Biggest Frankferter with sauerkraut, 5 cents.



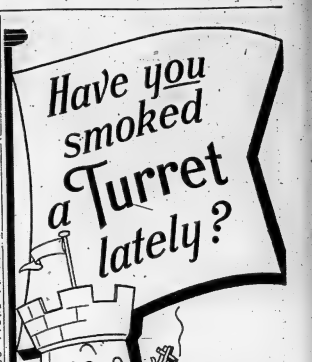
O boy, how much money have you got Shorty said, and I said, 2 cents, how much have you got?

Only one, there's no use asking him if he'd sell a half a sandwitch, Shorty said.

Hearing the hot dog man, being a medium size man with a white apron and a red face, and a mustache, stopped going passed and bought one and me and Shorty stood watching the man make them.

Me saying, O well, I guess we don't know when we're lucky, how do we know what those things are made out of?

Sure, that's what I was thinking Shorty said. How do we know they're not full of old 2nd hand baloney mixed with germs? he said, and I said, Sure, I bet that's the very reason why they're so cheap, but they'd give us the indigestion 5 minutes after they got down.



Sure, O boy what a narrow escape we're having, I said, and the hot dog man said, Say boy, do you want to make a frankferter spiece? Just stand here and see how polsing lagoias the mustard while I go down to the drug store and telefone to the hospitits to see how my wife's new baby is? he said.

All rite, sure me and Shorty said, and the man quick started to walk down to the drug store, Shorty saying, There's no use telling him, I guess we'll have to except the sandwitches now.

Which we did when he came back, and we didn't feel any indigestion for a half an hour, and then we stopped worrying about it, and if we fell any after that we didn't notice it.

Symptoms of Meniere's Disease

Dizziness Not Always Signal That Victim Has Rare Disorder

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

QUITE often I am asked to discuss Meniere's disease. This condition is often defined as dizziness or vertigo, associated with head noises and partial deafness. The differentiation of Meniere's disease, strictly speaking, is somewhat different from this. Real Meniere's disease is quite rare.

The combination of dizziness with head noises and deafness, on the other hand, is common. It may come from absorption of poisonous products from the intestine, or from an infected tooth or tonsils. Those who worry about this combination of symptoms should remember that this is the usual form and can be relieved.

It may be that this set of symptoms is due to a chronic inflammation of the middle ear. Here the head noises prevail because the chief disturbance is the irritation of the little bones of the middle ear causes tension and scraping between them which sound like explosions to the poor ear drum of the person who wears them.

The reason that dizziness and deafness go together lies in the close association of the nerves of the two branches of the eighth cranial nerve. One branch is that of the nerve of hearing — the auditory branch, and the other is the nerve of equilibrium — the vestibular branch.

Cause Is Mystery

Why these two functions should be united in this is a mystery. Hearing and equilibrium do not have anything to do with each other. But until they are, one goes to the end organ of hearing, one to the end organ of equilibrium —the cochles and the vestibule respectively—and they have only the basilar intricacy imbedded in the temporal bone just behind the external ear.

However mysterious their association, we have learned to live with them together, and we would be very confused if they suddenly got separated.

Inside both of these bony organs there is a lining of extremely sensitive nervous cells, and over them flows a clear lymphatic fluid.

It is much like the eye, and real Meniere's disease is much like the eye disease of glaucoma, described recently.

Real Meniere's disease consists in a series of attacks of dizziness, nausea, vertigo and noises in the ear, grafted upon a partial deafness on one side.

The cause is probably some defect in the circulation of the fluid or lymphatic fluid in the two end organs of equilibrium and hearing.

The condition can be cured in most cases by an ear surgeon either by changing the tension of the fluid or, in confirmed cases, by cutting the auditory nerve.

Pre-cooling potatoes before they are shipped is proving a good way of drying them, so that they do not develop soft rot.

Experiments show that if a cow eats wild onions or garlic even three minutes before milking time, the milk will have this flavour.

Henna juice stained the fingernails of Egyptian ladies a fashionable yellowish red.

In nine years of experimenting, a Kansas chemist has made 50 or more tiny synthetic diamonds, the largest nearly one-thirtieth of a carat.

There is a good deal of vitamine B in the peanut, pecan, almond, English walnut, Brazil nut and chestnut.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Objects to Farm Life.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When my husband became ill and had to stop working we spent our savings. Then the three us—we have son of 15 years—went to stay with his family, who are farmers. I know nothing about such things, and though I loathe dishwashing, I did undertake to do that.

Everything is so different to the way I've always lived, that I'm afraid my in-laws have not found me very agreeable. I like church and club activities, bridge, a well-kept apartment and a dainty table. My mother-in-law, who is 60 years old, is a fiend for work. She regards me as useless brick-bat, no doubt.

These people are just not my class, and I'm tired of cows, chickens, pigs, calves, going to bed early, eating with the sun, heavy meals, and all the rest of it. I should love to go away but suppose it would be unwise to look for a job, even if I could do anything well enough to get one.

Alice D.

Without being in the least critical, for I see your side, dear Alice, it seems to me that your job is right where you are, helping out the good soul who is mother-in-law. She may not be your class, but think of their kindness in taking in two people, and the amount of extra work that entails. Farmers have to get up early, but they also get to eat hearty meals.

I'm sure your lady who is a fiend for work wouldn't object to your setting the table daintily, or making appetizing dishes, either. In your place, I'd pitch right in and really help with the housekeeping.

Anxious

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Most impossible to break an engagement without losing caste, and people shrugged their chains almost to the altar itself. Now, thanks be, no one is that foolish. When people cease to love each other, they break the engagements.

It would only be fair to the girl and to himself if the young man told his fiancee that he had been mistaken in his feeling, and didn't care enough to go on with the engagement. The girl would then be honor bound to release him and have a settlement made of their joint bank account. But before you urge your influence to bring this about be sure that the young man is seriously in love with you. Temperaments are not always proof against philandering, as I have learned from the many letters that come to me.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Visitor Gives a Gift

It is natural for us to make a bow to hospitality by a gift. Some people take a gift with them, for the hostess or the household, when they go a-visiting. Some people like to send it with the bread-and-butter letter. Other people like to take some thoughtful little gifts with them when they go, and send a more consequential gift after the visit.

Customarily the gift that we take with us is a book that is being currently discussed, or a group of current magazines a box of candy or other sweets, cartons of cigarettes, packs of cigarettes, a gift-basket of fruits and boxes of delicacies, some detail for sports, new and intriguing game, a box containing several kinds of jams and jellies, a set of several kinds of corn d'oeurres. And don't forget a gift for each child, or one adapted to the group of children, an intriguing new book, an alluring game, toys a scarf or handkerchiefs.

The post-visit is usually a more important one. However, it needs to be, for the nature of the gift depends on your circumstances and the circumstances of your visit. The most equitable wish to have in mind in choosing this gift is that it should bring happiness to the home that has brought such happiness to you, something that will wear the monogram of your spirit. Wise guests keep their eyes open, while they are visiting, to determine a gift; that will be "just the thing" to make the hostess and the household happy.

A man I know sometimes sends his hostess a subscription to a magazine, for all-year-round remembrance. A woman I know sometimes sends a guest-book with "I had such a glorious time as a guest" with you that I want all your future guests to be registered in your guest-book." Some people send a specialty of their community.

Other suggestions: A flower vase; a glass or pottery candy jar; a desk accessory; a breakfast, luncheon, tea, or bridge-table set; a decorative box; a painted tray or retouched mirror; a fine pink pleated thermos bottle or any other picnic accessory; a table-set; a magazine rack; any household item of silver, china, crystal, linen; some accessory to the movie family room or game.

An important gift to your hostess doesn't mean an expensive gift. Its importance is derived from the fact that it is carefully selected; that it has a personal touch and has the grace of appropriateness to the hostess and to the household.

Should Be Hand

Dear Miss Beeckman:

If one is sitting at a cafe table with a friend, and a man, or a woman, should one stand up if another man comes to the table?

James

Yes, indeed! A man seated at a table either for a woman or a woman and a man, should rise immediately when a woman or man arrives at the table to speak with anyone at the table.

BRITISH FLEET ON CRUISE

London, Aug. 27.—(AP)— The British home fleet will have its thrice-yearly tune-up in the North Sea approaches to the British Isles beginning Sept. 6.

The routine autumn cruise comes at a time when decisions vital to European peace are pending in the centre of the continent.

The ships will go as far north as Scapa in the Orkney Islands. There will be "certain technical exercises", the British Admiralty said today. The cruise will last until Nov. 17.

"Lifeless" Hair Can't Be Pretty

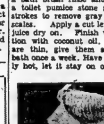
(By HELEN FOLLETT)

TRYING TO create the elegant coiffure with dull lifeless hair is like trying to make a good cake with poor butter and stale eggs—it can't be done. No matter how beautifully designed the hairdress may be unless the hair is alive the effect is nothing to "crow" about. Few "brain cells" get the proper attention to keep them up to par. All the money goes for permanents and finger waves. Eventually, there's a thinness at the temples, the "crown" becomes sparse, the ringlets go limp and shafts become dull looking. Why aren't women more kind to their glorious crowns?



Get a brush with firm bristles and use it. On the right before the shampoo, do your hundred strokes. Give the scalp a thorough massage. If the pocketbook permits, take a course of scalp treatments. They're well worth the money. Frequent permanents take a toll; they rob the silky threads of oil; every beauty shop boss will tell you that at least twice a year hair should be reconditioned.

Look after your health; hair is dependent upon nutrition. Eat a balanced diet that will provide food elements upon which tresses thrive. Drink milk, which supplies calcium.

Elbows are in a bad way this season of the year having too much outdoor life, getting toasted by the sun.

Scrub them with soap suds and a bath brush rinse and dry. Use a toilet pumice stone giving light strokes to remove any dead cell scales.

Apply a cut lemon, let the juice dry on. Finish with a friction with coconut oil. If elbows are thin, give them an olive oil bath once a week. Have the oil fairly hot, let it stay on overnight.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

TRIO Tailoring marks many of the new furs, being especially noticeable in the black furs that seem to be loosely handled.

Double-breasted models of 3 breasted beaver, with two rows of three buttons marking the double-breasted closing. Notched revers and a wool scarf in red, yellow and brown are other touches.

Nice for now is a dress of lightweight crepe woolen in the new bands of petit point embroidery making a belt which continues down one side of the skirt, and also trimming the sleeves and the collarless neckline of the bodice.

Just right for the sub-deb is a dinner dress with very high-waisted full, circular skirt of black silk taffeta and gathered top of black and gold striped gauze with bishop sleeves and small turn-down collar.

Explain to Children About Family Funds

Don't Just Tell Them You Can't Afford Something: Show Them Why

(By LISA GRENELLE)

When Father's salary check came in, little Peter was hanging around his chair and he saw the figures: "Gee! Father," he said, "that's a lot of money! Gosh! You must be rich now. I can have the new bicycle, can't I?"

"I'm afraid I can't manage it this month, Son. Maybe in the autumn."

"But, gee! Father—with all that money! And I need it now".

"That money's got to go to pay bills, rent—food—your clothes—"

"But bills can't be that much, Father. Beans are only ten cents a pound. I saw it on a sign, and we have a lot of beans."

"Don't be impertinent, Frank. When I say I can't afford something I can't afford it. You're too young to understand expenses. You will have to take my word for it."

Frank said no more after that. But he felt a certain grudge against his father.

Tactless Manner

To tell a child he is too young to understand, in the first place, whether it is true or not, which in this case it was not as I shall show you, is a tactless phrase. Though it may put an end to talk on that subject it will stimulate thought, arouse further curiosity and a definite resentment, for to tell anyone he is too young or too old to understand is an insult, and invariably taken as such.

Perhaps if Father had not dismissed Frank with such contemptuous words he might have taken his word for it, even though he couldn't understand where all that money went.

As it was, Frank felt both insulted and cheated. Father was mean and stingy, he decided. He was a liar, pretending he was poor when he was rich.

Could Show Him

And words he rather could say to the contrary made any impression. But Father's check book would have done the trick. Not only could Father's check book have taught Frank a little thing or two of living, but it could also have taught him where Father's money went, and for what; taught him that Father was not mean or stingy, or a liar, but was a careful and generous, hard-working man like most fathers, undertaking the responsibilities of home building and housing a family.

If Father had been patient enough and not too proud to go over his check book with his son, Frank, after a short, wholesome exercise of his sidling and subtraction, learning, would have seen well enough that there was no money left over for bicycles, that Father wasn't a rich man.

So many important relationships grow strong for the want of a little patience and too much pride.

And is nine or 10 or 11 too young to begin to learn the facts of economical as well as physical facts of life? I think not.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, August 28

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE holds promise of a particularly lively and happy day. There is much occurring to frustrate, delay and mystify both in the business and in the intimate affairs of life. Some incident or a bereavement may be at the source of this, culminating in new arrangements, with a notable climax in love affairs or friendly associations. The end should be a happy one, after much confusion, perplexity and sorrow.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which a major anxiety or a bereavement may be instrumental in changing the smooth course of events.

A child born on this day may have a slow, gradual ascension to position. It may be gentle, kindly and friendly, though shy and sensitive. It may, however, be spoiled by its elders, from whom there might be bequests or other substantial gifts.

For Monday, August 29

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is a particularly happy and propitious one. There is presage of a sudden stroke of good fortune by a chance that is the fulfilment of a cherished heart's desire. All the major affairs of life, such as a business connection and in social, domestic and romantic adjustments.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a particularly felicitous, prosperous and progressive year, with an outstanding stroke of good fortune assisting the wheels of progress and the cherished heart's desire. New projects may be pushed under such stimulus, but there will be a necessity to surmount.

A child born on this day may be capable, ambitious, magnanimous and gracious, with an intellect and personal bearing that may assist it to a place of power and influence in private as well as business life. It may be religiously inclined and should have a serviceable and happy life.

The first impartial account of the Rebellion in Upper Canada in 1837 has been written for the centenary of the event by Edwin C. Guillet, in his book "The Lives and Times of the Patriots". The only two histories that have appeared have been partisan and far from comprehensive. Mr. Guillet's account furnishes a detailed story of the Rebellion period, beginning with lists of participants and punishments. An outstanding fact revealed is the scope of the trouble, both in geography and in the numbers of those engaged on both sides. Records remain of 986 persons tried for treason and misprision and it is estimated that 20,000 persons moved out of the Province to the United States. The book is filled with contemporary accounts of daring escapes, among them that of Daniel Conant, grandfather of Ontario's present Attorney-General, who lost his ship. "The Industry" while conveying refugees across the ice to Oswego. The exiles were forced to risk the broken ice to safety. "The Lives and Times of the Patriots" will correct many tendencies to treat the hostilities lightly and will bring to the fore the real natures of the disturbances, that of political liberty for which many died.

Yet another version of the tragic story of John Keats is told by Dorothy Hewlett in her biography "Adonais". There is probably little material relating to Keats which has not been brought to light. In "Adonais", however, the author presents some new writings not before published and some unpublished verses by the poet's friends. It is not as discovery that Miss Hewlett is to be commended in this fine biography of the poet, but in the clear portrait of Keats which she has drawn. She has made use of the abundant material available in recent years, including the letters of the event by Fanny Brawne to Keats's sister, Fanny. "Adonais" contains, in fact, a wealth of excerpts from letters and from Keats' poems that it might be called autobiography rather than biography.

"A child born on a goose feather bed is born to wander" is the maxim which best fits the life of George Digby, journalist, whose first book "Goose Feathers" describes adventures in many lands. Born in England, George Digby went from public school to tea-planting in Ceylon. From there he wandered to the Far East, Australia, New Zealand, North Africa, the United States and Canada. His three years in Ottawa, as sharp contrast to his former life, "Goose Feathers" is a book of keen observations that reveals a sympathetic and sensitive personality.

Langdon W. Post, Chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, for four years has written a compelling book "The Challenge of Housing". "To people who don't know much about it, housing seems to be a dull subject", says Mr. Post. "I used to think it was myself — until I had something directly to do with it." The exciting human quality, the result of direct personal experiences enters into the book and makes it an interesting adventure rather than a hopeless economic problem. The author's easy grace in the use of prose makes for better homes in tenement areas make the book one which offers a cure for many of today's ills. K. G.

Comparison of Two Types of Hogs

The price differentials made by hog buyers between the various grades of hogs, alive or dressed, represent very closely the difference in actual commercial value. For to classify any hog on a meat trade than any butcher hog. That difference in value results from the scaling of all premiums and deductions from a theoretical imaginary case of two farmers who has two hogs for sale and 'B' has ten hogs. 'A' would receive $100.00 premiums and deductions. To find out the difference between the flat basis 'A' would trade with 'B' and 'B' would have five hogs with 'B' so that each would have five hogs and ten hogs. 'A' would receive $100.00 premiums and deductions. To find out

Yanks Split With Indians and Red Sox Do Same With Chicago

It is being suggested around and about that Messrs. Ford Frick and Will Harridge, get those Yankees to take up batting between April and October next year, while the 15 other so-called Big League baseball clubs hold an elimination to decide the victims for Gehrig and Co. in the World Series.

The idea may not seem so silly as it sounds, if you take a look at what are laughingly called the two American and National League pennant races this year. The way things shape up, there are still two big leagues, but one is the Yanks—and the other includes the remaining 15 outfits.

The National League chase of recent weeks finds the first four clubs separated by only 6½ games, and all of them apparently doing their best to educate the folks in how not to play the ball. In the American League—the Yankees are 12 games out in front.

And can a team of Pittsburgh Pirates, Given an odds-on chance of winning the pennant in the last month, the Bucs not only dropped three straight to the last place Phillies, but dropped them to old pitchers. Thursday Will Bill Hallahan beat them and yesterday old Lefty Al Smith took a 6-4 decision.

Reds Just As Available

Cincinnati Reds became just as amiable as the Bucs in going down for the third straight time before Boston's no-punch Bees, 6-1, on Johnny Lanning's seven-hitter.

And while the National League lead goes around begging, Bill Terry's second-place Giants kicked away a ball game to the Cardinals as the Gas-Housers came through 7-6 on a run in the ninth.

The Yankees split with Cleveland Indians in their fourth straight American League twin bill, winning the opener 15-9 on the seven runs Joe Dimaggio batted in, and dropping the nightcap 8-5 for Willis Hudlin's flinging. But Boston second-place Red Sox did nothing about closing the gap, for their best was an even break in a pair with the White Sox. Old Ted Lyons took the opener 12-2 and Jimmy Foxx whacked two homers in Boston's 9-3 nightcap win.

Detroit Tigers came in a game nearer the first division with a big margin over Washington, and the Athletics retained their runner-up percentage hold on seventh place by splitting with the Browns, taking the opener 11-6 and giving the Brownies the afternoon 6-4.

IN RACE FOR WORLD'S SCULLING TITLE

EVANS PADDON
Australian Challenger

BOB PEARCE
World's Champion

Called by Jake Gaudaur, famous Canadian sculler and champion of a former day, "the greatest sculler of all time," Bob Pearce will defend his world's professional sculling title on Sept. 5 against the challenge of a fellow-Australian, Evans Paddon, over a three-mile course at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. Pearce, who for the past few years has been living in Hamilton, Ont., won the title in Toronto three years ago and has defended it with ridiculous ease twice since then. Paddon won the Australian title from Al Burge last year and has been in Toronto training for the match with Pearce since early summer.

Six Man Rugby To Be Encouraged By Interprovincial Union In The East

Hope to Stimulate Interest Where Facilities for Regulation Game Not Available

This would be only half a squad in a regulation rugby game, but these lads are playing the new pint-size game that requires but eight a side. The Interprovincial Rugby Football Union will sponsor the game in the east in the hopes that it will create interest in communities unable to get together a regulation outfit. As can be seen the players were running alone instead of the usual set of cleats.

By W. M. GLADISH
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Toronto, Ont.—Canada's newest sport, six-man rugby football with variations, will shortly be the subject of playing interest among various secondary schools and minor clubs, as well as in rural communities, under the official encouragement of the Interprovincial Rugby Football union.

A set of playing rules has been prepared and adopted through the efforts of William C. Foulds, chairman of the union's board of officials, and Arthur A. Burridge, director of physical education at Montreal University, Hamilton has been appointed organizing supervisor for six-man football under the sponsorship of the Interprovincial. Burridge has already made a missionary tour of schools and towns in Eastern Ontario and Quebec, where the I.R.F.U. will first concentrate its work. Last fall, 72 collegiate and town club teams played standard football in junior groups under the I.S.F.U. encouragement and now the pick-et-size grid game will be organized as a further breeding ground for the fall pastime.

A glance at the new playing code indicates that six-man football will be the testing ground for rules in the standard 11-man game of the future. Of interest is the fact that the simplified six-man regulations prohibit the "huddle" which, despite its adoption from the American game, has not made a tremendous hit with Canadian fans. The forward pass is retained for the miniature game, but the ball can be heaved from any place behind the line, and all players are eligible to receive the pass. The forward pass cannot be thrown on the third down.

Major Score Reduced

The score for a touchdown has been reduced from five to three points, which is also the score for a drop or placement kick from the field. The convert remains the same while the much-disputed and misunderstood "safety-touch" has been deleted altogether, the score to be the same as for a rouge, namely one point.

An interesting fact is that there is no centre-line across the field of play for six-man football, and the yards out from the defender's goal. Incidentally, there is no kick-off at the beginning of the second half or third period, the ball being scrimmaged on the same relative spot where K became dead in the final down of the previous period. The game merely change ends for each of the three succeeding periods. The playing time of the game is 40 minutes, divided into four quarters of 12 minutes each, with a "time out" of five minutes between all periods. The first kick-off takes place from the 25-yard line of the team winning the toss of the coin while the opposing team selects the goal it wishes to defend. If the kick-off goes out of bounds, the opposing team take the ball from its 30-yard line, and if the ball again leaves the field without touching a player, the original team scrimmages it on its 30-yard line.

The field requirements call for a distance of 80 yards between goal lines, against the 110 yards in the 12-man sport; the width is from touch to touch is 40 yards, while the depth of goal area to the dead-line is 10 yards.

Passing Made Necessary

Of special interest is the rule governing the first player receiving the ball from the snapback in a scrimmage to cross the line of scrimmage. It is necessary for him to pass it in an "accidental" direction to some other player before it can be advanced, except in the case of a kick or forward pass, when the ball does not have to change hands after leaving the scrimmage line. Other facets of the six players on a side must be on the line of scrimmage when the ball is put into play, and, on any play originating from a scrimmage, the player of the attacking side may "interfere" anywhere up to ten yards in advance of the scrimmage line.

Penalties are reduced to a minimum, only four being mentioned in the condensed rules. All "dissident" penalties are to be 5 yards, except in the case of rough play or where "no yards" are given on a kicked ball, when the penalty is 10 yards. Delay in putting the ball into play is to be penalized by the loss of one down or the loss of the ball in the case of third down. An illegal pass brings the loss of one down, while a forward pass on a third down results in the loss of the ball to the opposing team.

When scrimmaging the ball, as the players are three more than at least must be on the line, and at least one pass must be made from behind the line before the team starts its advance.

be "clearly through the air", which means that it cannot be handed to a team-mate so that he can cross the line of scrimmage.

Substitutes Allowed

A team, of course, consists of six players, and the number of substitutes is limited to four. The men can be placed where desired, except in three back-division players. There is an unusual restriction with regard to equipment used in that players are not permitted to wear shin guards, while the football-wear being restricted to "such shoes as are generally used for basketball or tennis, or canvas softball shoes may be worn with the latter being specified according to the wording of the clause. The rules governing football are applicable to the miniature game, except where otherwise specified, the latter being governed by that code. The rules, by the way, are identical with the standard playing rules of the Canadian Rugby union which will govern six-man football.

In the preamble it is stated: "The purpose of six-man football is to provide an interesting game where the supply of players and equipment is limited." League groups are to be formed for the coming season, schedules are to be prepared under the direction of local convenors, and playdowns will be arranged so that, come December, the sport world will be able to recognize the first Canadian champions in six-man football.

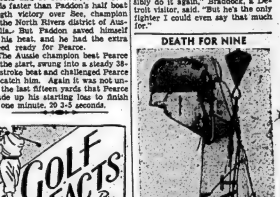
EVANS PADDON'S STOCK BOOMS ON SCULLING MART

Only Beaten a Foot in Quat. or Mile Heat By Bob Pearce

COOK IS ALSO BEATEN

Paddon Beats Pearce Off the Mark in Their Heat

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP) — Evans Paddon's stock boomed on the sculling mart today on the strength of his first performance in Canadian waters.



The young Australian champion pressed Bob Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., to the limit last night as he lost a foot decision to the world champion in a quarter-mile dash over the Canadian National Exhibition course. Pearce never has been closer to defeat in the decade he has ruled the sport.

Last night's meeting between the giant Aussie was the first of two leading to their three-mile clash for the world professional title Friday, Sept. 9. Along with Percy See and George Cook, who lost to Paddon and Pearce respectively in the heats, they will row a mile race next Friday night.

Paddon was not alone in pressing Pearce, for Jack Cook, another Australian to live in Hamilton eight years ago. Cook, champion of New South Wales was less than two feet behind the world champion in the first of the heats that pitted Pearce against Paddon for their final. Fast off the mark, Cook held a slight edge until Pearce quickened his pace, caught up and moved ahead in the final yards.

They sculled the quarter-mile, against a brisk head-wind, in one minute and 21 seconds flat, 3-5 seconds faster than Paddon's half boat length victory over See, champion of the North Rivers district of Australia. But Paddon saved himself in his heat, and he had the more speedy ready for Pearce.

The Aussie champion beat Pearce to the start, swung into a steady 38-39 stroke beat and challenged Pearce on each thin. Again Pearce took it till the last fifteen yards that Pearce made up his starting loss to finish in one minute, 20 3-5 seconds.

Recently I went around the corner to a golf shop and insisted that I could not get the proper line on his game without hitting right there on the ground. Before seeing him in action on the course I had formed a rather accurate picture of him, and his performances only made my opinion stronger.

I figured him as a person who would be rather proficient at making excuses for his errors, and in this respect he proved to be about as good as any player I've met. His woful fault was that of standing with the line over the toes of his feet pointing some 45 degrees to the left of a line drawn to the hole. In other words, he carried the closed stance idea beyond the limit.

When I brought this to his attention and suggested a slightly open stance he promised to carry out my suggestion on the very next shot. He took one of the most assutive manner and something like a sneer on his face when a performance which showed any sign of carrying out my suggestion. But shortly after shot he would take up the old stance and when I would challenge him on the matter would ask me for time to explain why he didn't do it that time.

Then, if he couldn't think of an explanation he would plead for another chance. Some of his shots were brilliant, but neither this brilliancy nor any amount of excuses would make him play good golf.

Winners Will Meet Belleville in Final Round For Loop Title

Napanee, Aug. 27.—Napanee Gibbards advanced to the finals of the Bay of Quinte intermediate league series last night when they defeated Picton 6-3 in the third and deciding game after each team had previously gained a 2-1 win. Steady pitching by Stan Spratt, combined with a rousing four for four hitting display by Fred Bentley, featured the Napanee victory. Abbott and Leaney each had three hits for Picton. Spratt showed fine form in the pinches, twelve runners being left stranded, while only six were left on for Napanee.

The game was played before the largest crowd of the season.

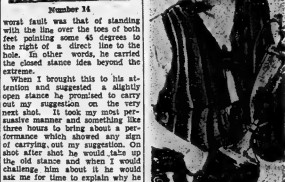
LOUIS SUPREME FOR THREE YEARS SAYS BRADDOCK

Detroit, Aug. 27.—(CP)—James J. Braddock, former Irishman from whom Joe Louis, Detroit negro, wrested the heavyweight boxing crown, said today that in his opinion Louis was supreme for at least three more years.



The man who will eventually beat Louis has not yet appeared on the pugilistic horizon, in Braddock's opinion.

"Tommy Farr of England gave Louis a good fight, and could possibly do it again," Braddock, a Detroit visitor, said. "But he's the only fighter I could even say that much for."

While Jouhaux was en route to America, Premier Edouard Daladier, of France, struck at the 40-hour week in that country and said that hours must be extended to keep factories running full time if France was to hold her own against other nations. NEW YORK GIANTS' PENNANT HOPES

Smiling from behind a whisker or, two is Carl Hubbell, ace of the New York Giants' pitching staff seen resting in the hospital in Memphis, where Dr. Spencer, first of ailing pitching arms, removed a splinter from the Meat Ticket's leathery left arm, the arm that has bagged over 300 victories for the Giants in the past 10 years. The operation, it is hoped, will enable the master of the screwball to regain his hurling form, but he is not expected to play again this year. If you look closely at the picture you can almost see the National League pennant fluttering at a Pittsburg or Cincinnati or Chicago haul boat.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

"I used to hate an old uncle in the country, a doctor. His house is still there and it's empty."

"Mafia for you," said Ted promptly. "Then when you come back—"

"I may not come back."

"Tut-tut. Several tuts, in fact. You'll be at work again in a year. Maybe less.

But Katie, listening to him later on, grew pale when he told her.

"The country?" she said blankly. "What will we do with the money?"

"I'm not adding you to it, my dear. You would loathe it, and I'm no company these days for man or beast. You know that. Later on, of course—"

"You'll be glad to get rid of me, won't you? I'm just something around your neck. Like Palmer and Mother, and even Dick. I'm just nothing. That's it, isn't it?"

"Not at all," he said patiently. "We can't go on as we have, that's all. The house will have to go. I don't know when I'll be carrying again. And it's been a long time since you were poor, Katie. You've forgotten how to be. I was very little about you those days, Katie; but I know enough to realize that you can't change your manner of living overnight. And I want to say this, too. If you would like to be free—"

She sat staring at him with outlandly desperate eyes. Free? What would she do? With Bob Barrett running after another woman now?

With her youth going, almost gone? Suddenly she was crying, crying uncontrollably and unashamed. He got up and tried to quiet her, using his left hand awkwardly to touch her.

"Don't, Katie. Don't cry. I thought you might want it. Why it's to me? What can I give you? Not even a living."

"I did this to you, Chris. You can't go to that place alone."

"Don't cry, dear. It will be all right."

"I must look terrible, Chris."

"You can never look terrible, Katie."

But soon she was powdering her nose, wiping away the streaks of mascara from her cheeks. She was the eternal adolescent, he thought. She would never grow up. Somehow she knew that most always she would be cared for, and there would always be men to do it.

x x x

One day Scott came in, his empty sleeve stuck as usual in his pocket. He was cheerful and as neat as ever, but Chris had a picture of, behind that, the hours of dressing with one hand, learning, to tie his tie, to lace his shoes. And found himself shaking.

"How do you do it, Scott?"

"It was bad enough at first. Later I got used to it. I hardly miss it now. Of course my wife helps."

Chris closed his eyes. Nasty trying to tie tie or fasten his shoes! But one day after that he got a pencil and paper and began practicing his signature with his left hand. The pencil was awkward in his fingers, but he tried it over and over, his mouth set, his eyes determined, his nerves under control. He could. He would. But the result was heart-breaking. He threw the paper out of the window and grinned up at the nurse.

"Go away," he said. "I'm going to blubber like a kid."

Chris saw Beverly just once during that time. His door was open, and she was passing along the hall.

"Come in," he called to her. "Come and cheer the cripple! See where I am? The best room I've not too good for me!"

"I'm sorry you're comfortable. And they tell me you'll be all right, Chris."

"All right, in the best of all possible worlds," he said. "They is, but they're not well."

"But there's a chance, isn't there?"

"Of course. There's a chance I'll be President some day, too, but I think it's unlikely."

She was wretchedly uncomfortable under his eyes, and he, that is his left hand if he dared her to pity him. She went rather pale.

"I'm so dreadfully sorry, Chris," she said. "That's inadequate, I know, but there really isn't much to say, is there?"

"Why be sorry?" he said lightly. "I've needed a rest for a long time. Now I've got it. And I'm learning to use my left hand. Would you like to see me sign my name with it? It's worth watching."

"Chris, if you are going to let this make you bitter—"

He stopped gibing voice. "I'm not bitter, Beverly," he said more gently. "I've been filled with resentment. That's natural enough, maybe I'm scared. But I'll make a fight of it. Don't worry about that."

She stayed a little longer. He was more like Dick now, more friendly. He even talked of his plans, such as they were. But when she got up to go, she felt that at last she had lost him: that the Chris she had known was gone.

"Shall I come again, Chris?"

"Why not? Come and brighten the day for me. Any day."

He held out his left hand, smiling down into her eyes, but the jeering note had come back into voice, and she knew that she would not go back; that having her see him as he was was only another blow to his pride.

A week later he left the hospital. Katie took him away, driving their car carefully, his bag in the back of it, his arm in a sling. The house was unusually quiet and in order. Upstairs his bed was ready for him, neatly turned down, and the table beside it set out with whatever he might need. Whatever her faults, Katie was making such amends as she could.

"Is there anything I can do, Chris? Can I help you to undress?"

But he did not want her help. He wanted to be alone to face the facts and to chart his course. There would be some money coming in. There was a good bit outstanding on his books, but as the Chairman of the profession he knew that a part of it would never be paid. And there would be bills, Katie's bills of all sorts: dressmakers, food, caterers, even bootleggers.

He was astonished to find how much he owed, and that night he told Katie the house would have to go as soon as possible.

"We can't sacrifice it, Chris. Look at all the money we've put into it."

She fought hard for the house. They could close it, and if Chris still wanted to go to the country for a rest, she had a lot of house parties which would fill in the summer. Then in the fall they could make some plans. He listened patiently.

"It's not a matter of the summer, Katie. It's a matter of a year, or two years. God knows how many years. I can't carry the house under our conditions. It was all I could do before. Now it's out of the question."

Certainly he was very difficult during that period. For a few days he played indoors, gaining in strength, learning painfully to care for himself, to dress his big body, to shave with his left hand. Then, moving about, would hear him swearing softly in the bathroom and take care to keep out of his way. One day he came across his self-china in a drawer. Katie found him standing there looking at them. Then he slammed the drawer and went away.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Chris ought to get away soon," she told Ted Lawrence. "I'm worried about him. And it is months that awful Mortimer piece has vanished. Do you suppose he has gone and died?"

"Why not do it yourself, Katie?"

She shook her head. "No fair. I'm not that good at it. But if I ever had any—"

Ted looked at her soberly in what she had called her morning room. she too Ted flashy and without extravagance, a part of her marriage settlement.

"He didn't want me, of course. He hates the sight of me, and I don't blame him. I was a fool. I thought he might care if I gave him time enough. But I've got him for life, lately, when I thought he might be better without me. I'm not sure I can't help him now. I never can leave him, Ted."

And looked at her. Did she honestly feel that she could not have left Chris?

"I'm not sorry or mystified," she said. "Don't think that, Ted. But I'm sorry for Chris. I'm especially sorry. He wanted children, and I didn't. I'm sorry for that, too, now. And of course he has always wanted somebody else. You know that, too, Ted. I'm sorry I can't help him now. I'd run still in the way—"

"If there is anything I can do—" he said awkwardly.

"Then please you can turn the clock back!" she said with a touch of her old gallantry. But she was not. Katie knew that, too. "Ask Ted!" she said. "I'm still young. He has always been my property, and if I am to be buried in that Mortimer hole, I'll go crazy. And I can't leave him now. Chris needs me. Neither you nor cats by the tail."

She was crying when he left her.

It was late spring when Chris Mortimer faced for the first time the world of living men again. Little by little he had regained strength, control of his condition, could drive his own car, could sign his name with greater ease. But he knew he was through. He had built his reputation as a surgeon, and when a surgeon's practice had offered itself, it required two hands.

He spent the following days burning his bridges. He closed and gave up his downtown office, and submitted his resignation to the hospital staff, doing it as a staff meeting and standing rather white but outwardly calm.

He was surprised and moved when they did not accept it. They gave him a sabbatical year, and more if he needed it; and told him that he would be back among them long before that.

"Go away and play for a while," they said. "You've earned it."

By June he was ready to go. Katie was busy with a new apartment taking such furniture as she needed and selling the rest. When the day came for his departure, he stood with her in the hall. Piled about them were their lares and penates, which had never really been his; and his bags lay at his feet as they had that night a dozen years before when she had come in and he had taken her and married her. Now he looked down at her, a little heavy but not a little silky. Then he bent down and kissed her.

"Try to understand what I'm doing, Katie," he said. "It has nothing to do with you or me. But I want some time. I've taken it on the chin, I suppose, and I've got to readjust somehow. I'll do that better by myself. At first, anyhow. After that I'll ask you to come and see me if I can care to."

"Who will look after you?"

"I think Hiram Mortimer has found a woman to do that."

"Oh, see," she said dullishly. "A woman. Any woman but me!"

That was their farewell.

Chris lay in Letitia's room in the Mortimer house. His right arm was on a pillow. When he turned in the night, he moved the pillow also and placed his arm on it. Folded over the foot of the bed was Letitia's shawl of Bethlehem wool, beside him was a table with a lamp, a few books, and his pipe and tobacco; and across the room was the old maple bureau, with his spinet on it.

The bed was wide, but there was a hollow on old avid's side, and wherever Chris started at night, in the morning he would find himself in that hollow. He was there now.

From outside came the early morning sounds of the country, cocks crowing, the deliberate measurement of horse-drawn vehicles, some one at a distance letting down bars for cows and calling softly to them:

"So, boss. So, boss. Come along, boss, along, along."

Soon Mrs. Miller would come from her cottage near by, and he would hear her rattling the big coal stove in the kitchen.

He pushed up the sleeve of his pajama coat and looked at his arm. It seemed to him that the muscles already looked atrophied, and, lying there, he began to massage them with his left hand. Finally, the men in town had not wasted him to leave his treatments, but he had been back before that, and he knew the nerve resumed its functions, or it did not.

For the next few days, save to eat and sleep, Chris assiduously left his room and sat on the porch. David's big old chair, glaring across the road at the blacksmith shop, the flattering ribbons of the cornfields. Mrs. Miller, accustomed by instinct to a master and physical collapse, was great that even memory was dulled.

One day he looked down and saw that Letitia's cat had left a present for him. The dog would eat with dignity and the cat, Chris knew lately, when it thought he might be better without it, left a present. It can't help him now. I never can leave him, Ted."

And looked at her. Did she honestly feel that she could not have left Chris?

"I'm not sorry or mystified," she said. "Don't think that, Ted. But I'm sorry for Chris. I especially sorry. He wanted children, and I didn't. I'm sorry for that, too, now. And of course he has always wanted somebody else. You know that, too, Ted. I'm sorry I can't help him now. I'd run still in the way—"

"If there is anything I can do—" he said awkwardly.

"Then please you can turn the clock back!" she said with a touch of her old gallantry. But she was not. Katie knew that, too. "Ask Ted!" she said. "I'm still young. ## Bumper Peach Crop Rolling Into Markets

From the peach orchards of the Niagara peninsula a crop of more than 515,000 bushels of exceptionally excellent quality is being harvested this year and is now rolling into markets throughout Canada. This year's crop is about 10,500 bushels below that of last year, when 526,000 bushels were picked, but is well above the average in yield. The golden fruit is shown above, left, hanging from the heavily laden trees awaiting the pickers, bottom, left, while the fruit in the Ann Shaw, ready for shipment to the markets.

few doors from the scene of the accident, Miss Ann Shaw, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shaw, Jr., of Bloomfield, was walking on the bench that is usually occupied by people waiting for city buses.

I heard a crash and saw the car close to the side of the Fleming residence," he told newspapermen. "I dashed to the scene and found the little girl screaming "I want grandma." I picked her up, attempted to soothe her, then handed her to somebody and rushed to where the body of Mrs. McNally lay. The deceased used to take evening walks past my house frequently," he said.

In Good Health

Mr. George McNally, with whom she has resided since the death of her husband five years ago, stated that his mother was in perfect health. "She has never known a day of sickness, and looked forward to living for a number of years yet."

He had been on a fishing trip all day, and did not learn of the accident until his return about eight-thirty last night.

Traffic Officer Douglas Ellis was sent to the scene of the accident by Sergeant Harman, to investigate the circumstances.

Surviving the late Mrs. McNally are three sisters, Misses Ellery Ann and Gertrude Williamson, two brothers, Edward and George Williamson all of Toronto, one daughter, Miss Francis McNally, Toronto, and a son George of Belleville.

AT THE CAPITOL

"PARADISE ISLE"

Out of the welter of plays and books and movies being written today about the more turbulent and sordid aspects of human life and emotions, there sometimes emerges a work of art so true and simple and beautiful that all who see it recognize its worth with a sigh of relief.

Such a one is "Paradise Isle," a film of romance in the South Seas coming to the Capitol theatre.

Contrary to the course followed by most stories of the type, Paradise Isle is a native girl, "Paradise Isle" sends its way to a happy ending. The picture tells the story of how a beautiful Polynesian girl finds a shipwrecked blind artist and nurses him back to life. Her devotion, tenderness and beauty of personality gradually win the artist, Kennedy, from his bitterness at being helplessly marooned on the island. Knowing that Kennedy needs money to enable him to get to the doctor who will restore his sight, Ita, the native girl, defies the tribal taboo against pearl diving and gets a beautiful pearl. By a scheme, the island trader, Hoener deprives Ita of the pearl and deceives Kennedy into thinking the great doctor Sielgmyer has come to see him. Just in time to save Kennedy from the overwhelming bitterness of his disappointment, the real Dr. Sielmeyer puts in at the island. The operation to restore Kennedy's sight is successful, but when he prepares to leave the island and Ita behind him, Kennedy realizes that his love for the girl is too great, and stays behind.

Photographed in the tranquil beauty of Samoa, "Paradise Isle" is scenically entrancing. Thousands of feet were exposed by the leader of the dark-eyed girl who played the part of Pranchos' Tonea in "Mutiny on the Bounty," will be won anew by her loveliness and the charm of her portrayal of the girl Ita. Warren Hull gives a convincing performance as the artist-playright artist. The minor roles are extraordinarily well-acted, and the whole is knitted together by a background of Hawaiian music which blends admirably with the scenes of surf and whisper of palms. The scenes of native village life, with its feasting, dancing and singing, bear the stamp of authenticity, and added drama occurs in an underwater battle with a marauding shark.

Added Attraction

A dramatic action picture, "State Police," with John Howard in the leading role, is shown as h1 No. 2 on the same program.

It tells of King's efforts, as sergeant in a detachment of State Police, to break up a gang of counterfeiters. Howard is ably supported by Paul Kelly, Arthur Loft and Ralph Morgan.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THERE GOES THE GROOM"

Famed stage actor, as young Alaska Millionaire in hilarious romantic story of too much wealth and too many love affairs in the Canadian Rockies.

Based on the ingenious premise of a wealthy young man feigning amnesia to escape from his matrimonial entanglements, R.K.O. Radio's new laugh hit, "There Goes The Groom," stars Ann Southern, Burgess Meredith and Mary Boland, and boasts a strong supporting cast. The film is based on an original story by David Garth.

Meredith, who, scored so sensationally last year in R.K.O. Radio's dramatic "Winterset" is said to prove himself equally fine as a light comedian in the new romantic-comedy opening here the McCarthy theatre. Returning to San Francisco after several years of studying in Alaska, he discovers to his dismay that the girl he left behind him has become engaged to another man. By force of circumstance he becomes engaged to the girl himself, and starts to leave, but finds that he doesn't want to marry her after all.

Hoping to get out of this dilema, he jumps at the chance of pretending that he has amnesia, a which he doesn't recognize anyone and isn't responsible for his actions. This throws an uproarious monkey-wrench into the machinery of the plot, and the resulting complications make for some of the funniest moments in the year's screen annals.

With most of its side-splitting scenes taking place aboard Meredith's yacht, at Miss Southern's palatial home and in a private sanitarium, the film keeps its action moving at a fast pace. Miss Southern's mercenary mother and brother, Meredith's old "sourdough" pal from Alaska, the fabulous flame who started all the trouble, and her doctor father, all become involved up to their necks in the hilarious situations, with an impromptu wedding party, Miss Boland and Meredith's attempted escape from the institution among the highlights.

A brilliant supporting cast aids the principals, with Cnarles Sievens as the doctor, Louise Henry as the "other woman," Roger Imhof as Meredith's valet and William Brisbane as the police-promoting brother.

"HERE COMES THE CIRCUS"

A special featurette presentation of circus acts that will please every trained acrobatic sensations of the Big-Top, Ray Goody and score of clowns in the ensemble go through a 10-minutes treat that anyone could wish for, the Carlos Posty act that has the largest assortment of trained pooies to be in a circus of today, and also Captain Fraser's lions and tigers in a thrilling trained animal act that will delight old-timers. The movies' most thrilling-cracking laughter Tom Kennedy in comedy antics are presented also in a twenty minute comedy scream "Halfway to Hollywood". Mr. and Mrs. Alaska Crawford in a splendid comedy featurette, of popular organ selections from the console of the Capitol, and a very clever all technicolor musical cartoon "Penguin Parade" finishes off a splendid program offering at the McCarthy theatre, commencing Sunday for a week.

"Great Guy"

James Cagney and Mae Clarke in the romantic-action-filled drama "Great Guy" now playing at the Regent theatre. In addition to the swell program of short subjects that include Sydd Mason in an all-technicolor musical "Let's Sail to Anita," Polly Moran, queen of screen comedienne, in a comedy special "Sailor Maid," and a splendid all color musical cartoon "Merry Dwarfs" the Regent has another man. By force of circumstance he becomes engaged to the girl himself, and starts to leave, but finds that he doesn't want to marry her after all.

Hungary Now In World News

World attention is focused on Hungary as a result of Admiral Nicholas Horthy's visit and conversations with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler at Kell, Germany. Hitler virtually applauded the French-sponsored Little Entente, composed of Czechoslovakia, Roumania and Jugoslavia by bringing Hungary into the Nazi camp of nations. He persuaded Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian premier, to reject a non-aggression pact with Czechoslovakia and at the same time had the satisfaction of seeing Hungary obtain from the Little Entente conference at Bled, Jugoslavia, the right to rearm without concessions.

Charge Convicts Burned and Beaten to Death

Pictured ABOVE is an airview of the Philadelphia county prison where four convicts were found dead in their cells during a riotous five-day hunger strike. The men's deaths ended abruptly the rebellion against the monotony of prison fare by 650 inmates. Prison officials stated that the men must have met death while fighting between themselves, but medical authorities, who viewed the bodies, charged that the men had been burned to death with live steam and beaten so badly that they were unrecognizable. The four prisoners were in solitary confinement at the time of their death and a widesweeping investigation into all circumstances of their death has been promised.

His Convicts Died

Part of the new staff will operate a meteorological office at an aerodrome being constructed at Collinstown, near Dublin.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thomson
Science Service Meteorologist

September on the Atlantic! Those who cross this month may have a more exciting time than in summer. Cyclones, and hence gales, are on the increase, but even so that the weather is mostly fair on the northern route, in the southern latitudes, however, the peak of hurricane season is reached. They average about three a month but no dependence can be placed on that as some Septembers have none while others have as many as five. When hurricanes do occur they advance with considerable energy into northern waters. There is less fog along New England and Newfoundland but more near the Azores.

Flying Priest Stands by Ship, Drifting Southward With Ice

Churchill, Man., Aug. 29—(CP)—Still defying the relentless crush of the ice pack, the sturdy motor vessel Therese, Arctic supply ship of the Roman Catholic Church, was drifting slowly southward with the pack today, " off Cape Wilson, on the eastern coast of Melville Peninsula.

With no passage showing and possibly a gas pause the scheduled trip to Igloolik, N.W.T., would have to be abandoned unless the ship was freed soon.

Meanwhile Father Paul Schulte, who flew from Chesterfield, N. W. T., Friday, was standing by the ship, making survey flights in an attempt to discover a way through the ice, whenever weather was favorable. Until late last night, however, the "leads" were visible, with the fice stretching solidly in all directions.

JOHN J. RYAN, 75, FAMOUS SCULLER DIES IN TORONTO

Held Two Canadian And Three U. S. Rowing Championships

BEGINNING IN 1885

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Canada's oarsmen expressed regret today at the death of 75-year-old John J. Ryan, one of sculling's greats whom record compared favorably with those of Joe Wright, Jr., and the late Jake Gaudaur who rowed to fame 40 years ago.

Ryan, a lifetime Toronto resident, died suddenly last night as he sat in a chair in his west-end home. His death was unexpected as Ryan, appointed postmaster on Hanlan's last winter, was in good health and showed about activity.

Joe Wright, who with Ryan competed unsuccessfully in the diamond sculls in England in 1894, voiced his surprise and sorrow when informed of the death of his old friend. Timothy Hegarty of the Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club with which Ryan was connected, also paid tribute. Hagarty was one of the last Ryan lifted.

Hagarty said he paid one of his frequent visits to Ryan's home only an hour before the death of the man who held three senior Canadian and two United States rowing championships. He recalled Ryan had joined the Argonaut club in his left. Near him when he died were his prized personal record book that listed his many triumphs on the water.

Though chiefly noted for his sculling achievements, Ryan was one of the best known employers of the Ontario government with which he served for years. Many of them as provincial bailiff. He began work as a gardener at the age of 12 and was superintendent at the Upper Lake region. resume is also high over the New South Wales and on the Nova Scotia Coast, while a deep low area is centred over Northwestern Ontario with shallow trough extending southward to the Manitoba Valley, southwestward across the Great Lakes. ## TROOPS ENGAGED OVER WIDE AREA AT CAMP BORDEN

All Permanent Troops In Camp Start Manoeuvres

'PLOT OF BATTLE

By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M.C.
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Camp Borden, Ont., Aug. 29—(CP)—Engaged over a wide area extending more than 40 miles from one of Camp Borden, field manoeuvres involving practically all tote permanent troops began under canvas here began early today. Nearly 1,500 all ranks participated in the various schemes mapped out by the general staff.

In mid-week the present units will be reinforced by two Toronto militia units, the 48th Highlanders and 2nd Machine Gun Battalion, C.M.R.

The manoeuvres will round off the training which has been in progress during the past three weeks. Their aim is to practise the movements of a partly mechanized force, operating in hostile territory under the conditions of actual modern air attack.

What 'Plot' Assumes

The "plot" assumes that somewhere north-west of Toronto—just what has not been disclosed—the main body of the "northland" force is actively engaged with the main body of the "southland" force. Need arises to dispatch troops southward to the northlanders, and by five o'clock this morning one infantry brigade, a detachment of cavalry, artillery and engineers were en route.

Several things are going to happen to the northlanders, but when and where are things not yet known. What is certain is that the southland army during the past week has been harassing north-

SCHOLARS SWARM C. N. E. GROUNDS

Authorities Prepared For Almost Any Contingency

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Thousands of school children, all bearing free admission tickets swarmed into the Canadian National Exhibition here today from all parts of Ontario. Many travelled overnight, using some hardier parents, were expected.

Exhibition authorities were prepared for almost any contingency presented by the crowds of children. Additional attendants were on hand at the Lost Children's Bureau and prices to most midway shows were cut to five cents. Officials are assured also of many entries for the frankie contest.

Another first time attendance record for Warriors' Day, the first of the exhibition's three Saturdays, was chalked up this year. Officials reported 209,000 visited the fair Saturday, 36,000 more visitors than on the corresponding day last year.

HURT IN FALL OFF TRUCK LOAD

John Garrett of Wellington is Patient at Picton

Picton, Aug. (Special)—John Garrett, 60, of Wellington, suffered a fractured skull when he fell from the top of a loaded truck load of lumber at Edmonds factory. It is believed that he fell while climbing to the top of the load. No one saw the accident, but the factory manager, Elvin Campbell, discovered the injured man lying on the ground and called medical assistance. Mr. Garrett was taken to Wellington dollar bone and several cracked ribs. His morning he is progressing as well as can be expected.

Useless to 'Run' From Accident, Hit-Run Drivers Have Learned

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—A scientific car can enable police to arrive at the scene of an accident scene in two minutes after receiving the report, enabling them to find the number plate of the missing car and early lead.

If the car is located immediately, police check city garages for repairs, manufacturers for identification of any wrecks or new glass, canvas householders for eyewitnesses. Police chiefs declare of the accident for three months, before motorists usually travel fixed routes.

"Effectiveness of such a program over a period of years has a definite bearing on the number of such cases," Frahm said. "In the past two months we have cleared 78.8 per

Report France Invites Alfonso To Be 'Puppet King'

London, Aug. 29—(CP-Havas)—The Daily Herald (Labor) in a dispatch from Basel, Switzerland, today said it was reported there Spanish Insurgent General Franco had invited the former King Alfonso XIII to return to Spain upon an insurgent victory and become a "puppet monarch."

The dispatch added that Franco would become a "Spanish Mussolini", with powers similar to those of Italy's Italian Premier, Count Galeazzo Ciarra Gorda, well-known Spanish monarchist figure, was acting as go-between in the negotiations.

Alfonso rejected the offer in his present form, although expressing willingness to return to Spain, the dispatch added.

HITLER SURPRISES TOWN ON RHINE IN FORTIFIED AREA

Town of Kehl Opposite Strasbourg, France is Not Prepared

FRONTIER CLOSED

Second Unexpected Visit to Frontier Zones in 24 Hours

Kehl, Germany, Aug. 29—(CP-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler and eight generals today paid a surprise visit to this fortified area just across the Rhine from Strasbourg, France.

The town was not prepared. No flag or welcoming banner was displayed. The first intimation the residents had of Hitler's presence was a mobilization order to the police force.

The French-German frontier was closed and traffic on the Strasbourg-Kehl bridge was interrupted. When police measures were complete the Fuehrer and his military aides inspected the fortifications on both sides of the Kehl bridgehead.

Stays For One Hour

Hitler and his party arrived at 9 a.m. and left an hour later in the direction of Offenburg, about 19 miles east of the border.

The visit marked the second unexpected trip to German frontier zones by Hitler in 24 hours. On Sunday the Fuehrer turned up in north western Germany where fortifications are under construction along the Netherlands' border.

Germany Denies as 'Nonsense' Report of Plan to Destroy Church

Berlin, Aug. 29—(AP)—A propaganda ministry spokesman today branded as "nonsense" charges made by Germany's Roman Catholic hierarchy in a pastoral letter that efforts were being made in Germany to destroy the church.

"All one has to do is to compare what the German state has done for the Catholic church," the spokesman said. "The government is paying millions of marks annually to the church and the fact that the writers of the letter had possible clearly demonstrates that there can be no talk about persecution.

"The government itself has the most earnest desire to protect the church from anti-religious demonstrations."

As evidence of this, he said the government had banned a number of publications adhering to an anti-religious policy.

Answering the Bishops' charge that "unparalleled, ugly, concentric attacks and outrages" were used against Bishop Johnson Sproll who was expelled from Wuerttemberg last Thursday, the spokesman said the Nazis had acted solely to protect the Bishop.

BRITAIN MAY SEND ANOTHER WARNING ON CZECH ISSUE

France Moves Men to Italian And German Fronts For 'Games'

BRITISH CABINET MEETS

Situation Slightly Easier Following Sunday Conference

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 29—(CP Cable)—While Europe was confronted with its gravest crisis since 1914, Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador to Germany, gave Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax his studied reply to the question of every man's lips: Will Germany invade Czech soil into Czechoslovakia.

Sir Nevile flew from Berlin Sunday for consultation with government leaders as a prelude to meeting with them at all available cabinet ministers in an emergency session. Lord Stanley, Dominions Secretary now in Canada, may be the only absentee.

Plain Talk to Germany

There was no doubt the British government had talked plainly to Germany within the last few days through diplomatic channels—for plainer than through proper pronouncements like Sir John Simon's Manchester speech, in which he stated no predictions could be made that nations might have to beat out a confrontation should one start.

Just how far these private warnings have gone is a matter of conjecture, but it is reported reliably that Hitler has been told bluntly that Britain will not tolerate, first, Britain will do if he gives marching orders to his mobilized army.

Second, Britain will not be plain speaking in diplomatic circles, considered the best way to tell Hitler what Britain thinks of his sabre rattling and his continued aggressive attitude. Third, Germany will crush Sudeten German powder keg, which Nevile first saw in Saarland.

Sir Nevile first saw Sir Robert Vansittart, diplomatic adviser to the government, then Lord Halifax. Later he will confer with the Prime Ministers of Canada and Sir John Simon at 10 Downing Street in a ministerial council session, preparatory to tomorrow's meeting. He is likely to return to Berlin Wednesday or Thursday and indefinite.

Th British government suit was hopeful of a peaceful solution to Czechoslovak problems. To this end it was said to be working hard today on removing outside interference so Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator, can continue his dispute can bring the Czechs and Sudeten Germans together for a spirit of compromise.

The two major sources of outside pressure are Germany's mobilized army of 1,00.000 men and the violent anti-Czech propaganda in Germany.

The Prime Minister returned to London during the morning. He smiled at crowds which cheered him on the way to Downing Street, to nearby Whitehall government offices and

FEDERAL CABINET REORGANIZATION RUMORED TODAY

Appointments to Six Senate Vacancies May be Involved

WHEAT MARKETING

Ottawa, Aug. 29 (CP)—Canada's wheat marketing problem and reorganization of the personnel of the Federal Cabinet which would involve some appointments to the Senate, were the two main topics of political interest here today. Canada probably will have about 200,000,000 bushels of exportable wheat from this year's harvest and the United States plans to export 100,000,000 bushels through a subsidy plan, Senator Wallace of the United States Bureau of Agriculture has declared that Canadian co-operation is needed in marketing this surplus and grain experts in the Dominion today by watching the world wheat situation closely.

Until details of the U.S. subsidy plan have been known it is not likely the attitude of the Canadian government on the subject of co-operation will be made public.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Finance Minister Dunning were the only two members of the cabinet in the capital today. Other cabinet posts here during the weekend. Premier Minister Dunning is recuperating at Baie St. Paul, Quebec, while Prince Edward Island and Postmaster General Elmer Gill is suffering from an illness which prevented him taking an active part in government work since the start of the year.

Rumors of Changes

The other 11 ministers are either at their homes in other parts of Canada, but some of them will return to the capital for tomorrow's meeting of the cabinet.

ALBERTA GOV'T PREPARED TO TEST ITS PROPOSALS

In Brief to Federal Gov't Offers Plea For Conference

'THE CASE FOR ALBERTA'

Edmonton, Aug. 29 (CP)—Recommendations for social and economical reconstruction and as plea for a conference of representatives to discuss the "proper basis" of Confederation are contained in the Alberta Government's formal brief submission to the Federal Government regarding Dominion-Provincial relations.

The brief, which the Alberta Legislature decided should not be submitted to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations which held sittings in various parts of Canada, was released for publication today by Premier John Low, Provincial Treasurer. The brief is entitled "The Case For Alberta."

Text of Proposals

Declaring the Alberta Government was prepared to make considerable of its economic proposals, the brief urged early action by the Federal Government to "establish the sovereignty" of their people to control credit and declared that if Canada should regulate the nation's money supply to meet requirements of the people.

Monetary and economic proposals included a Provincial Credit authority for each province; distribution of a Social Credit dividend; regulation of prices and wages and regulation of financial institutions. Interest charges should continue administration of the financial system under jurisdiction of the Federal government and subject to control of policy by the Federal Government, each province through a credit authority.

May Yohe, Darling of Stage, Dies Once Owned Famed Hope Diamond

Boston, Aug. 29—(CP)—May Yohe is dead and Wednesday, in Roxbury, Mass., funeral services will be held for Lord Francis Hope, former owner of the famous Hope diamond who lived here many years and continuents.

Miss Yohe, 69, died yesterday of a heart attack after a short illness Her third husband, Captain John Wellington Emsley, former British army officer, was with her when she died in their home. She was stricken with poverty, her last work being a job as $16.50 week Work Project administration sewing clerk. Her triumphant career that saw her thrice married and twice divorced began on the stage of continents and later a chamberlaid, gowns, jewels and waifsss, May was philosophic.

"I have done pretty nearly everything in my life except murder and murder," she said once, "but thank God, I've had no regrets for my heart's been it it."

"With All My Heart"

Only recently she philosophized: "Whatever I do, I do with all my heart. I have had in life's extravagance that the only really independent woman is the one who has at least a hundred dollars of her own earnings and savings together in her purse; a hundred dollars is a football that any clown can kick."

Miss Yohe was born Marie Augusta Yohe, daughter of a Denver, Colorado, miner. Another billing termed her "the flat-footed prima donna with one talent to her credit—a voice that was not a voice at all."

Her choir singing led to such roles as Princess Prittwitz in "The Crystal Slipper" and Christopher Columbus in "Christopher Columbus." She made her London debut in "The Lady Slavey" in 1893.

The following year, she married Lord Francis Hope, heir to the Dukedom of Newcastle, and it was then the Hope diamond came into her life. For her husband's family owned the blue and sinister diamond which was in the Hope collection at Montespan, Mistress of France's Louis XIV.

The diamond disappeared, along with other Hope family jewels, when Lord Hope was declared bankrupt.

In 1901 May Yohe eloped with Captain Bradlee Putnam Strong, American army officer and son of a New York Mayor, and the following year she was divorced by Lord Hope. She then married Strong, but was divorced by him in 1910.

Her 3rd Unsuccessful

Four years later came her third marriage, to Captain Smith, with whom she toured in the school boat, ranching, running an inn at Marathon, N.B., and finally retired on occasion. And finally retirement in Boston.

The world never decided exactly what it was which made Miss Yohe the sensation she seemed called her tall and feline. Others described her as "a handsome woman" and "a beautiful woman." Another billing termed her "the flat-footed prima donna with one talent to her credit—a voice that was not a voice at all."

BRITISH CABINET MEETS

Situation Slightly Easier Following Sunday Conference

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 29—(CP Cable)—While Europe was confronted with its gravest crisis since 1914, Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador to Germany, gave Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax his studied reply to the question of every man's lips: Will Germany invade Czech soil into Czechoslovakia.

Sir Nevile flew from Berlin Sunday for consultation with government leaders as a prelude to meeting with them at all available cabinet ministers in an emergency session. Lord Stanley, Dominions Secretary now in Canada, may be the only absentee.

Plain Talk to Germany

There was no doubt the British government had talked plainly to Germany within the last few days through diplomatic channels—for plainer than through proper pronouncements like Sir John Simon's Manchester speech, in which he stated no predictions could be made that nations might have to beat out a confrontation should one start.

Just how far these private warnings have gone is a matter of conjecture, but it is reported reliably that Hitler has been told bluntly that Britain will not tolerate, first, Britain will do if he gives marching orders to his mobilized army.

Second, Britain will not be plain speaking in diplomatic circles, considered the best way to tell Hitler what Britain thinks of his sabre rattling and his continued aggressive attitude. Third, Germany will crush Sudeten German powder keg, which Nevile first saw in Saarland.

Sir Nevile first saw Sir Robert Vansittart, diplomatic adviser to the government, then Lord Halifax. Later he will confer with the Prime Ministers of Canada and Sir John Simon at 10 Downing Street in a ministerial council session, preparatory to tomorrow's meeting. He is likely to return to Berlin Wednesday or Thursday and indefinite.

Th British government suit was hopeful of a peaceful solution to Czechoslovak problems. To this end it was said to be working hard today on removing outside interference so Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator, can continue his dispute can bring the Czechs and Sudeten Germans together for a spirit of compromise.

The two major sources of outside pressure are Germany's mobilized army of 1,00.000 men and the violent anti-Czech propaganda in Germany.

The Prime Minister returned to London during the morning. He smiled at crowds which cheered him on the way to Downing Street, to nearby Whitehall government offices and

TOLL LIGHTENS OVER WEEKEND

Boy Drowned Off Raft, 2 Motorists Die, Painter Killed in Fall

(By The Canadian Press)

A death toll of five one of the lightest this year, was counted in Ontario today as an aftermath of week-end accidents in western and northwestern sections of the province. Two persons were killed in automobile mishaps, a man was injured fatally in a fall, a boy was drowned and an unidentified man was killed by a train.

Cool weather that prevailed over most of Ontario kept week-ending vacationists from the water. The only water fatality was that of seven-year-old Edward Dupuis who dropped from a raft in Silverleaf Creek near Nipigon, 75 miles east of Port William.

Fred Clark, 25-year-old painter, was killed Saturday when staging on which he was working with Kenneth Saxon, like Clark a Stratford resident, collapsed. Saxon, clung to a pulley an was lifted to safely. Clark fell 50 feet from the tower he was painting and suffered a fractured neck and multiple injuries.

The motor mishaps occurred at Simcoe and near Hamilton. In the first accident Mrs. Frank Funk, 45, Detroit, was killed and 10 other persons were injured when two cars collided, Joseph Tolton of Belleville, Mich., was arrested by police on charges of criminal negligence. Lorne Brisbin, 19, was killed near Hamilton when a car rolled down an embankment and overturned. Four companions were injured.

An unidentified Indian, aged about 30, was killed by a train near St. Catharines. The body was found Sunday. The accident is believed to have occurred late Saturday night.

Water on Course Delays Cobb

Bonnerville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 29.—(AP)—A rainstorm which forced postponement of John Cobb's attempt to break the world land speed record of 368.46 miles per hour set Saturday by Capt. George E. T. Eyston.

The storm left large pools of water on the salt race course.

Reid Railton, designer of the car which Cobb has described as the fastest in existence, said if the weather cleared it might be possible to run tomorrow.

Police Blotter

Two small children reported lost in the city after their arrival here from Foxboro, gave police a few hours excitement on Saturday night. The children were reported as having "disappeared" from before midnight, anxious parents later informed police.

Calmed, police authorities report a black Oldsmobile sedan stolen from the city shortly after noon Saturday evening. The car bears, it is said, Ontario license number "147 M S" and Michigan plates No. "51128."

A 1931 model Ford blue sedan was stolen in Oakville Saturday night, police authorities were advised today. The license plates bear the number "4 X 59."

A local youth was apprehended on Saturday night through failure to stop at Highway 2 at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets. He will receive a summons, police stated.

Two large cigarette vending machines availed themselves of the opportunity to slenderize the police cell block over the week end.

Falls From Plank Fractures Leg, Arm

Frank B. Foley, 263 George St., was rushed to Belleville General Hospital last night suffering from a fractured right leg and arm, sustained when he fell from a plank while looking at the ruins of John Street Church.

Mr. Foley stepped on the plank which was arranged about three feet from the ground when it tipped and precipitated him to the concrete below.

Rogers Trophy Won by Scrapper

Largest Entry List on Record As Belleville Fair Opens

Annual Exhibition Begins Tomorrow, Tuesday, August 30

130 TO 140 EXHIBITORS

"Absolutely the largest entry list of exhibitors ever received for the Belleville Fair' was the reply given by Secretary R. H. Hutcheson to day when questioned relative to the exhibitors' entry list at the 1938 Belleville Fair that will open its doors on Tuesday.

"At present we have between 135 and 140 individual exhibitors, many of whom are exhibiting several varieties in the large field that is embraced by the Belleville Fair. All available space has long since been allotted to eager exhibitors and we may have to provide other desired space beneath canvas" added Mr. Kitchenson.

In regards to the automobile drawing contest which is being sponsored by the Belleville Fair through the co-operation of the Belleville Merchants, Fair officials announced this afternoon that the draw for the vehicles would be made on Wednesday evening, August 31.

On Wednesday night the draw will be made for one car, on Thursday for another car and on Friday the lucky ticket holder will be given the third. The contest is growing in popularity and will doubtless prove a marized boom towards the success of the Fair. The cars are a Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge.

"All we need is fair weather to assure Belleville of its biggest and best fair ever," predicted President D. A. Thrasher at noon.

Agricultural Representative Speakers to Preside at Gathering

Junior farmers of Hastings County expected to number one hundred and fifty or more, will be guests of three Belleville creameries, the Swift Canadian Company, the Glen-Ora Creamery, the Maple Valley Dairy and the Stirling Creamery of Stirling, in Holloway Street United Church on Wednesday evening at six-thirty o'clock as complimentary banquet tendered in recognition of their work in promoting the agricultural industry in the county during the past year.

For several years the annual event has been held on the grounds, but due to the inconvenience of this it was decided by the patron creameries to hold the banquet in the church.

Guests of the evening are expected to be Mr. Carroll, Ontario Fair secretary, and Mr. C. McPhail, former assistant director of the agricultural representative branch of Ontario, and recently appointed principal of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School, Kemptville. Chairman of the evening will be Mr. Lyall Hunter, manager of the local branch of the Swift Canadian Company.

Notice of awards received in the junior judging section of the local Fair is expected to be made at the banquet.

Northlanders' Harassed

Low-flying airplanes have been making things miserable for the northlanders with machine-guns and, in spite of atomic international agreements, with poison gas.

Col. W. C. Hagerty, D.S.O., Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, commands the northland brigade, made up of the Royal Canadian Regiment and the Royal 22nd Regiment. Attached to the brigade are mechanized artillery, comprising the R. C. H. A., 18-pounders and the 3rd medium battery, 60-pounders. The Royal Canadian Dragoons form part of the brigade, with the 1st field company Royal Canadian Engineers. No 1 company, 1st field ambulance and detachment No. 1 army field workshop.

Once away from their tents and huts at Camp Borden, the troops will not see them again for about a week. The men will bivouac at night in the open fields. Battle equipment has been issued on a war-service basis.

INEBRIATED MAN FALLS TO RIVER

He Tries to Help Fireman Land Fish But it Gets Away

When Fireman Stanley "Star" McDonald found himself in difficulty while trying to land a rainbeauty from out of the Moira River on Saturday afternoon, a willing inebriate, who was passing offered his unsolicited assistance, with the result the inebriate fell into the river, but was subsequently rescued by firemen from No. 1 firehall.

Fireman McDonald was fishing from off a pier on the C.P.R. bridge when he made his strike just as an inebriate was attempting to cross the bridge on Saturday afternoon. "Let me help you chum", mumbled the inebriate as he reached over to assist and in so doing lost his balance and fell into the river below. Fortunately there was only about five feet of water at this point, but the flow of the stream kept the intoxicated man from regaining an upright position and it was only after firemen, who saw the incident, obtained a boat that the man was rescued.

"And the dammed fish got away," bemoaned Fireman "Star" as he admitted the strike was the only one he had had that day.

YOUTH IS HELD ON ADMISSIONS

Acknowledges He Issues Cheques in Gooda Without Funds in Bank

Suspicion of a prominent Front Street business man that a cheque tendered him for payment of a large order of clothes, was not all that it should be, led to the arrest of a man who gave his name as Anton J. Rats of Renfrew on Saturday night.

Subsequent police investigation, and the complaint of other merchants that Ratz had issued cheques led to his appearance in police court this morning, where he pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining under false pretences. He was remanded for sentence until Sept. 9th, by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C.

Ratz when arrested told police officers he was Barney Ross, a prizefighter, but claims that this name was his ring nom de plume.

The accused entered a Front St. men's clothing store and purchased a suit and topcoat, tendering a cheque for $44.20 in payment. Becoming suspicious, the proprietor of the store notified police who arrested Ratz. The garments were returned to the merchant. Ratz, under questioning admitted that he had no funds in the bank police stated.

RESCUES WOMAN NEAR GLENORA

Operator of Ferry Stops Engine And Jumps Into Bay to Save Woman

Picton, Aug. 29 (Special)— Rescued from the water of the Bay of Quinte near Glenora in which she is thought to have fallen while crossing between Glenora and Adolphustown on the ferry, Mrs. Frank Gallager, Dorland resident, was admitted to Prince Edward Hospital on Sunday for observation and treatment.

Noticed in the water when the ferry was half-way to Glenora, the woman was hauled to safety by David Cole, ferry operator who, fearing she would be hurt by the propeller, shut off the engine and plunged into the bay to her rescue. Mrs. Gallager received head injuries and is reported to be suffering from shock.

THE EVE OF THE FAIR

The Belleville Agricultural Society's annual fair is ready. The exhibits will be in place for tomorrow when the gates open and the program begins.

The officials and directors give assurance that this year's show will be excellent. What is now necessary is the crowds to swell the "gate" and to get their money's worth by looking over the exhibits and enjoying the program. The exhibits come from country and city and will live up to the best records of the association's history and probably excel them. In recent years there has been a remarkable growth in a number of classes, particularly in the classification for cattle. That exhibit alone will be worth the admission. Every farmer will look over this section for he knows its value, and every city dweller should take time to look over it. It will be worth while and be of value to everyone. This is the case with every line.

There is the confident expectation that this year's attendance and financial results will make a new mark. Everyone should have a part in establishing that record of the district and home fair.

EUROPEAN UNREST

News from Europe has been rather disquieting and even in Britain, where events of importance are taken with calmness, Sir John Simon on Saturday took occasion to warn Germany. He said that war is not inevitable and urged that the Germany lend her hand towards the efforts to ease the tension. Germany's actions in the past two years have been such as to cause great unrest, her action in Austria last March tends to lend point to every rumor heard today. This is part of the Hitler programme there is not the slightest doubt, that he is endeavoring to force Czechoslovakia by a demonstration of the might of German arms. The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill stated on Saturday that as long as Germany has one and a half million men at her war games, which amounts to a military footing there will be no rest in Europe. He regretted that while as he said Germans did not want to fight, power to force a situation existed in one man.

The world is watching for September as there have been guesses that something new in international situation will be staged. Accordingly for some time now there has been a feeling of great unrest. There is a feeling held by many that the German dictatorship has to continue to show results and that by the very nature of the German war machine he has built up, much is expected of him.

Meanwhile the Czechoslovakians who have lived under the threat of trouble, and who know their danger are imperturbable. There is little likelihood of their being frightened by the new Germany though they are largely surrounded by German frontiers.

The world has lived in the midst of war's alarms and rumors of wars—the world that wants peace. It has lived through an age of fears because of the actions of dictatorship.

NATURE HAS DONE HER PART

The season has come when the tomatoes are being harvested in one of the greatest crops to handle, so that more than ordinary care is being used to bring them to market and in canning them.

One of the features of this crop and of others this year has been its size. This season the bounty of nature has been observed on every hand. There is enough and more than enough.

Nature with the agriculturist's cooperation has done her part in a large harvest.

CARDS ON TABLE?

It only remains to note that recent weeks have been a period of international strain, but also a period of wearing international hearts on sleeves. German army manoeuvres are made an occasion for exhibiting to the world a formidable new field-guns, instead of keeping the secret until war is declared. The head of the French air forces has just come back from a visit to Germany, where they showed him the latest things in military aviation, or almost all the latest things. Not quite parallel but analogous is Colonel Lindbergh's prolonged and intenaive inspection of aviation, progress in Soviet Russia. In the case of Colonel Lindbergh it is doubtful if the Kremlin could hide much from his expert eye, even if it wished to do so.—New York Times.

Family education and order are some of the chief means of grace; if these are duly maintained, all the means of grace are

NOT THE SIZE OF THE HOUSE

It is not the size of your house that counts,
Or whether it's granite, or fir;
Or whether 'twas planned by an architect,
Or built by a carpenter.
A house is a house, and only a house,
Be it covered with proof or dome,
If is a place where true lovers live,
'Tis then we call it home.

There are one-room shacks that are palaces,
There are granite piles that are sties;
For only love can glorify.
The house, whatever its size.
So if you dwell in a lonely cot,
In a city or country fair,
The best of all good things is yours
If only love is there.

Some there are who envy those Whose splendor they cannot match,
But love is rich in a humble place,
Though the roof above be thatch.
So, here's to the folks who live secure,
Away from envy and strife,
Who know that, apart from earthy things,
Love is the soul of life.

YESTERDAY, BEING SUNDAY, OF COURSE YOU ATTENDED CHURCH!—not being a "shut-in," golf crank, or motor maniac. Just how much or what did you carry away from church to help you start the week better? Did your religious meditations Sunday charge your batteries with more of the milk of human kindness, charity, good neighborliness? Did it make you the best in your history, full of good deeds, smiles and kindly impulses. If Sunday does not inspire desire for better things it is a day wasted.

BELLEVILLE THE BEAUTIFUL CAN BE MADE MORE BEAUTIFUL—and this week especially there is a call for Belleville's Best. We have the colored lights for night, let us display all the flags and bunting possible during the four days of the fair—let's declare a fiesta and all citizens by their attendance and co-operation make this year's fair a record-breaker in every way. The Belleville Fair officers have worked hard, late and early to produce an exhibition of which Belleville and the entire district could be proud of—now it's up to the citizens to show their appreciation by active encouragement.

SEEMS AS HOW FOLKS HAVE BEEN AWAKENED TO THE FACT THAT TAXES ARE TOO HIGH, especially property taxes, a state of affairs which discourages building and contributes materially to unemployment. Now that one contributory cause to unemployment has been isolated, lets get busy and find a remedy. But, gosh all hemlock! there's the rub—ever since the days of Henry George, single tax exponent, folks have been complaining ab—out taxes but nobody seems to be doing anything about it. However, it remained for Mayor Jamieson Bonc, of Belleville, to set Canadians from coast to coast talking about the folly of overtaxing property values.

ANOTHER OF OUR DREAMS ARE GOING HAYWIRE. Like many others who like to dream of peace, quiet, and infinite happiness in some South Sea island, where three meals a day grow on the trees, where every prospect pleases and only man disturbs the serenity occasionally, the South Sea Islands have had a peculiar fascination. Beatrice Grimshaw's tales of the isles have kept alive that dream, together with Jack London's stories from his Snark voyages, while "The Mutiny on the Bounty" with its sidelights on Tahiti and Pitcairn islands, followed by "The Hurricane" have added to the lure. Now here comes a skipper who sailed round the world in the schooner Joseph Conrad, who says: "Nowadays it is rather hard to find a really interesting, unspoiled South Sea island. During the recent voyage I kept good lookout for islands off the beaten track". Then he goes on to break the horrible news of anchoring in palm-fringed lagoons, and the first visitors to the ship would be the agent of a tourist concern touting automobile trips around the island. Shirt-sleeved civilization was found everywhere, even in Suva, Papeete, Tulagi, Samari, Nukualofa, Pago Pago, Vila, and other islands of which dreams used to be made. However, the skipper did find unspoiled islands and tells about it in "Cruise of the Conrad".

Methods of Curing Enuresis—Bed Wetting

One of the ailments of children which, while not serious from the standpoint of health, is distressing and embarrassing to child and parent is enuresis or bed-wetting. I write about this from time to time as there are so many parents who have accepted the condition as one the child may lose when he or she grows older. In the meantime a rubber sheet is all that is done about it.

Enuresis is an ailment that can be greatly relieved if parents will follow the suggestions of the physician. While belladonna or atropine is the drug commonly used, there are daily habit suggestions, supervised by the parents, which bring excellent results. Some of these are (a) having child pass urine before retiring (b) waking child up when parent is retiring and have him or her walk to the bathroom himself to make sure he is wide awake, (c) if parent wakes during the night the child is again wakened and sent or accompanied to the bathroom.

In the Journal of Pediatrics (Children's Diseases) some months ago Dr. J. Roenson made the following suggestions.

"The child is allowed to take all food and as much liquid as desired until after the noon meal; fluids are then cut down until four o'clock when he has his last drink of the day. His supper consists of digestible (meat, egg, fish, bread, butter, cheese, crackers). When the child is in bed for the night he is given a meal or sardine sandwich containing a level teaspoonful and a quarter of table salt. After two months of this regime or method vegetable, and fruit may be gradually allowed."

What may be of interest to physicians in treating enuresis is a suggestion from Dr. R. W. Brookfield (Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital) in the British Lancet. Dr. Brookfield treated children with enuresis with ephedrine (the Chinese drug). One-half grain of ephedrine alkaloid in tablet form was given at bed-time; the dose was increased by 1-2 grain every 3 or 4 nights until in certain instances as much as 5 grains was given. The enuresis stopped in ten cases and there was improvement in fourteen others. In a few cases the condition was made worse.

Plucky Fight With 38 Pound 'Lunge Won by Woman

Fishing trips, like hockey games, are not over until the final whistle blows or the boat is grounded on the shore and the tackle put away.

At least so think a party of Belleville fishermen who spent some hours in futile fishing on the waters of Moira Lake yesterday with nary a bite nibbling their hooks. A little tired, but plenty disappointed, the party consisting of Mr. Frank Domenico, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hennessy and a Miss Verona Mackenzie of Toronto, a guest of the Hennessy's, headed for the boat for shore with not a minnow to show as a result of the fishing trip.

Then it happened. Arriving off "Casa Loma", a summer resort located near Madoc, Miss Mackenzie, who had about thirty-five feet of line trailing astern, felt a mighty tug..... Came a flurry of white water, then started a battle between what proved to be a thirty-eight pound fighting lunge, and the plucky lady, that lasted upwards of an hour before the finny beauty lay securely gaffed, and gasping in the bottom of the boat.

Looks of disappointment turned to those of joy, as the party made the way to shore and a pair of scales. The big fella measured forty-seven inches in length, with a head that looked big enough to snap off the arm of a man.

The fish was brought to Belleville, where it was put on display this morning in the window of Green's Butcher Shop. The proudest lady in the land today is Miss Mackenzie, who had the line of her life landing the fish that gave her sixty minutes of thrilling sport before the men gaffed the lunge and hauled it into the boat.

Tweed Horticultural Society Awards Prizes at Show

Tweed — Tweed Horticultural Society held its annual Flower Show and Supper at Memorial Park Pavilion on Friday afternoon and evening. There was a fine display of beautiful cut flowers, potted plants and foliage. The pavilion was in a riot of color and attracted a large crowd of flower lovers.

Although the season was somewhat advanced for many varieties of flowers the exhibit was quite equal to that of other years. A greater number of exhibitors than usual took part in the exhibition which brought out nearly three hundred entries from the eighteen exhibitors. The judges, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mallory of Campbellford, who were assisted by Mr. T. E. Merlin as secretary, found a great deal of difficulty in making their placements owing to the excellence of the exhibits.

A great deal of credit for the success of the Flower Show is due to the president, Mrs. W. A. Beatty the secretary, Miss Cora Meikle-John; and the very efficient board of directors who are to be congratulated on their efforts in staging another successful flower show.

Mrs. A. C. Blakely won first sweep stakes winner amassing a total of 110 points with thirteen firsts, thirteen seconds and one third prize. Mr. S. H. ## Collar Bones' Purpose Is Only to Serve You

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAVE YOU "shelves" on your chest—otherwise, collar bones? They were made to serve, not to be seen. Scrawny girls have them. But those shiftless ones who won't take the trouble to carry themselves beautifully.

For the perfect silhouette, the throat should be slightly thicker from front to back than from side to side. The chest should develop a gradual fullness to the line of the bust. Though the tissues covering the chest may be thin, there should not be the slightest sign of collar bone. Posture solves the problem; massage will help make tissues fuller and firmer.

Cold sponge baths are helpful, so are breathing exercises. Voice lessons will make you never use an opera singer who displayed collar bones. Sing whenever the family will let you; yodel your head off. That good beauty tonic near, even if you haven't chest and throat worries.

Take a bath at night, spray with cold water, dry vigorously, massage the upper portion of the torso with coco butter.

Follow the bath with talcum gently unclutched the small fingers.

"Now I'm afraid you'll have to give her something else." Aunt Malmle addressed her visitor.

The visitor co-operated, smiled and pleased and gave Anne something else.

Of course, eventually Anne would have to learn to return what she borrowed without reward, first only excessive praise, but careful consideration—finally with only a smile.

But there's no need to hurry matters. The important thing is the establishing of a good habit. Anne was being back and forth she has brought back the old one.

It's Useless to Give Orders That Baby Doesn't Understand

By LISA GRENELLE

BABY ANNE took the visitor's bag off somewhere and hid it.

"I'll get it in," you," Mother said. "Perhaps Anne will bring it back herself," the visitor suggested. "Bring me back my bag, Anne."

But Baby Anne only stared and sat where she was.

"She doesn't understand," Mother explained, and started for the bag.

"Stay where you are"! commanded Aunt Maimie. "Do you want to get the child into bad habits by spoiling her no sense of obligation?"

"Put isn't two a little early to t e a c h responsibility, Aunt Maimie?" Mother asked. "She knows the meaning of a few scattered words."

Will Show Her

"What does that matter?" Aunt Maimie said. "I don't intend to tell her, but to show her. The only way you can train a baby is by doing it—by showing him over and over. It takes patience."

So saying Aunt Maimie went to Baby Anne, offering a hand with a smile. It was accepted, and off they both went without a word to get the visitor's bag.

Taking hold of Anne's free hand, Aunt Maimie gently propelled it toward the handle of the bag. "Pick up." Pick up." affe repeated gently.

Anne had no idea what Aunt Maimie mean, but she responded like a small parrot, and picked up the bag.

Pulled gently by the other hand, she followed Aunt Maimie to the visitor.

Anne Copied Her

"Bring back—bring back!" Aunt Maimie hummed cheerfully in a kind of sing-song, that Anne took up in a sing-song, that Anne took up in a sing-song, that Anne took up in a

GOODNIGHT STORIES

By MAX TRELL

MR. EARTHWORM switched the lights on in the tunnel under the garden. Now Handi, the shadow girl, couldn't imagine what kind of lights they could be.

"I didn't know you had electricity down here," she remarked to the earthworm. "They're very nice lights, too. Not like little tiny candles. But they're not candles are they?"

"Oh, no," said Earthworm. "They are not candles. They're friends of mine."

"Friends of yours! The lights are friends of yours?"

"I'm indeed. Here Sparkie! Come down here a minute!" he called to the nearest light. To Handi's surprise the light came down off the wall. It proved to be a little glow-worm with a bright light in its head.

He's Sparkie

"Are you sparkie?" Handi asked in astonishment.

"Oh yes." the glow-worm answered. "I've been Sparkie for quite a long time. In fact—

It was a snail-taxi.

"—in fact," the earthworm broke in with a smile, "he's always been Sparkie. All right, you can go back to your place, I just wanted Handi to get a good look at you. We're on our way to the Mole family. They have a house down here.

You see," he added, turning to Handi, "we won't have a bit of trouble finding it. But I don't think we ought to walk there. You look pretty tired."

"No, I'm not tired," she said.

"You look quite tired. We'll ride there in a taxi."

Aren't Any Taxis?

"But there aren't any taxis here. Mr. Earthworm said it is under the garden!"

"Dear me — haven't you ever heard of underground taxis? I'll call one at once." With that he whistled. In a few seconds later the taxi came along. Do you know what it was? It was a snail-taxi, with two horns.

Handi stepped on the snail's shell and sat there, as comfortably as she could. The earthworm sat beside her.

"All right. You can start now," the earthworm said to the snail. "But mind you don't go too fast."

Don't worry about that, sir. I never go too fast."

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

Salad greens from cabbage stalks

In the home garden early cabbages should be cut as they are used, for they do not keep after being cut as do the late varieties. And if early cabbages are cut so as to leave a good piece of the stalk extending above ground, the stalks will repay this consideration by producing new growth which can be used for appetizing salad greens.

When gathering early cabbage, therefore, do not pull them up by the roots. Cut the head off the stem and, small loose heads will grow out again near the top of the stalk, as shown in the Garden-Graph. These tiny heads will be found very tender and tasty when used as salad greens.

Should the heads of early cabbage show signs of bursting before it is time to harvest them, bend the stalks over. This will break some of their feeding roots and thus check too rapid development of the head.

Oranges and Lemons Give Enhanced Flavor to Jams

(The Home Kitchen)

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

THIS IS the season when good cooks "swap" recipes for jams, jellies and preserves. Kitchens are fragrant with the appetizing odor of cooking fruit. Cupboard shelves are hosts to rows of well-filled jars. The flavor and acid content of certain fruits lends them to those fruits valuable additions to other fruits in many popular jellies, jams and conserves. Slices of the unpeeled fruit, the grated peel or the juice may be used in cooking and canning such fruits as pears, apples, apricots, peaches, figs and rhubarb. Inclusion of the peel will give a subtle fragrance as well as enhanced flavor.

Lemon Juice Helps

The clotting sweetness of preserves is overcome by the addition of one tablespoon of lemon juice to each cup of fruit about two minutes before removing from heat. With conserves, one lemon sliced thin is added to each pint of fruit. This may be done with pear, peach apricot, pineapple or tomato conserves. Also we recommend the use of a tablespoon of lemon juice and lemon rind to each pint jar to increase the certainty of success in canning such vegetables as corn, artichokes, peas, beans, asparagus and greens.

Baked orange and peach jam is a sure-fire hit. No standing over a hot range to make this delicious oven does the job. Ingredients include two medium oranges, one lemon, one dozen fresh peaches and sugar. Cut unpeeled lemon and oranges in pieces and put through food grinder. Peel and slice peaches. Combine fruit. Measure an equal amount of sugar. Place in shallow pan and bake two hours in a slow oven (300 F.). Stir occasionally. This recipe yields about two pints.

Brilliant Fall Colors Call For Real Skin Beauty

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Canadian Writer

The sultry month of August offers few of the delicate blossoms, but many interesting species of the garden variety, and it is these simple blooms the smart florists like to make up in corsages. Some of them are the combination of the colorful little sinnias—we mean the small button kind—piled up with sprays of babies breath, and any tiny blue or purple blossom. These are smart for the nonegry size. Dahlias in the new fuchsias, purple and ruby shades are most effective with the pastel gown, but for the corsage you must depend upon just now, the gardenia is about the most satisfactory, and therefore the flower of August.

According to the famous couturiers of Paris, we are able to be more color conscious than ever, and those colors they have already brought over are in the rich fuchsias, violets, wood browns, chartreuses, purples, magentas, rich blues and lively greens. They will be in your fashion news, but to remind you, we must tell you in advance they all call for a careful

Brunettes will find most of the shades quite flattering with their dark eyes, but the skin will have to be in a warm tone without the suggestion of a blue sallow that that reflects fatigue.

If you are feeling the strain of the long summer, to get away for a change and rest, and, if possible, for that vacation be have a course of facials with the whole treatment of stimulation and the firming mask to bring the tired muscles back to their fine contours. Take care of your hair so it will make a lovely contrast against these lip dy shades. And if it is not possible for you to go to a good shop, you may secure all the nice cosmetics as well as the lovely silken mask and do your treatment at home.

Wear your tan and freckles until you are about through with your vacation, or else until fall, and then go to work.

An offensive breath is unpardonable. To avoid it, keep the system clean and healthy by eating moderately and drinking

Seeking Gift To Repay a Hostess?

Shops Nowadays Full of Tempting Trifles That Serve Purpose

By ELEANOR ROSE

SHOPPING FOR a gift for that nice hostess who has invited us for several week-ends during bad weather is one choice that should not be postponed. This year the shops are particularly full of tempting trifles, useful as well as ornamental and just right in price.

First of all, we'll concentrate on the small gifts to be chosen by those who are invited once or perhaps twice during the season. If your hostess is keen on gardening, she will probably bless you for a novel gadget that picks and prunes at one and the same time. It holds the cut stem in a clamp at the pruner head so that the pruned branches can be lifted away instead of dropping in the bushes. We have seen expert gardeners go into a "dither" over this one, so it must be good. Also nice for the gardener is a set of colored flower markers, or a big watering can in white with a peasant motif in vivid colors. This one is a big, round fellow with an extra long spout. Garden lamps in black or white set in long poles that stick in the ground wherever needed are grand. These have holders for those giant candles.

If you notice that the house in which you are a guest has door-bell trouble, how about doing the handsome and bringing along one of those door bell chimes? They aren't expensive, and your hostess will bless you. And if mosquitoes are a nuisance when you want to enjoy the porch at night, why not one of those ray lanterns that spell death to insects? These are the sort of things that the house holder talks about buying but never seems to get around to do it.

If She Entertains

If your hostess does a great deal of entertaining, she'll never have sufficient luncheon cloths. A look through your favorite shops will reveal all sorts of pleasant novelties that are not too bizarre to fit into the general scheme of things. And if she serves tomato juice often, she will appreciate those glass servers, colored and shaped just like a ripe fresh tomato. Also a welcome gift to the busy hostess is one of those holders complete with glasses, handsome pitcher and all. And for a lovely table setting, just right for summer, how about a brace of those handsome spun glass butterflies with brown and gold bodies? They come in most delectable colors. A glass vase at the foot of which a pair of love-sons-to-fall nestle, another lovely table ornament.

Novelty soaps are always welcome. There are cheese that contain a full soap wardrobe, including giant bath tablets. These come in various colors and perfumes. Nice, too, are those soap cherries that grow on sprays, the cherries to the spray. Nurse sprays to a package. And a set of friction colognes, toilet water and bath salts or oil is always a welcome gift for the hostess.

Going out at night are smart evening shoes. A nice model is in black antelope in wide band piped with black patent and gold kid-skin. An ankle strap closes in back with a buckle and gold tassel. Heel is ultra high.

Half and half treatmeats in color and materials mark the new autumn gloves. Deep purple and medium violet on glace and suede is used to make a smart glove that closes with a gold metal slide fastener.

Plenty of wear for a nice little frock in Goya red. It

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

Babies Won't Sleep While Standing

A MOTHER who cultivated good eating habits, elimination habits and sleep habits in her infant eleven months of age, finds suddenly that she has a serious sleep problem with him.

"About two weeks ago we went visiting for the day. Hence his morning nap was in my arms in the car. There was no crib in the place where we were and so in the afternoon I laid him on a large stand in the living room floor, took off the bed, so I sat with him. I held him down until after crying he finally was so tired that he gave up and fell asleep.

"From then on we have had a time to get him to fall asleep. I have tried to put him in securely, but he manages to turn on his stomach and wiggle out. Then he stands up in the crib and yells. . . I have tried keeping him up later than usual so he is very tired. . . Sometimes it seems, however, that he cries harder and with a higher pitch the more I pat and sing to him. . .

"Lately he has been wriggling out by himself. . . I have been staying with him, keeping him down by force, and singing to him and jiggling the bed until he gives up. It takes 10 or 15 minutes. I certainly do not wish to have him get used to me with him until he goes to sleep, but I am at a loss as to what else to do. . . Me understands quite a few words, but as yet I am not able to make him mind by staying down in bed."

I told this mother of the pamphlet on sleep that I have written and now she might procure it. Then I gave her a few of the high spots of that pamphlet, about as follows: As you tuck the baby in his bed, say to him, "You must not get up. Go out of the room and stand where you can see him but he cannot see you. The moment he sets to his feet, turn his bottom and give him low on his fat thighs several smacks. Tuck him in again without planing him fast. Take position as before and if he rises again do exactly as before. Continue in like fashion until he chooses to stay down. Say nothing about sleep. If he remains for a few minutes in a horizontal position he will fall asleep. Next time he is put to bed follow exactly the same program. It may take three or four sieges like this before the problem is solved. Once it is solved, what a difference it will make to you and the baby!

"Many children from two to six or even older, acquire the vexatious habit of calling the parent back to the bedside every night or two. This child may keep awake for one or several hours thinking of new ways to force the return of the parent.

Solution: Announce to the child as he prepares for bed that you are not coming back tonight after you leave him. After he has been tucked in bed and all the usual ceremonies have been performed, name them over to the child; ask him if any have been omitted. Pause as you remind him that you are not coming back. Then go and keep your word. I know some parents who are able to follow such advice.

Variations in All-Black Chic

-:-

Here Are Two New Numbers for Wear Now, or Later on With Fur Jackets

VARIATIONS etc c By Frunelle Wood

One can't find too much in a by variations on the "all - black" theme for mildest-son-to-fall enthusiasts, despite the edicts from Paris that black is "out". For true smartness the black chic is worth its weight in anything precious you can name.

Here are two all-black outfits: which one can wear in the late summer with hot weather accessories, and later on with fur scarfs, or bolaros and hats that are distinctly snow - fly importance. Either one is a good choice for any woman, but especially for those who must rise for the morning commuter's train, and look reasonably fresh and dressy when five o'clock and its social heidi-how-dee come around. Both models offer a challenge to a gal's taste in costume "jewelry", which may be anything

Holding Grudge is Fault That Should Be Corrected

By VIRGINIA LEE

Susie's problem isn't one of love, but it is bothering her nevertheless. It involves a man, but a man she wants only for a friend.

To digress a bit from Susie, I always have considered our lives are too short to harbor grudges. We grow angry, have a quarrel and then "stay mad" always has seemed to me to be small and mean. Of course, there are some things that "stick" in one's mind and keep permanently some disagreeable impression whenever one thinks of the person with whom they are connected, but one can "forgive and forget" as far as the human mind is capable of doing same.

When I told a good friend that I considered life too short to hold grudges, he answered, to my surprise, that life is too short to even look disagreeable incidents. I did not argue the matter with him, but I still think I'm right. It was reading the other day in a book about a famous sleep. If he remains for a few minutes in a horizontal position he will fall asleep. Next time he is put to bed follow exactly the same program. It may take three or four sieges like this before the problem is solved. Once it is solved, what a difference it will make to you and the baby!

"Many children from two to six or even older, acquire the vexatious habit of calling the parent back to the bedside every night or two. This child may keep awake for one or several hours thinking of new ways to force the return of the parent.

Solution: Announce to the child as he prepares for bed that you are not coming back tonight after you leave him. After he has been tucked in bed and all the usual ceremonies have been performed, name them over to the child; ask him if any have been omitted. Pause as you remind him that you are not coming back. Then go and keep your word. I know some parents who are able to follow such advice.

Holding Grudge is Fault That Should Be Corrected

By VIRGINIA LEE

Susie's problem isn't one of love, but it is bothering her, nevertheless. It involves a man, but a man she wants only for a friend.

To digress a bit from Susie, I always have considered our lives are too short to harbor grudges. We grow angry, have a quarrel and then "stay mad" always has seemed to me to be small and mean. Of course, there are some things that "stick" in one's mind and keep permanently some disagreeable impression whenever one thinks of the person with whom they are connected, but one can "forgive and forget" as far as the human mind is capable of doing same.

When I told a good friend that I considered life too short to hold grudges, he answered, to my surprise, that life is too short to even look disagreeable incidents. I did not argue the matter with him, but I still think I'm right. It was reading the other day in a book about a famous author, that his temper completely over any untoward happening, and would rush out and punish all the wrong people because he was too impatient to find out first who was to blame. Then he never would admit his mistake. He was too stubborn. No author can ever to let anyone know he thought he had been wrong.

Hard To Live With.

Of course, such persons are unpleasant to live with, they would be in jams all the time, and it would be pretty hard to be their friend.

So, to return to Susie, she had an argument with this man she likes as a friend. She hasn't forgiven him for disagreeing with her, and recently answered a letter with "quite moody", she says, "and if I feel like hating I do, and if not, I don't pretend to say much."

You cannot start any younger, Susie, to correct the habit. It will be a big help all the real of your life. I think it is the most unconvincing appeal to them? Mothers do not give their children up when they are in trouble.

Please, please don't do anything drastic. Then sweetest your parents not standing by you in your trouble, Desperate. You did not go back to your husband for any other reason than because you thought it the best thing to do. Why do you not

Pirates Waver Over Week-end But Hold Ground as Giants Split

Now that the cheering for Messrs. Dimaggio, Gehrig, Dickey and Ruffing has subsided, it's time someone went up to Manager Joe McCarthy of those Yankees, thumped him soundly on the back and hollered: "Nice going Joe."

The Yanks are rolling toward their third straight pennant. But Joseph is a mild man. Sitting in his dugout yesterday before the Yanks whipped St. Louis Browns 4-3 on only four hits—a trick accomplished via two homers for young Tom Hamilton—McCarthy refused to be called a master tactician or inspiring leader.

"Why," said Joe, "it just keeps my pilothouse as free an evenly as possible. Don't let the boys get too cocky and keep everyone happy. These fellows have to play that ball. I just keep them at it."

That's the McCarthy formula. He knows his players can hit, run and field.

Ruffing's 164th

While the Yanks beat Buck Newsom and Ruffing chalked up victory No. 19 the National League clubs continued to back away from the pennant.

Chicago Cubs whipped the Phillies 6-5 in 11 innings aft then beat them again 5-1 in the second game. This put Gabby Harnett's men half a game behind the second place New York Giants and a game and a half closer to the league leading Pirates.

The Pirates wavered through a long hot ball game with Brooklyn Dodgers, losing 5-3 after failing to overcome a six-run lead piled up by the Dodgers in the first five innings. The Pirates now hold a 4½ game lead over the Giants who beat Cincinnati Reds 7-3 with Hal Schumacher bolstering the Giants' staff with a neat six-hit performance.

At St. Louis the Cards split with Boston Bees, winning 5-1 and losing 2-0.

Indians Recover

Cleveland Indians recovered sufficiently from their recent backslide at the hands of the Yankees to shade Washington Senators 6-5. The defeat dropped the Senators into fifth place for Detroit Tigers downed Boston Red Sox 4-3 in 15 innings with Hank Greenberg hitting home No. 43. It was Connie Mack Day in Philadelphia and the Athletics responded by beating Chicago White Sox 5-4 and 9-3.

Highlight of Saturday's games was the six-hit pitching Monte Pearson hurled as New York Yankees defeated Cleveland Indians 13-0. Pearson not only two men to reach base—both on walks. Detroit Tigers defeated Washington 12-11 and St. Louis Browns won 8-3 and 6-5 from Philadelphia. Boston Red Sox shaded Chicago White Sox 19-6 and 1-0 to complete the American League schedule.

In the National League Saturday, Pittsburgh belted the Phillies over 5-1 and St. Louis beat the Giants 12-3. Boston Bees won 14-4 from Cincinnati and the Dodgers whipped the Cubs 4-1.

U. S. FAVOURED FOR DAVIS CUP

Don Budge And Gene Mako Win National Championships

(By Gayle Talbot)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Much of the responsibility for the United States and Australian Davis Cup squads move into Philadelphia today to prepare for the five-match challenge round at the Germantown Cricket Club Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Even the most optimistic viewers-with-alarm are feeling considerably better since Don Budge and Gene Mako, the fancy Uncle Sam doubles combination, made soft pickings of the Australian duo of Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich in the finals of the National Championships at Forest Hills Saturday, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1.

The nature of the victory indicated strongly that Budge and Mako will be able to repeat the dose in their cup match next Sunday and that, of course, means that the United States is a lofty favorite to keep the trophy won at Wimbledon a year ago.

Assuming that, with Budge a virtual cinch to win his two singles matches, the American team probably can scrape through even if Bobby Riggs, its second singles star

SYRACUSE WHIP ORIOLES TWICE, LEAFS SPLIT TWO

Bears Continue to Monopolize 'Int.' Loop, Beating Giants For Four

Syracuse Chiefs weren't much of a factor in what might be laughingly be called the International League pennant race early this season, but not they're moving now.

In fact were the teams to start play again the Chiefs would be granted as good a chance as any to break the Newark monopoly. They have the pitching and they have developed the punch.

Both were on exhibition yesterday as the Syracusans whipped Baltimore Orioles in both ends of a double bill, 6-4 and 3-1. Johnny Gee won his 16th of the season in the nightcap yielding six hits. The game was won when Manager Dick Porter delivered a pinch single that drove in two runs and snapped a tie in the sixth inning.

The Orioles outhit the Chiefs, 8-7, the first game in the opener but Johnny Moore's wildness settled-ed. Baltimore errors and some timely hitting by the Chiefs decided the game.

A triple play in the ninth inning killed the Buffalo Bisons' hopes of overhauling Rochester. Red Wings and the Wings broke the 7th and deciding game of a series, 5-1. Bill Johnson was credited with his 14th win of the season.

Newark swept its four game series with Jersey City Giants by winning 4-2. The little Giants outhit the Bears 12-7 but two walks and three hits scored three runs in the third for the league leaders and the Jersey boys couldn't overcome the lead.

At Montreal Toronto won 1-0 on Joe Sullivan's six-hit pitching but dropped the second game 4-3.

Bill Werber and Bud Thomas, Athletics — Werber's seventh-inning double drove in winning run to beat White Sox 3-4 in opener; Thomas hurled seven-hitter for 9-3 decision in nightcap.

Dick Lavagetto, Dodgers—Hit double, single and drove in three runs in 8-5 victory over Pirates.

Hal Schumacher, Giants—Pitched six-hitter and drove in two runs with a single in 7-3 win over Reds.

Earl Averill, Indians—Clouted two triples, drove in one run and scored two to trounce Senators 6-5.

BRITISH LADY'S GOLF TEAM IS A FORMIDABLE ONE

Players From Old Country Take Crack at Curtis Cup

By Bernard Freeman

Associated Press Sport Writer

Boston, Aug. 29—(AP)—The most formidable British Women's Golf team ever assembled has reached the United States for another crack at the Curtis Cup.

Four players from Scotland, two from Ireland and two from England comprised the team that debarked yesterday.

Though the United States has won two of the three series played and tied the other, it is by no means a short ander to repeat in the matches Sept. 7-8 at the Essex Country Club, in Manchester, Mass., Sept. 7-8.

Three of the reasons are Mrs. J.B. Walker, who won her match at Chevy Chase, Md., four years ago; Miss Carrie Tiernan, the 22-year-old "baby" of the team, who won the New Jersey State title last year, and Mrs. A. M. Holm, the present British champion.

Mrs. Walker, it was learned, recently had a round of 71 on the 6,600-yard Troon course, scene of the British Open this year.

Inasmuch as this is three under men's par, the obvious question was whether she had thrown the ball around the course.

Mrs. Holm is tall, blond and beautiful—so beautiful, in fact, that she looks no more like an athlete than a Hollywood star.

The longest hitter on the team, Mrs. Holm can't compare as far as some men professionals, Mrs. Williamson said. The British champion is certain to play the no. 1 spot, and after that the line-up depends on what happens in the practice rounds.

87 YEAR OLD TENNIS VETERAN 'STILL ALIVE'

Montreal, Aug. 29 (CP)—Only five years after the game made its appearance in the New World, American continent, Dave Gurd, London medical student, was knocking a ball about an English tennis court.

That was 50 years ago. Today Dr. David F. Gurd, Montreal physician and 87 years "young", still is knocking the ball about—"at least three or four times a week."

"I've been at it continuously ever since, but never really as a player," remarks the man who says he never "objected to exercise." "They told me that I should stop playing tennis 2 years ago, but," he adds chuckling, "most of those are dead who told me that."

Belleville Kiwanis Eliminated by Oshawa

In a weird one-sided contest the Belleville Kiwanis Junior baseball team was eliminated from the ranks of Ontario Baseball Association at Oshawa on Saturday when the Motor City juniors advanced to the semi-finals of the O.B.A. playoffs when they trounced Belleville Kiwanis 22 to 1 in a lopsidedly played game at Alexandra Park.

Oshawa won the first game of the series in Belleville on Wednesday by a 7-3 score and the Belleville team on Saturday committed 10 errors in the field which allowed Oshawa batters banged out thirteen hits to score almost at will. Sutton pitched for Oshawa and went to the showers in the fourth frame when Belleville bunched four of their six hits to score five times. Cowie, who relieved him allowed but one hit for the remainder of the uneven contest. Doherty, who started on the mound for Belleville failed to finish the first innings while Kelleher who relieved him was also ineffective.

Third Game to Be Played at Napanee

Harry Rollins, local Ontario Softball Convener, announced today the third and final game in the O.A.S.A. zone final in the Senior A series between Kingston and Belleville, would be played on neutral grounds at Napanee on Tuesday evening.

The Kingston nine defeated the local Belleville team 7-4 at home, while in the return game in Belleville "Tex" Gerow's Belleville Men by a 5-3 count to even the series at two-all.—McNally, relieved Hollingsworth on the Oshawa Men by a 5-3 count to even the series at two-all.—McNally, relieved Hollingsworth on the Oshawa men down in front by an 8 to 6 score, thus creating a round tie.

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Willyum, I think I'll go downtown today and exchange that hat I got at Hookbinders yesterday, I've been looking at it from all angles, and it hasn't a becoming angle.

But I thought I heard you say that none of the h ats in the sale are exchangable, pop said, and ma said, Well yes, that's supose to be an iron clad condition of the sale, in fact I received a special printed notice to that effect.

Well then I'm not sure how the dooce are you going to exchange it? pop said, and ma said, Oh, I'll just be reasonable. It's the unreasonable women that never can get satisfied, she added.

And tonite at supper pop said to me, Well, now about the hat, were you reasonable? and ma said, O yes, the manager of the department was perfectly lovely after I had presented my case for 10 minutes or so, and finally said that I was a tried and true old customer-of-many-years-standing and that the new fangled rule about not exchanging millinery was a recent innovation and therefore merits apply to new customers but it couldn't possibly apply to me. Why, I told him, it's people like me who bill up this store, so he tried new customers who are here today and elsewhere, I said to him, he said.

What did he say to that? pop said, and ma said, He said, Why, my dear madam, our strict instructions are not to exchange hats at once unless it is actually defective, and like a flash I replied, But it's unbecoming, what could be more defective than that from a woman's standpoint? and he had to admit there was no possible answer to that logic, so he kindly wrote me out a credit slip, ma said.

And she started to do the daily

Lord Halifax called Jan Masaryk, Czech Minister, to the foreign office after Sir Neville Henderson arrived there to report.

Magyar's Ask Autonomy

Praha, Aug. 29.—(CP)—The Czechoslovak government, already harassed by the turbulent Sudeten Germans, was given another complication today when the Hungarian minority presented a demand for absolute autonomy.

Representatives of the Magyar nationalists called on Premier Dr. Milan Hodza with their reply to the government proposal of minority administrative reform. Their counter-demand was for complete self-government. If Sir Horace Minister decides to take a less strenuous portfolio. There have been unofficial reports that Penzance Minister Power and State Secretary Rinfret will be appointed to the Senate. Dr. J. J. McCann, Dartmouth (Halifax South) has been suggested as a successor to Mr. Power.

It is problematical whether Mr. Elliott will be able to assume his cabinet position again and Mr. P.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 29—(AP)— The stock market today suffered one of its worst breaks since the start of the mid-year recovery. Leading issues falling 1 to around 5 points.

Selling, rather heavy at the opening, dried up later and mild buying support reduced extreme declines here and there. The pace slowed on the attempted comeback and another wave of offerings hit the market mid-day with sufficient force to put the ticker tape behind. There were numerous issues again in the eight hear the fourth hour.

Brokers blamed the break largely on a revival of European war fears in connection with a threatened German crisis.

Prominent stocks on the losing side were General Motors, U. S. Steel, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Briggs Mfg. U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Standard Gas and Anaconda, Kennecott, International Nickel, American Can, Woolworth house, General Electric, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, Philip Morris, Loew's, U. S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville, Coca-Cola, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Standard Oil of N. J. and Texas Corp.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 29.—(CP)—Stocks recorded their widest declines in five months today on the Toronto Exchange as selling was active and active through the first four hours of trading. Indices dropped three to four points although a mid-recovering tendency developed in the final hour. Well over a million shares changed hands.

The price slump Europe disturbed stock prices from the opening and the selling, coming in a thin buying demand, forced prices sharply lower. Base Metal shares registered the widest set-back. Noranda leading with a decline of five points or more. Nickel, Consolidated and Falconbridge dropped two points or more each. Walle-Aulet weakened about ninety cents to $3.

In the gold group weakness was mainly apparent in the medium price group. McLeod-Cockshutt declined 45 cents and losses of 15 to 30 cents are shown by Dome, O'Brien Hard Rock, Powell-Rouyn, Central Patricia, Moneta, Pamour, Uchi and others.

Steels led the decline in the industrial section with the fall of papers, liquors and utilities following. Senior oils finished lower to minor fractions. Several declines of 1 to 2 points were recorded.

Western issues were off down to a few cents. Calgary-Edmonton dropped 12 and Okalla, Pacific Anglo-Canadian and Royalite were moderately heavy.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 29.—(CP)—Live-weights rose 10 cents at London today and dressed-weights 15 cents, where Ontario hog markets reporting were steady and unchanged.

Liveweights: Chatham $8.75; Hull $8.85; London $8.60.; Peterborough $8.90.

Dressedweights: Barrie $11.50; Belleville $11.75; London $11.75; Kitchener $11.75; Montreal $12.50; Peterborough $11.75; Stratford $11.75; Toronto $11.75; Windsor $11.75.

Fresh Egg Prices Up Due Shortage

Toronto, Aug. 29—Shortage of top grades boosted egg prices still higher during Saturday's short session of the local produce market. Butter also firmed, while cheese remained steady.

With production of first-class eggs at a low point and the fact that better prices are diverting shipments to Montreal, values rose a full cent per dozen on top grades on the egg market. Dealers reported insufficient supplies of these grades to fill sales. On the other hand undergrades were plentiful and demand poor. Ungraded eggs changed hands at 26c for grade A large, 27 for medium, 25 for B large, 27 for medium, 25 for C grades. Graded shipments were really absorbed at 30c for grade A-large, 29c for medium, 22c for B's and 20c to 21c for C grades.

Enough trading appeared on the butter market to keep current quotations clear. Offerings of the West-ern make were thin. It is understood that the West is continuing buying arrangements for more export business, and that in fact is apparently keeping some supplies back. Ontario creamery solids sold at 25½c for No. 1 grades, 25 for 2's, 24½ for 3's, 24c for 4's and 23½c for 5's. Prints traded at 26c for top grades, 25½c for 2's, 25c for 3's, 24½ for 4's and 24c to 24 3-4c for 3's.

Trading was active on the cheese market, and quotations were quoted nominally unchanged. Most

Montreal Grain Firm

Montreal, Aug. 29 (CP)—Open produce markets continued to display a firmer tone this week, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture report. While egg receipts were good, the percentage of top grades was small. Prices for these items advanced 1c to 1½c, while the B and C grades dipped 1-2c. Butter prices eased off early in the week but rallied, to close practically unchanged. Demand for cheese held up well, and small improvements in prices were reported. ## The DOCTOR" By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

It was about that time that he began to take a drink at night in order to get to sleep. He had brought a bottle of Scotch with him and after having a shave for myself I would get up, pour some into a glass, add a little plain water, and drink it. It would send a comfortable glow over him, then after a time it would act as a deep sedative. The blood would go out of his head; he would stop thinking and sleep.

When that bottle was exhausted, he got another from the village bootlegger. It was pure moon. He held it in his hand and looked at it, remembering the days of his city practice. Days when he who was seeking release and forgetfulness.

With the coming of morning he would hear Noel's whistle. It was a whistle Cook had taught him. "All policemen have flat feet" were the unsung words behind it, and Noel was bursting with it. He whistled back and got carefully out of bed. That was the life, the life he had chosen. Don't think. Don't remember. Don't even hope. Live this day as it comes every day.

CHAPTER XLIX

Chris was not entirely cut off from the past, of course. Now and then there was a letter from Ted. The grafts had taken, he said, and everybody else was away. "You're not missing anything."

One day Ted wrote that he had joined a private clinic. "All the works," he said. "Our motto is, 'If one of us can't scrub, you scrub, will.'" They had taken a large suite of rooms in the better medical building, but there was still a vacant room or two, and when Chris could, back . . .

There were letters from Katie too. Chester letters from here and there, for she was making the usual summer circuit.

"I haven't written for a while. There is so much going on. Everybody seems to be very prosperous these days, which reminds me that I'll need a little money. Darling, the lips at these places are devastating. And on the side me know how your son is. Everybody says so. I don't know what to say."

He sent the money, writing his checks with his left hand and swearing furiously over his clumsiness; but letters were too much for him. Now and then he sent her a slight sketch, usually of a face or telephone. But she did not reply.

Nevertheless he improved during those first few weeks. There was no visible change in his arm. He still went to Flint or, when forced at it, the sling which supported it. But he took a long walk every day at night to enable him to sleep, and his walk became sturdier; there was more energy in it. He could report to the forward thrust of his shoulders. And he was using his right hand with greater efficiency. He had learned to fill his pipe and to light it with one hand, and to strum with great care to fasten his shoes. One day he took a long step going out into Letitia's garden, viciously attacked the weeds there. Some of them were tough. He knew that assault of his: he sweated perhaps, but when it was over he beat down on him mercilessly. But at the end he felt better, as if at one more he had attacked and beaten something, and that night he slept without the drug, realizing that it was a daily chore, and sometimes helped him.

"You don't dig them out. You kill them!"

That's because I have a buried desire to murder any number of people."

Noel looked puzzled, but Chris was reading psychiatry now, puzzling over the problem of whether a man and his life were the result of forces he could not control, or he himself determined it. He had thought always of the human body. Now he began to wonder if there was something else, and if so, what it was. Religion called it God, philosophy calls it the absolute, biology calls it life, psychology calls it mind."

"Do you believe in God, Noel?"

"Sure. Don't you?"

As simple as that is Noel, how-ing wildly, his fair hair moist and his face red with effort. As simple as that. You got into trouble and asked God to help you; and He sent down rain. Or you were white throne and did so.

It was some time before the boy mentioned Chris's hand, and then he did so delicately.

"I don't suppose Mrs. Miller is much good with that bandage."

"She's awful," said Chris with an eye on the house.

"If you like, I could come over and help in the mornings. I'd like to. I'm going to be a doctor some day."

"Then come along."

And so it was fixed. After that it came out in the open between them.

"How is it today?"

"Just the same."

"Funny, isn't it? It looks all right."

"It's asleep. You look the same when you're asleep, don't you?"

He could talk to the boy about his arm. Nerves, tissues were no connotations of tragedy.

"I suppose it will get well sometime."

"Maybe. Maybe not. The thing to do is to be a sport about it, old chap."

He was not much of a talker, young Noel Crain with Hiram made him laconic. But on one subject he was never inquisitive enough. This was the study of medicine, and Chris, delving deep into his memories, found that one of his early days at medical college, at Noel's interest in the human body. own. There was a certain release in it: the boy perhaps gravely interested in the type and fitness looked. he thought. A trifle pathetic, too, in his adolescence. There was a place for her somewhere, but something to give: her vitality, her activity, were cheerful inconsequence. But she was not ready for that now.

"You must be tired," he said. "Run along. Tomorrow. Now you'd better get to bed."

She agreed. The cheerfulness with which she left him, and the alacrity with which she went to bed, was silent as he led the way up the stairs.

"I'm in here," he told her and showed her that room of David's which Hiram had given him. "You can sleep here or—there are other rooms. I'm afraid they're not ready for visitors."

But she elected a room of her own. It was at the end of a certain relief.

"I'll only keep sash other awake," she said practically. "And I'd like to sleep in the morning. Do you mind, Mrs. Ford? Dad's nose I can have my breakfast in bed?"

"I dare say Mrs. Miller can manage. It will be a novelty to her, I imagine!"

It took two heavy slugs of Scotch to enable him to sleep that night, and the next morning he saw, as he had suspected, that a woman was needed. He would have to watch himself, he thought. It was too easy, that escape of his.

CHAPTER L

Katie stayed for a week. Chris, watching her closely, felt that she had intended to stay longer. She had been restless, but after the first few days she settled down, and the indomitable, young figure, would feel himself strangely comforted. Why had he ever left her like this? Why indeed hadn't he married her?

Young Noel would leave him settled somewhere along the stream and then wander off, and Chris would cast with his left hand, playing the fish as he sat on the grass; but sometimes he was unable to land the fish he played, and Noel would find him sitting quietly on the bank, a small dead trout beside him. Chris's line would be turned toward him, would be reeled in slowly.

"Couldn't make the grade, son."

"Sorry. Have you been waiting long?"

"Only a minute or two"

But Noel never said the fish very dead indeed, and know that Chris had been sitting there, silent and alone, for a long time.

It came as a blow when the summer was over and the boy had to go back to school. Chris, seeing him young and forlorn on the station platform, felt a sharp contraction of the heart. He wanted almost fiercely to catch him to him to hold him close for one minute. Instead he shook hands gravely, saying the right thing which and his own self-control.

"Good-by, old pal," he said. "It won't be long until you're back again. Then we'll have some right old times."

"Three months," said Noel in a flat voice. "And maybe you won't be here then."

"I'll be here, don't you worry."

Amy was frankly crying as the train moved out, and Hiram was trying to comfort her. Surely the boy had love enough—if Ursula could look down from some high-up only mountain top and see him. But in the hard light of the autumn day Chris saw that both of them looked old—old and tired. Whatever they were to be, they would not live to see it, and they knew it. He felt a wave of pity for them. This was the ground life had come to them too late. When they got into Hiram's rattling car, Chris put his arm around Amy.

"That's fine for you, dear. You and Hiram have done a good job."

"And some day," said Amy bravely, "we'll be seeing on, Chris, and he will be left behind."

Chris missed Noel even more than he had expected. The days were growing shorter now, and one night there was a frost and Letitia's flowers were all burned brown and drooped on their saplings. The evenings became indescribably long, and Chris, lighting his fire in David's study after dinner, had good, would read as long as he could and then sit for long hours staring into his fire, and then he would rub his arm, working gently. There was still little atrophy, but the hand still hung, without its splint, a useless and heavy thing. He would put every ounce in him into the will to move his fingers, but they gave him no response. And he was going just that late one night when he heard a car outside and the clicking of high heels on the porch. It was Katie.

She came in, her eyes bright and the frosty air, blithe and cheerful. "Well!" she said. "Of all the places to find! I've been all over the country. And what a when you're asleep, don't you?"

He stood there, staring down at her. To him she was bringing to welcome her "You look—as if you've had a good summer."

"I have. I'll tell you about it. Can you bring in my bags, Chris? Or is there somebody here to do it?"

"I'm alone, as it happens, but I can manage. Chris was limping.

He went out into the dark, glad that his back was turned to Katie. When he came back Katie had made a quick survey of her surroundings and was now looking at him in the hall.

She was incongruous but attractive figure standing there in her smart clothes, her high-heeled pumps. Amazing that she could have looked. he thought. A trifle pathetic, too, in her adolescence. There was a place for her somewhere, but something to give: her vitality, her activity, were cheerful inconsequence. But she was not ready for that now.

"You must be tired," he said. "Run along. Tomorrow. Now you'd better get to bed."

She agreed. The cheerfulness with which she left him, and the alacrity with which she went to bed, was silent as he led the way up the stairs.

"I'm in here," he told her and showed her that room of David's which Hiram had given him. "You can sleep here or—there are other rooms. I'm afraid they're not ready for visitors."

But she elected a room of her own. It was at the end of a certain relief.

"I'll only keep sash other awake," she said practically. "And I'd like to sleep in the morning. Do you mind, Mrs. Ford? Dad's nose I can have my breakfast in bed?"

"I dare say Mrs. Miller can manage. It will be a novelty to her, I imagine!"

It took two heavy slugs of Scotch to enable him to sleep that night, and the next morning he saw, as he had suspected, that a woman was needed. He would have to watch himself, he thought. It was too easy, that escape of his.

CHAPTER L

Katie stayed for a week. Chris, watching her closely, felt that she had intended to stay longer. She had been restless, but after the first few days she settled down, and the indomitable, young figure, would feel himself strangely comforted. Why had he ever left her like this? Why indeed hadn't he married her?

Young Noel would leave him settled somewhere along the stream and then wander off, and Chris would cast with his left hand, playing the fish as he sat on the grass; but sometimes he was unable to land the fish he played, and Noel would find him sitting quietly on the bank, a small dead trout beside him. Chris's line would be turned toward him, would be reeled in slowly.

"Couldn't make the grade, son."

"Sorry. Have you been waiting long?"

"Only a minute or two"

But Noel never said the fish very dead indeed, and know that Chris had been sitting there, silent and alone, for a long time.

It came as a blow when the summer was over and the boy had to go back to school. Chris, seeing him young and forlorn on the station platform, felt a sharp contraction of the heart. ## Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation

OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach troubles. That's the time to get right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up fat, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why you may not only have your life the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vano Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water stops through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vano Salts originate. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified, and you have sure stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of bad matter, constipation matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, made ready to flush out of your body. Takes do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vano Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your druggist now. Don't delay. Be wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight!

pavements and people, Chris. And you don't really want me here, do you?"

"I want you if you want to stay."

Why the Weather?

The greatest temperature anomaly in the west coast of Norway averages 40 degrees warmer than ordinary for the world at that latitude. Open sea around northern Norway and the Russian coast is never frozen, which is in striking contrast with the seas north of America. The warmth in western and northwestern Europe is due to the prodigious amount of warmed water borne there by the Gulf Stream. The cause of this great amount of water coming north is that Gulf of Mexico, the most eastern point of Brazil, spends into the Atlantic south of the equator; this cape turns not only the north Atlantic equatorial current but also some of the south Atlantic north to Europe's advantage.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—The weather has been mostly fair and warm in the Western Provinces with showers in many districts from Manitoba Eastward. Manitoba—Partly cloudy today and Wednesday with showers or scattered showers; a little cooler on Wednesday.

TAVERN BRAWLS FORCE POLICE TO KEEP ALERT WATCH

Recurrence Could be Magnified to Serious Proportions

CZECH CABINET MEETS

Praha, Aug. 30.—(AP)—While the British mediation considered grave decisions affecting peace, the Czechoslovak cabinet settled down to the business of keeping the republic, which is treated as a domestic affair.

This capital took the attitude that the broad international aspects of the crisis were beyond its scope but that its contribution to ending it was that of the diplomats, which disturbs Europe was a speedy adjustment of the minorities issue.

Meanwhile officials ordered police in Sudeten German areas to keep an alert, watchful eye against a recurrence of brawls that could be magnified to serious proportions. Nothing of serious character had occurred yet, officials said, but there was a dozen tavern brawls in as many communities last night.

Meet at Palace

The Czechoslovak ministers met at Kolovrat palace to discuss their new plan to end the demand of 2,500,000 Sudeten Germans for territorial autonomy.

The Foreign Office said the plan had not yet been submitted in its entirety to the Nazi-supported Sudeten German party but that Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten German party leader, knew its broad features.

The Sudeten Germans justified their delay in making known their attitude toward government negotiations with the comment they could not say yes or no to proposals unknown to them.

Bill H was known that Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator in the Sudeten crisis, helped, he would get some hint from Henlein today or tomorrow as to whether the general trend of the reforms being considered by the British might be acceptable.

FRANCE EXTENDS HOURS OF LABOR UPON DEFENCES

"Public Safety" Demands Application of Measures

TENSION OF CRISIS

French Troops May be Kept in Field as Long as Germany's

Paris, Aug. 30—(AP)—While motorized units of the French army began manoeuvres close to the German border, the cabinet today formally ratified a decree increasing the hours of labor in national defence industries.

Acting in the midst of the most severe European strain in 20 years, the ministers labelled the decree urgent and made it applicable immediately.

The measure was signed by President Lebrun and every member of Premier Edouard Daladier's cabinet as a symbol of the unity of France's determination to carry out her treaty obligations to Czechoslovakia if necessary.

Power to Mobilize Industry

The decree gave the government virtual power to mobilize French industry for war.

It immediately lengthened working hours in National defence factories, in public services and in plants working for "public safety" and at the same time it gave the government the power to abandon the 40-hour week in every industry in France if necessary.

The application of the measures to "public safety" industries and the public services came as a surprise as did its stipulations for application, if deemed necessary, to all the nation's industries.

Passage of the decree came during a 2 1-2 hour cabinet meeting in which Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet told the Ministers of the latest developments in the European

Ossification of Man's Eyes Due to Over-Activity Para-Thyroid Gland

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 30—(AP)—A man whose eyes are turning to stone was examined in a clinical session at the western assembly of the College of Syntonic optometry here today.

Dr. Ethnell Simpson of Pasadena said only 71 cases of ossification have been recorded in medical history and this patient is the only one known to have been afflicted in the eyes.

Dr. Simpson said the ailment is due to over-activity of the para-thyroid gland, causing transfer of calcium from the bones to soft tissues of the body.

"Mr. ——" he said, has been a victim of the disease since 1923. Complete ossification may take 10 to 15 years. Only known cure is reported to be surgical removal of the para-thyroid gland.

Says Foolish Age Begins in Fifties Another Judge Says in Forties

Detroit, Aug. 30—(CP)—Take the word of Circuit Judge Robert M. Toms for it, if you're 50 years old, you're foolish when in time years to wear bright neckties and wink at becoming blonde, you're a victim of the foolish fifties, a "fairly prevalent complaint."

There is something about the turn of the half-century that does it. Judge Toms, who in time years on the bench has handled approximately 7,000 divorce cases, says:

"Men of that age are likely to realize they're getting on and that there is only a few years left to have fun and loud ties, playing golf intensely, dancing as though their lives depended on it and going out with girls half their age.

That's why we have a good many divorces when men of that age become involved with young women.

"Most of them don't do it by the fault of the wife, who, as she grows older, lets herself be seen in the terrible things she wears in the morning and otherwise ceases to be attractive."

Circuit Judge James Chenot disagrees, however, that it's the fifties. He says the "dangerous age" is the

REGISTRATION AT OFFICE INCREASES

Twenty-five per cent. increase in unemployed registrations over a year ago was disclosed today by officials of the Employment Office. Six hundred at present are registered with approximately two-thirds of these being males.

Lack of harvest employment, decision of local and district canning factories to remain idle this season, are given as the main reason for the increase, by officials here.

Applications for tomato-pickers in the fields, and women for peeling tomatoes in factories have been practically nil during the past week, although calls for women pickers are expected within a fortnight when the peak of the tomato crop is expected to be here.

WORMS ATTACKING FRUIT OF PLANTS

Tomato worms that have been ravaging the fields of farmers in the district, destroying and consuming vines and leaves for the past month, are now attacking their exclusive attention to the vegetable itself, growers in the northern part of Prince Edward County stated today.

In some fields, the pests are making great inroads in ripening crops, while farmers are making a futile attempt to halt the advance of the worms, that appear to be increasing instead of diminishing.

212 Kinds of Snakes in Canada None Poisonous Enough to Kill

Only Canadian Member of Snake Society Visits City

ONE OF 78 MEMBERS

Canada harbors an estimated total of two hundred and twelve species of snakes. But Canadians can take the assurance that of this variety none is poisonous enough to kill a human.

This assurance is given by Colonel J. Brown, sole Canadian member of the Snake Society, whose president is Dr. Deadman of the New York Zoological Gardens and at present one of the most interesting personalities in Belleville, here for the purpose of visiting the Belleville Club.

This man of seventy-four summers, dressed in Texan garb, and a fine personification of the legendary "Kentucky Colonel" whose Buffalo Bill moustache goes are pure snow white as his flowing mane of hair, has one burning hobby, that of snakes and snake culture. A hobby which has been his ambition through life. His familiarity with reptiles has given him continental recognition.

Born in Hamilton, Ontario, Colonel Brown served with the 1st Canadian Contingent in the South African war. Following the war he served for three and one half years with the world famous Cape Mounted police in South Africa where he was able to study the manners and habits of the Kaffirs. Later, after further world wanderings, he became attached to the famed Brownsville rattlesnake farm in Texas, in which concern he has now become a partner.

Colonel Brown has found time to make a living with his hobby. In 1910 he went on tour with a Regal Golden python, one of the largest in the world, with a length of 32½ feet and with a weight of 400 pounds.

He is one of a total of seventy-eight members of the Snake Society founded fifteen years ago, which has only the one purpose of increasing the general knowledge of snakes. All members are absolutely devoted to this study of reptiles.

The North American Life Assurance Co., announces that Mr. Cooper, District Manager at Belleville has again won distinction by qualifying for the company's leaders' production club. Mr. Cooper has been an outstanding salesman for years and has the honour of being one of the most consistent members of the whole company. His achievements merit the highest praise.

Home-grown tomatoes dropped sharply to a new low today at the city market where vendors offered their product at thirty-five cents per bushel. Sweet corn at ten cents per dozen and three dozen for twenty-five cents featured an offering that was smaller than the usual Tuesday display.

A veritable sea of canteloupes in all sizes, shapes and quality descended on an unsuspecting buying public today. Truck-loads and car-loads arrived during the early hours, and at ten o'clock the sweet delicacy practically stole the market thunder from other farm and garden produce.

Thrilling Acts Embodied in Garden's Circus at the Fair

Superb Specialties Will be Enacted Here For First Time

A REAL TREAT

Just call us home folks, anxious to give Belleville fairgoers the best entertainment possible.

This is the combined statement of "Hill" and "Bob" Garden, so familiarly known wherever shows and show folk gather, managers and owners of the Garden Brothers' Circus, which moved into the Fair Grounds yesterday completed with all its varied effects, ready to give Belleville, young and old the thrill of thrills during the next four days of the city's annual Fall exhibition.

For, though Belleville may be smaller in size than other cities in which this well known circus has played return engagements, its appearance here has not been weakened by any diversion of efforts or acts as used in the largest centres. It will be as complete as if it were being shown in New York or Chicago or Toronto.

The success of the Garden Brothers, William A. Garden and Robertson B. Garden, has been no overnight achievement. For years they have conducted the Canadian Vaudeville Exchange, supplying talent and entertainment to theatres, fairs, indoor and outdoor celebrations. They have in the past provided everything from a crooner or a sea canoe for a social gathering to impressive pageants and spectacles for the largest outdoor gatherings.

Attends Talent Side

William Garden attends to the talent side of the work, and his brother is the business executive. Bill Garden has always been in the show business. He and his wife trouped on the vaudeville stage as Garden and Shaw, in dancing specialties, for a time into the work before the war, and when he was overseas he was on entertainment committee in his spare time arranging programs for the boys.

He worked for a long time with Amos and Andy of radio fame, when they were ragging Freeman Gosden and Charles O'Neil of the former Joe Bren Producing Company. Together they staged and produced shows and revues all over Canada and the United States. After he quit vaudeville, Bill Garden went into the show business with his brother and they still do an active business in that line.

Bob Garden has had a career which has been varied and varied. An architect by profession, he was formerly with Walker and Weeks of Cleveland, Ohio, for many years. He returned to his home in Toronto, and joined his brother in business. At the outbreak of war he joined with the 15th Battalion and was wounded four times during his service in France. He was gassed three times, suffered the experience of being buried twice by bursting shells.

Good For Any Community

One reason they are proud of their new status as outdoor showmen is their belief that a circus is good for any community. They believe that Belleville will benefit through their appearance here by bringing more money than any other form of entertainment. A circus they say, is always a drawing card for any community.

They believe, too, that there is nothing like a circus to banish trouble or care, or to bring back the contagious laugh. They like their work as heads of Garden Brothers' Circus and they are proud of it.

Through it all they remain Canadians, entitled to rank among the best of their craft, but still at heart "just home folks, anxious to please."

Wish to Reserve Comment

Of the circus, itself, the Brothers wish to reserve their glowing comment for a day or two until Belleville and district visitors have had a chance to see for themselves the thrilling acts, many of which are superb specialties, enacted here for the first time.

They wish to acquaint citizens with The Hammonds, The Leonards, the 3 McCune Brothers, the greatest single array of pantomimic athletes, combining the ultimate in buffoonery with thrilling gymnastic feats. They want visitors to view the Military Ponies, whose perfect precision matches, that of well trained humans; the Lavenia Sisters in daring aerial gymnastics and the famous Parade of the Clowns. It will be in Display No. 7, that the superbly trained animal acts will be presented by Trainer William Schultz, with his Premier Milk Chocolate as assistant, and Harry Beagles with his highly trained troupe of performing seals, dogs, monkeys and bear. The whirlwind skating sensation of the season will be presented by Revell and Jeanette.

An Unusual Act

Calmed to be one of the most unusual acts in the world of animal acts, Lindy The Elephant with two ponies and two dogs will bring smiles and chuckles to the faces of the hundreds of young and old. But other acts will follow. There will be acrobats and athletes, Victoria and Frank; the Manos Brothers in an act which defies the laws of gravity, the Merrill Brothers and Sister in an astonishing exhibition of equilibristic feats; Don Alvarez other acts.

"You'll have to see them; they just can't be explained," invite the Brothers Garden

YOUNG LADY BUYS FIRST FAIR TICKET

First to Pass Gates of Fair, She Refuses to Divulge Name

The advance guard of what is expected to be a record crowd descended on the Agricultural Grounds shortly after [illegible] today as a group of children [illegible] with lunch-pails awe[illegible] with anticipation of the glorious hours ahead, surged through the main entrance and scattered, a laughing care-free crowd to the many sights of wonderment that awaited them.

Parents in most cases accompanied their excited offspring to get a first-hand view of the many thrills that await the residents of this city and district. But they were content to remain long with their joyous sons and daughters. For in spite of threatening clouds and a somewhat sullen atmosphere, the children rushed to the many places of entertainment and in spite of the fact that little activity in the things dear to the heart of the youngsters was noticed the children surged around the dark pens in the grandstand, and the silent rides and wheels that tide-tiers will echo to the laughter of the happy kids.

First of Ticket Buyers

An attractive young lady who had waited for some time outside the main entrance, blushingly refused to divulge her identity after she had purchased the first ticket of admission of the 1938 edition of Belleville's Fair. "I don't want my name in the paper," she smilingly told a reporter.

Fine weather conditions prevailed a large crowd from attending the opening at nine o'clock today, as aides cleared and sunshine threatened to break through sullen overcast skies. The number of children increased as the hours drew on. By twelve o'clock a surging group of grownups and kiddies were noted passing through the gates. At noon little family groups were seen in various parts of the grounds, while excited children milled around the Midway attractions, ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds and other novelties of the Fair, impatient for the day's festivities to start.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The stock market was less war-conscious today and the tumbling leaders of Monday came back on their feet for fractions to two points.

The recovery was accomplished on a relatively small volume, however, transfers being at the rate of only about 700,000 shares.

Light selling crept into the list from time to time and top marks were lowered, but prices once more inflicted near six-final hour.

Steels, Motors, Rubbers and Specialities were accorded support.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 30—(CP)— The stock market steadied today, following Monday's sharp sell-off and at the close the base metal and the western oil shares were up a little and the gold and industrial groups were only slightly lower. Losses in these groups were pared as the market finished the day with a firming tend. Volume was down all around and a little better than 600,000 shares changed hands in the session.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—Bacon hog prices moved higher at the majority of markets today, gains of 10 to 35 cents were posted at Brantford, Hull, Kitchener, Peterborough and Stratford.

Liveweights: Brantford $9.10; Chatham $8.75; Hull $8.15; Peterborough $9.

Dressedweights: Chatham $12; Hull $13.85; Kitchener $11.90; Peterborough $11.90; Stratford $11.95.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford
By Financial Service

Yesterday's sharp setback on all markets was entirely due to the "war scare" from Europe, newspaper headlines causing considerable nervousness in many quarters. Hurried liquidation was perceptible throughout the board and the matter of values was entirely disregarded. During the next few days, attention of investors will be focussed on Europe.

In all probability, the present "war scare" will also pass as have the many in the past year or so. The public, however, becomes easily frightened, many times unnecessarily, as the scrappers feature the "war" news.

Under ordinary circumstances, the announcement that pro-ration had been increased in the Turner Valley to 50 per cent. would have brought in demand for such shares as Royalite Oil. Instead the security sold off yesterday morning in the general decline. It is heartening to point out that the steady increase in pro-ration in the Turner Valley has been brought about by higher demand for oil, which has no doubt come in from the Western farmers for their tractors and other machinery being used in harvesting the crop.

Cheese Firmer and Butter Steady

Toronto, Aug. 30—Prevailing scarcity of supplies lifted top quality graded eggs another cent per dozen on the local produce markets yesterday. Cheese was also a shade firmer, with butter steady.

With Montreal an active buyer of top grade eggs at the same time that production of these grades is at a low point, dealers here found it difficult to fill sales. As a result prices in the graded section of the egg market still higher, while other sections were strong at former values. No change was reported in undergrades. Graded shipments sold at 31c for grade A-large, 30c for medium, 25c for B-A and 20c to 21c for C grades. Retail business is maintaining a satisfactory level.

Current receipts continued light on the butter market, and, although demand was inclined to be quiet, there was sufficient trading to keep supplies clear at the unchanged prices. Offerings from the West were small with sales recored at 24¾c. Ontario solids traded at 23½c for No. 1 grades, 23¾c for 38 score and 22c for 37 score. Prints moved at 25c to 26½c for top grades and 24 1-4c to 24 3-4c for 35 score.

Slightly improved prices established on the Ontario cheese boards over the week-end caused quotations to strengthen on the wholesale market. New, large parafined was offered at 14½c to 14 1-4c, twins at 14¾c to 14½c and triplets at 14¾c to 14 3-4c.

PRODUCE PRICES FIRM AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Aug. 30 (CP)— Open produce market prices opened the week on the firm side, according to Dominion Department of Agriculture reports Monday. Offerings of high-grade eggs continued scarce and competitive bidding abut prices for "A" firsts up 1½c to 2c. Creamery butter prices improved slightly, while the wholesale price to jobbers 1-4c. Ontario cheese was a shade firmer.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 24½c to 25c and solids for 24c to 24½c. Quebec No. 1 creamery sold to jobbers was 23¾c. Receipts: 458 boxes.

Cheese was offered at 14 1-4c to 14½c a pound for Ontario white, 14¾c to 14½c for Ontario colored and 14½c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 131 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 29½c to 30c a dozen for A-large, 31c in 31½c for A-medium, 25c to 24½c for B and 20½c to 21c for C. Receipts: 279 cases.

UNOFFICIAL NEWS

British And France Confer

Informal personal talks France and Britain were in close consultation and that Charles Corbin, French Ambassador to London, would arrive tonight from Paris for a conference with Premier Daladier, Foreign Minister Bonnet and Foreign Secretary.

It was believed he would bring a report of decisions of the French cabinet, also in session today.

The British Ministers were understood to have considered whether to call Parliament for action on question to Chancellor Hitler before the Czechoslovakian minorities problem, with its threat of a European war, comes to a decision.

Commission Issued

At the end of the meeting, an official communique was issued declaring in part:—

"The French Secretary made a full report of the international situation and at the conclusion of the meeting the ministers expressed their entire agreement with the action already taken and the steps to be pursued in future. No further meeting was arranged but the ministers will be remained open in read of London."

Note to Hitler

Reports still persisted Prime Minister Chamberlain will write a semi-personal note to Chancellor Hitler of Germany who has become the key man of the situation, the only man who can make decisions on behalf of the autonomy-seeking Sudeten German minority of Czechoslovakia. There was no official confirmation of this report.

Mr. Chamberlain will leave for Balmoral, Scotland, tonight to make a full report to the King.

It was stated officially full reports on the international situation and crisis have been sent to Ottawa and that the Canadian Government was being kept closely in touch of the rapidly changing picture.

Eighteen of the 21 ministers attended the session. Those not present were Lord Hailsham, Lord President of the Council; Lord Stanley, Dominions Secretary who is in Canada; Sir E. L. Burgin, Transport Minister, and the Marquess of Zetland, Secretary of State for India.

Must Refer to Hitler Alone

It was soon and was becoming realized in London that everything must be referred to Hitler direct when appeals are made to remove outside pressure and permit the Sudeten German problem to be settled.

The latest proposals of the Czechoslovak government to meet the Sudeten German demands have not been made public so far and there is even some doubt if Hitler knows the terms.

There was no indication of when Sir Neville Henderson is returning to Berlin but perhaps it will not be until the weekend. He will have then received instructions drawn up at today's meeting and reviewed by the king.

Possible Basis for Solution

Lord Halifax gave his colleagues an outline of new proposals which the Czechoslovak government is ready to present to the Sudeten Germans as a possible basis for solution of their quarrel. Authoritative British sources said the proposals were "reasonable."

From the Belfast came support for what Britain has sought to impress on Germany—that I can not

1938 EXHIBITION

"Times have improved considerably," he said, "since Confederation days. We have been favoured this year with the best all round crops in a many years, and maybe the end of the dry cycle has arrived as here as well as for those in Western Canada.

Quality For Export

"I would just like to stress the point of quality production in agriculture. Quality is what export Belleville and district made an excellent name for themselves in quality of cheese, and it would be very great advantage to lose our reputation by neglect and carelessness, Mr. Dewan's department could not do all a better service than to be very strict about quality in everything we produce, cheese, butter, canned goods and exportables fruits. The British want a lot of the best in the world, and the most particular. If our goods meet their standards and requirements, it will mean increasing prosperity on the farm and for us all.

City Population

"Our urban population however, is not so fortunate. Governments have done a great deal to improve the lot of the farmer, but nothing much has been done to make conditions better for the city dweller. The building and allied trades have been driven out of the country by neglect and oppressive taxation and scarcely a finger has been raised to remedy this very great evil. I sincerely hope however, that our governments will become fully alive to this situation before the exodus of population, now going on, becomes a rout.

"I heartily congratulate the Belleville Agricultural Society in the efforts they have made, to make this Fair interesting and successful, and I trust the results will be mutually beneficial to both the rural and urban dwellers of this very beautiful and productive Bay of Quinte district."

LOFTY TOWER

struck the city Hall where slight damage was done.

No damage in the city was reported with the exception of loss of sleep on the part of more or less timid citizens. Lights flashed on in residences in all parts of the city as detonation after detonation prevailed by the jagged lightning flashes, crashed about the ears of the sleeping populace.

Tense Silence

A tense silence, in which, as one citizen puts it "you could hear a pin drop on the ground if you flung it out of a window" there was not a breath of wind, was apparent for the space of a few minutes. Then a dripping rain poured down, as the storm centre passed on.

Belated messages enroute to the city report the highways were illuminated with the bluish white light, in places seemed to run along the wet pavement. One lady driver, thoroughly frightened, unashamedly admitted to pulling her car to the side of the road and covering her head with a rug. Grain fields, woods, and buildings assumed an eerie light as the intermittent flashes illuminated the countryside. Cattle were huddled beneath trees in fence-corners.

A group of frightened horses, near Bloomfield, were noted galloping around the pasture field in various stages of fright.

City telephone systems were unaffected, officials of the Bell Telephone Company stated today. Hydro in the district suffered "a slight damage", it was reported.

LABOR COUNCIL ISSUES CHALLENGE

Asks Clear Declaration on Czechoslovakian

London, Aug. 30 (CP)—A renewed challenge to the Chamberlain Government to test its foreign policy by calling a Dominion election is contained in the annual report of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress which will be presented at the 70th annual meeting September 5th, at Blackpool.

The original challenge was made soon after Anthony Eden's resignation from the Foreign Office and is repeated in the General Council's report.

The Government is accused in the report of deserting the League of Nations, abandoning principles hitherto inspiring foreign policies, negotiating with Italy "under conditions which involve betrayal of the friendship and confidence of the democratic nations," sacrificing the Spanish people in their struggle to preserve freedom and independence and capitulating to Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

"We need a clear declaration," it continues, "that Britain stands for the enforcement of treaties against lawless free and against aggressive interference in the internal affairs of independent states.

Czechoslovakia in particular should be assured at once that Great Britain and the other League powers will fulfil their obligations to maintain her integrity and independence.

"It is this policy that still lies the only real hope of averting a general European war.

YOUNG OFFENDERS CHIEF PROBLEM

Boston Police Commissioner Would Trace Causes to Parents

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—Juvenile delinquency has been termed the most important problem confronting police in North America, as nearly 1 600 police officers from many parts of North America compared notes here today at the International Police Congress.

Policemen heard lecturers discuss the many-sided attack made on the problem of youthful criminals, but Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, Boston, told delegates the juvenile crime was increasing due to economic conditions.

Parental Supervision

"I believe parents should be impressed that lack of supervision, particularly during the adolescent period, is generally the cause of delinquency," Mr. Timilty declared. "You will find, unfortunately, in a large measure, the causes of delinquency may be traced to the parents."

Divorces the wrong movies, and books did not be factors in misdirecting the pent-up energy in every child, Mr. Timilty said.

Charles A. Wheeler, Police Superintendent of Bridgeport, Conn., said "no one has yet hardly scratched the surface of the greatest of all police problems, juvenile delinquency."

Organizations to Help Young

Mr. Wheeler mentioned police efforts had been directed through the formation of the Big Brother movement in San Francisco and Washington, D.C., while police had formed a boy scout troops in Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Supt. Wheeler, who termed John Edgar Hoover most courageous and devastating police officer of all time, quoted the head of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation as urging parents to have their sons join boys' groups as the first step in avoiding juvenile delinquency.

HITLER LOOKS AT FORTIFICATIONS

Still the tension goes on in Europe. The latest piece of news of importance was the presence on Sunday and Monday of Chancellor Hitler on the "western front" opposite the Netherlands and France. In the latter visit he was opposite Strasbourg where French troops have been arriving for war "games". The import of the visit no one probably knows definitely outside Hitler himself and a few of the members of the general staff.

This is of interest because the visit is on the west front where fortifications have been built on both sides of the boundary. Those are believed to be impregnable on German and French soil.

At this moment the Czechoslovakian situation in the east is very tense and Hitler views the forts on the western front.

France is very active and reports state that the British manoeuvres are taking on supreme importance at this moment.

Meanwhile the effort is being tirelessly made to bring about a settlement of the Sudeten German minority issue, even while the Hungarians in Czechoslovakia are demanding their autonomy.

Britain leaves a wide road open for peace and will leave no ground unturned to preserve peace. But at same time, her tone is firm in her warnings to the Germans that there has come a time when Britain will fight. She is growing greater to her ideal in strength. Germany may have gone so far with her militarization of every man, woman and child that nothing more can be done in that regard and that hence she has to decide between sword-rattling and peaceful efforts.

As despatches pointed out yesterday it is a question how far Germany intends to go. It is Germany that must decide. Some of the powers have decided and Czechoslovakia, which in the event of war would undergo a terrific and horrible experience whether overrun or not, has lived so long with the dread spectre of war that she is unafraid. Russia has said little. France is watching very closely and so is Britain. Italy is also watching but saying little. Germany is playing the lead. What of the European States west of Russia?

MORE ATLANTIC FLYING

While the next step in the survey program which goes forward so busily in the North Atlantic area this summer will be the flight of the six-engined Short flying boat of Air France, now at the Azores, the successful round trip in fast time of the Lufthansa monoplane Condor and the approaching Atlantic crossing of the Albatross of Imperial Airways are of interest to the British plane as a transatlantic vehicle. The British have laid special stress on experiments along this line and have prepared at Hattie's Camp, near Botwood, Nfld., a huge land airport with three runways, one a mile long and more than 1,000 feet wide, which can only be for the use of large-scale wheeled aircraft. It will be recalled also that several years ago Igor Sikorsky, staunch advocate and designer of flying boats, predicted that the Atlantic might be flown commercially with land planes. He was thinking definitely in terms of high-altitude flying, however—at 20,000 feet or more above the surface of storms—and of planes with at least 5,000 miles' range. More recently one of the five bidders on Pan American's 100-passenger aircraft specifications offered a land-plane type.

The completion of the land plane school of thought has been, of course, the speed and theoretical higher efficiency of this type of ship as compared with the flying boat, especially with regard to the relation of pay load to gross weight. Supporters of the land type maintain also that modern design would make such planes floatable for a sufficient period of to allow for the rescue of their company in the event of a forced stop at sea. One should not minimize the fine and sure performance of the Condor, or fail to expect the Albatross to give a good account of itself over the Atlantic. And it is certain that the potentialities of such types in over-water flying be thoroughly explored. But with the increasing efficiencies and capacities of the very large flying boats now flying or in an advanced stage of the drawing board, their advantages would still seem to be paramount for commercial service between the continents. Unlimited, as far as can yet be seen, as to size and weight by the factors which definitely restrict craft which alight on land, they embody increasingly the safety and comfort factors of true ocean-going vessels and continue to increase spectacularly in speed and relative efficiency as sizes go up.—New York Times.

AUTUMN MEMORIES

As the autumn days are nearing, there's a wood where I would wander,
Where the glinting sunshine glistens through the gentle wind-stirred leaves
Casting ever shifting shadows at my feet
the while I ponder
On the beauty of the carpet that the sun and shadows weave.

There's a glint of shining stubble in the sunlight over yonder,
There's a flock of alders growing by the waters of the spring;
There is golden-rod a-gleaming, and the while my heart grows fonder
Of the glorious days of autumn and the subtle joy they bring.

There are grape-vines clinging, climbing to the tree-tops old and hoary,
Freighted with their fragrant fruitage—
sweet the memories of the years.
Ah! the golden Autumn sunlight brings again the old-time glory
Of the distant days of childhood which I glimpse through mist of tears.

THE SPEED WITH WHICH NEWS TRAVELS in this day of modern miracles was well illustrated by the world-wide attention given words spoken by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt on a bridge over the St. Lawrence river and at Queen's University. The President of the United States as a Good Neighbor of Canada, said that United States would not stand idly by if Canada was attacked by a foreign enemy. The next morning in Berlin and all the chancelleries of Europe the President's speech was read and discussed, and carried the unmistakeable assurance that if foreign dictators wish to wallow in war with a view to becoming world conquerors the friendly feeling which exists between the British Empire and the people of the United tates will have to be reckoned with—despite the inspired propaganda which is so articulate and boisterous in the land of Uncle Sam labelled "Beware of Foreign Entanglements."

ARE BIG CIRCUSES ON THE WAY OUT? It would seem so from the experiences of the big tent shows this season. Ringling Circus, Cole Bros., and one or two others of the big shows lost money and closed early which indicates that the enormous expenses of the railway shows has caught up with them, and carrying thirty or more elephants and hundreds of horses means a colossal feed bill. Motorized circuses on a smaller scale would seem to be a better proposition. There is a much cheap entertainment nowadays, measured in money, that the high prices which the large circuses had to charge seemed too much of a jolt for many people. Clyde Beatty with his lions and big steel cage, featured with the Cole Bros. Circus, has joined the Robbins Circus which toured Canada early this season. Some of the star acts of the Ringling Circus like Lillian Leitzel, G. Barnes Circus when the big show returned to headquarters at Sarasota, Florida. Other acts from the same show have formed a one-ring circus to tour the South. Meanwhile at Sarasota the Ringling organization is doing a good business with tourist sight-secrs, which is expected to increase largely as the weather becomes cooler.

CITIZENS WHO HAVE VISITED THE PROMENADE AND PARKING AREA behind the Front Street business blocks on the banks of the Moira are loud in their praise of the transformation scene effected there. Hideous fire-traps have been removed and the ground levelled and improved until now it is so near a completed esplanade that some future City Council will be able to complete it at small expense and gain the credit of the credit for this year's City Council's progressiveness.

I'll Take You With Me

By Farley Faulkner

Farley Faulkner, the first Canadian radio Correspondent to fly from Hollywood to New York for a world premiere writes of his experiences en route to attend the film version of "You Can't Take It With You". This is the first of a series of articles describing his trip.

En route—Aug. 30.—(Special to The Intelligencer)—Breakfast in fast in Hollywood — luncheon in San Francisco — dinner in — it Lake City — a comfortable snooze over Omaha, Nebraska.

But I shan't stop there. After a few hours sleep we're to have surprise breakfast at Columbus, Ohio, and before we sit at table again, we shall have seen the world premiere of Frank Capra's Columbia picture, "YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU," at the Radio City Music Hall in New York City.

At the moment I'm taking a farewell peek at the Columbia Ranch which is barely visible in the early morning mist over San Fernando Valley — across from the Ranch is the Warner Brothers-First National plant near Burbank and further to the northwest I can see the acres of the New Universal Pictures Studio at Universal City.

Faster than one can write, the picture capital changes. Rolling hills are giving way to hills not so rolling. Mountains, if you accept the Californian's view though in all the Dominion we know a thing or two about mountains, I'm inclined to take them as hills.

My fellow passengers (and there are six of them) have bundled themselves with everything from crossword puzzles to knitting. They might as well have stayed at home as far as any evidence of enthusiasm over this flight is concerned. But not so with your correspondent.

I'm a country boy at heart and very glad of it, since I seem to the first Canadian Press representative to fly from New York City. I would prefer I think I expected to see an extra edition on the streets of Hollywood with great heads proclaiming the fact. There was a time, I know, some few lofty souls gave me their sincere sympathy when they learned that I was going to leave Hollywood for two or three days.

The stewardess tells me that Bakersfield which I see yellow us in the San Joaquin Valley used to be the ten days trip from Los Angeles. We've covered it in an hour.

The San Joaquin Valley which is about a hundred miles long was once desert. Now it is one of the richest garden spots of the North American Continent due to irrigation. Then the Mojave Lakes. Thank you. I've just been told that it is over one hundred fifteen degrees Fahrenheit in the sun at this time.

The lovely whitehaired lady who sits behind me heard the mention of Canada when the stewardess and I were talking.

"Young man," she said, "tell me how you like Canada. I've always wanted to go there, but I don't speak French."

Reluctantly tells me I had best leave the subject where it is. Besides, I'm getting rather too confident in the lady that we do speak a few words of English now and again.

The rest of the passengers are mere mortals, people of the air transport who fly up to San Francisco to settle a few matters over the Bohemian Club or in the Gold Room at the Palace Hotel. Then back in the afternoon plane they get back home in time for dinner in the suburbs.

Two thousand feet below me, plains are giving way to the mountains. The air is cooler and pines cover the uppermost bends of the ranges—it might be Canada this. Somehow, I have the sensation of unreality about the whole trip so far. At any moment I expect to wake up and find myself at home in bed. Nothing momentous has happened in the past two and one half hours—that is nothing other than having covered what was once a three weeks journey.

The wide flung arms of the San Francisco Bay stretch beneath us now. Off to the left I can see the dramatic hilltops of the city itself. Mammoth structures of concrete and the spots where some thirty years ago was nothing but a ruins in the wake of the 1906 worst earthquake pardon me, one of the most severe fires in American history. I've been cautioned time and again that earthquakes are as much to be dreaded as hurricanes—it was really the fire that ruined the city if you follow my meaning.

Now I've caught my first glimpse of the Golden Gate Bridge. It even looks impressive from the air as it should. After all, it is the largest suspension bridge in the world—or am I going Californian?

Back toward Oakland across the Bay. I can see the twin bridges which link San Francisco and Alameda County with the city center of the two bridges which come together on a fortified island in the bay, I see Treasure Island. The namesake home of the San Francisco Exposition of 1939. It is quite imposing with its strangely magnificent Spanish style of architecture. I understand that it (the island) is to be utilized as an airport after the Exposition closes.

Cheerio until after lunch. I'm off to join a fellow aviator at the Fairmount Hotel for a snack. My plane for the East leaves at two-thirty this afternoon and it's now one o'clock.

Below me the dazzling white, stretches of Salt Lake. Within twenty miles in length. It is the greatest salt lake in America. Campbell makes his risky record runs in racing cars. Seems the salt makes for a hard surface for a hundred mph. I wonder if the same theory would hold for the Los Angeles traffic coppers poured a little salt on the street there.

While the stewardess serves me tea, she told me a little about Utah. Desert country for the most deserts which the Mormon settlers found after their historic trek on foot mostly all the way across the snowy middlewestern wilderness) which now is one of the richest and best acreage in the world.

Of the original party which left New York City in the middle nineteenth century, more than two thirds died of starvation before they promised land. But their surviving brothers have made the most of the area from the wilderness. Incidentally this is the stamping-ground of James Oliver Curwood, author of COVERED WAGON.

Since I began this last paragraph, the sun has dropped suddenly from sight and the last rays are illuminating the Great Mormon Salt Lake City against the towering range behind.

Silenced motors tell me that we are landing—yes, the great lights of the airport below us are already alive. In one long glide we've come to earth. We shall stretch our aching legs and have a glass of beer in the airport cafe.

Then the excitement returns to his screed with a humbler and more appreciative appreciation of beer. The airways feel that passengers who tipple make passengers who don't tipple nervous. I'll keep my pot in spite of my wailing for fried chicken, jellied salad and biscuits like I haven't seen since I left home for good and Wilmette cheese complete the meal with a glass of beer and I've drunk beer at home or anywhere else.

Fit dark now and I must be off before we set out on our new conquered an unknown planet. The plane has climbed through the blue-black across the inner "rocky Mountains. We gained some passengers at Salt Lake City, among them is a young wife who is flying to New York to join her husband. Seems he was stricken with acute appendicitis in the eastern city and is not expected to live until her arrival. The stewardess, who is a motherly soul (they all are, I believe), is trying to divert the attention of the distressed lady from her troubles.

So here we are, two clergymen, a basketball player, a member of the club entertainer from the public platform (with a glass eye in one eye), a young mother and her twins of four, the distraught wife of a Navy officer and I, en route home and I, a wondering Canadian member of the Fourth Estate, flying through the air not on a flying trapeze, but still miraculous to me and I think it always will be, travel three miles per minute with the speed of a meteor.

Lights in the plane have been extinguished, the berths have been made up and ready for occupancy. It seems foolish to waste any of this trip on sleep but I suppose Nebraska, I believe.

Yes, there are the twinkling little specks of Omaha—that couldn't possibly be a city of human beings! Omaha is left behind and I've put away the best part of three chicken and ham sandwiches and a cup of ovaltine. I'm at last going to sleep since the stewardess has promised to awaken me when we reach Chicago at three a.m., Farewell Chicago! There to the right of the rapidly disappearing flying field is Crown Hill—almost one bullwick of General Alphonse Capone now of Alcatraz Island near San Francso. What a life. I understand that during the heyday of the roaring Napoleon he was received by Hollywoodians with open arms (and we must, closed safes and jewel boxes). He was once Public Enemy Number One, now he's just another bard guy who lost his starch in the rock. Again, ladies and gentlemen, I bid you goodnight.

And a good, good morning. This is your special correspondent.... Hollywood is getting me. There for a girl I have thought I was Walter Winchell or anyhow one of the Marx Brothers.

In ten minutes we reach Columbus, Ohio. We have recently passed the real home of aviation. In this area (near Dayton actually) the Wright Brothers built their first flying machine. And today, the grandchildren of the people who thought Wright Brothers were a couple of nuts, think nothing at all of planes which weigh a good ten tons and fly three miles per minute.

My steaming porridge, chilled grapefruit juice, fragrant coffee and toasted muffin, have made a new man of me. I wonder if the airline would make any money if all the passengers at 6—5—7 in certain that my meals alone have been worth half the cost of my ticket.

The sky is all streaked with the oddest colors. Great ones even greenish-blues flow along in the midst of pinky-red clouds. Everything looks so real. It is hard to believe that I've almost forgotten the heat and smoke which will greet me in New York.

The stewardess tells me that we are due in Columbus at 7.30—7.30 and six over Pennsylvania Looked at my watch and found it had to be set forward four hours as I'd forgotten to change it since leaving Los Angeles. Therefore, only four hours go until I catch up with the sun. Good!

Off to the left, (north), there is a great smudge in the sky—the first indication the dread city of Pittsburgh. Thence to Reading after passing over the site of Valley Forge. Soon I shall be leaving this sky liner for terra firma at Newark, New Jersey — the airport for the City of New York.

The sky is a gorgeous murkier every minute although the morning sun is more than bright. I just realized that this time yesterday afternoon I was having my coffee on Syracuse. Five hours, four hours, three thousand miles away from here. Out there it's only five o'clock in the morning while in here it's three.

Stewardess says we're ahead of time and will make port half an hour early. Which doesn't break the record. It'll have me on the hour to reach the theatre for the opening of "YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU, if we weren't early.

I seem to be the only person who cares a hoot about time. Well, I'm not. I'll bet all these dignified people are as much on edge inwardly as I am but they just don't let on. It's getting cloudy and I'm flying in clouds—we get above the cloud banks. Now I can't see anything but what appears to be a white sea below us. Flying gives one the strange sensation of being completely detached from the hustling bustling world. I'm getting more excited as we near New York.

First there'll be the drive through the great Holland Tunnel which runs beneath the Hudson River, then through the tunnel and presto, I'll be in New York City. The first Canadian Press representative to fly from Hollywood for a world premiere.

We're dropping now—there is the airport and off to the west is the pale of Manhattan with its towered buildings. Much smaller than I thought it would only a hundred times more imposing.

Then I'll be somewhere in that mass of buildings and the six million people who swarm the streets. The plane has faced into the wind to make the landing. Now, just think of it—when I shall give you my impression and the experiences of one of your fellow spectators at the opening. I remain,' your Canadian Correspondent who began his flight from Hollywood to the Big City will interest you as much as myself.

Sinus Infection ay Cause Rheumatism—Arthritis

The evidence that infected teeth or tonsils cause some cases of rheumatism or arthritis is not now disputed because nearly every family, at one time or more in the history of relatives, has observed one or more of such cases.

Furthermore infected gums—is also known to be a cause of arthritis.

For some time research workers have suspected the sinuses as also being a cause of arthritis. These little cavaries or cavities are situated in the bone about the nose and form the sounding box for the voice. We are all familiar with the flat or nasal tone of the voice when these caverns are filled with mucous or pus. Sometimes, unless the patient had an active inflammation of a sinus—outside—the fact that a sinus without active inflammation could cause arthritis was not suspected.

Dr. Lee M. Hurd, New York physician, formerly of the Medical School, in Medical Clinics of North America, says that he believes that sinus or chronic infection definitely aggravates or is the cause of many cases of rheumatism and arthritis, because he has observed many cases of arthritis in his own practice that were benefited by the removal of sinus infection.

Thus in a group of 400 consecutive cases of arthritis seen in office practice, there was some X-ray evidence of sinus infection in 62 per cent, the majority of which gave the history of symptoms of sinus trouble at the time of examination. Of those who were then given sinus treatment—some 25 per cent—80 per cent showed various degrees of improvement. Some of the arthritic symptoms, which seems to prove that sinus infection is a definite cause of arthritis. Dr. Hurd personally observed and treated the majority of these cases and is able to substantiate the statement that when the infection in the sinus is relieved either by medicine or surgery the patient was greatly benefited, some becoming entirely free from arthritic symptoms.

Dr. Hurd then is that in searching for the cause of rheumatism or arthritis more than the mouth—teeth—should be examined.

The majority of these patients had no symptoms of sinus disease and were not aware that they had any. Most complained of headaches or pus-like dropping from nose and throat. Sinus headaches were rare."

KIWANIAN SPEAKS TO ROTARIANS

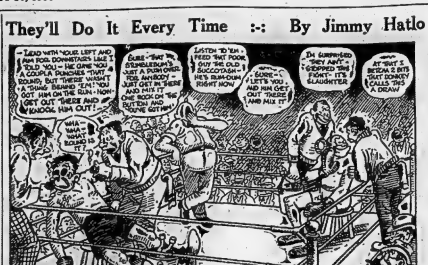
San Francisco And Way Stations, The Tale of a Traveler

Monday was "Travel Day" at Belleville Rotary Club weekly meeting in the Hotel Quinte. The speaker was Kiwanian George Griffin who gave an interesting description of his experiences enroute to the Kiwanis International Convention in San Francisco this summer; while one of the guests present was Rotarian Leon Shaldjian, a member of the Cairo, Egypt, Rotary Club.

San Francisco, with its hilly streets, cable cars, Chinatown, great bridges, beautiful harbor, and other interesting sights was vividly described by Mr. Griffin, who also made the trip as delegate from Belleville Kiwanis Club. He was accompanied by his daughter, Margaret. One of the most interesting sights of San Francisco to the visitor is Chinatown, where one is transplanted into the heart of China itself and sees the temples, the pagodas and the curios just as they appear in China. Eating houses where only Chinese dishes are served, are found in this quaint fashion, with a menu of birdnest soup, shark's fin soup and other oriental dishes which the occidental tales cautiously, with or without applause from the palate or farther down.



Visit Seaside Kiwanian Griffith had a visit with Rotarian Gene Illsley, recently of Belleville, which was very pleasant for both.

Visiting various sections of the western United States on the trip Mr. Griffin saw nothing to equal in scenic beauty and absolute grandeur our own Western Canada where the Rocky Mountains, piercing rear their snow-kissed crowns to sun which makes this section a fairer scene. Jasper, Lake Louise and other beauty spots of Canada's wonderful west were duly paid homage by the speaker, while Vancouver and Victoria were described as winter resorts which Canadians might well consider as superior to the attractions of Florida.

In Vancouver the Kiwanian enroute to the San Francisco convention re-dedicated the monument to Warren B. Harding, who, as President of the United States, made his last public address at Stanley Park in that city, dying in San Francisco shortly after. President Harding was a Kiwanian and made a paper publisher at Marian, Ohio, and very popular in service club and fraternal circles. Canadian Kiwanians erected this magnificent monument in memory of the distinguished visitor and it has been visited by many thousands since.

The speaker was introduced by Ken Dyson and Rotary appreciation was voiced by President Mack

AT THE CAPITOL

"Army Girl"

"Army Girl", coming to the Capitol Theatre, has everything—a fine story, excellent cast and direction of the most skilful type.

Julie Armstrong (Madge Evans), the daughter of Colonel Armstrong (H. B. Warner) Commander of the 31st Regiment, United States Cavalry, is tired of the routine post life of an "army" girl. She wants a city life.

The post is visited, by Captain Dike Conger (Preston Foster), who conducting experiments of mechanizing various posts with tank corps, doing away with cavalry units. He is not exactly welcome, but Julie finds him attractive. If for no other reason than his reputation as a man who "loves and leaves" his women.

Three Star Hennessey (Jimmy Gleason), Dike's pal and mechanic, arranges a date with Julie for Conger. However, he neglects to tell Dike that the young lady is an army girl, as the captain prefers his girls from civilian ranks.

Captain Joe Schuyler (Neil Hamilton) is in love with Julie. He resents Dike's attitude toward her, but there's nothing much he can do about it. All of Julie's friends, including Leila Kennet (Ruth Donnelly), wife of Major Hal Kennet (Ralph Morgan); Nikl Thomas (Barbara Pepper); Mrs. Gwen Bradley (Geraldine Fitzgerald), and Captain Bob Marvin (Ralph Byrd) warn her that she should have nothing to do with Dike Conger. This only serves to make her more interested in him.

An enormous contest is held between the tank corp and the cavalry, to determine which is the more efficient. There is then nothing for Dike, to do but to wait for an answer from Washington—and to see Julie. He soon forgets his devotion to "army" girls.

The two have a pact that their friendship is to end just like the monkey business. This works swell for awhile. They finally admit they are in love, and Dike goes to Col. Armstrong to ask permission to marry his daughter.

Trouble Ar'sen.

Complications arise when Armstrong announces that the tanks have won the contest and that he orders it turn over his command to Captain Conger. This is more than Dike had bargained for and Julie believes he has doublecrossed her father.

On the day Dike is to take command, Harry Ross (George William), fiance of one of the tanks which he believes will be manned by Dike and Three Star, so that it will get out of control when driven. Instead of Conger, however, Col. Armstrong and Three Star enter this tank. It is wrecked and both are killed.

Joe Schuyler is the first to reach the wreck, and as Three Star dies, he tells Schuyler that he had seen Ross snooping around the tank. No one else hears this statement.

Conger is court-martialled for gross negligence. During the trial Schuyler attempts compromise Ross and clears Conger.

All ends well as Julie and Dike are re-united.

AT THE BELLE

"Port of Seven Seas" and "Pick a Star"

Hollywood, which has searched the world over for novel and interesting motion picture backgrounds, brings a new setting to the screen in "Port of Seven Seas", coming to the Belle screen, for this picture has the colorful and unusual French seaport of Marseilles as its locale.

Wallace Berry, in a role arrestingly different from his more recent "bad man" portrayals, stars in the new drama of the rough but tenderhearted owner of a water-front cafe and the distinguished supporting cast features the inimitable Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, fresh from her triumph opposite Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford," John Beal, Jessie Ralph, Cora Witherspoon, Severo Girardo and H. Allyn Warren.

"Pick a Star" song hits are introduced in the new Hal Roach feature-length comedy, "Pick a Star," which is a riotous attraction, with an all-star comedy cast headed by Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Rosina Lawrence, Mischa Auer, Lyda Roberti and Laurel and Hardy. The new songs include the title hit, "Pick a Star," written by R. Alex. Anderson, and also "I've Got It Bad," "Without Your Love," "Night Club" and "Crazy But Baby It's Love," written by Fred Stryker and Johnny Lange. The musical direction was in the hands of Arthur Marvin and Marvin Hatley, and the dances were staged by Edward Gross.

The Belle News of the day will also be presented.

Love Finds Andy Hardy

Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, and Fay Holden now appearing at the Belle in the newest picture of the Judge Hardy Family Series "Love Finds Andy Hardy"—The Belle Latest World News Events. Mickey Mouse in "Mickey's Trailer" and a very interesting Traveltalk revealing the trouble-spot of Europe, Czechoslovakia, all in full beautiful technicolor will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"There Goes the Groom"

With the heretofore little utilized screen subject of amnesia as one of its main themes "There goes the Groom" new R.K.O. Radio comedy now at the McCarthy Theatre, is a rollicking film that drew continued laughs.

Memory lapse, in this instance has been used as a means to an end, but adding to further the movement of a basically amusing plot.

Burgess Meredith, who portrays the victim of the malady, feigns the affliction and is not a true sufferer. He is cast as a recent college graduate who has left for Alaska to seek gold. On the dock as he sailed, he left two women, one a co-ed whom he had loved, the other his young sister of a classmate who has formed a puppy-love attachment for him.

On his return, the prospector immediately seeks the co-ed who has fallen in love with another man during the absence.

These events lead to the hilarious situations which eventually bring Meredith, in a private sanitarium which he keeps in a turmoil.

Co-starred with Burgess Meredith are Ann Sothern,as the youthful sister of the latter, James Ellison, Marc Boland, in another of her droll characterizations, Louise Henry as the fiancee, Roger Imhof as a "scourgoush", Onslow Stevens, William Brisbane, Sumner Getchell and Adrian Morris in other important roles.

"There Goes the Groom" was capably directed by Joseph Santley and author of the famous "Merry Go Round" organ solos on the Hammond organ and also the delightful presentation and last but not least a very amusing and interesting All American musical cartoon that is entirely different from any other cartoon offering ever seen here entitled "The Penguin Parade" which is really an excellent ten minute novelty.

The Print of the Hand

By SIDENY WALDO

The body lay close to the rows of corn and the sheriff was bending over it. Then he straightened up slowly and turned to Will Grainger, the elder of the murdered man's two nephews.

"You and Ruth and Tom Mathaway drove to church together in the car."

"Yes."

"You left your brother, Dan'l, and your uncle at home here argulin'."

"They stayed home, Yes."

"Argulin'!" the sheriff insisted. "That can't be covered up. Why, plenty people heard 'em, hot at it, as they went by to church. The winders was open."

"Ye-es they was argulin'."

"And you three come home from church separate."

"Yes, Separate."

For the first time, the sheriff looked directly at Daniel. "And how about you, Dan?"

"We—got through argulin'; and I went for a walk in the woods."

The sheriff studied the lowered, stubborn face of the twenty-year-old boy. Then he made a little gesture of distressed helplessness and began to find the way into the open shed door.

Once inside, the sheriff crossed the uneven plank floor to a broad work-bench which ran along one side. Over part of the rough surface of the bench, smooth gray cardboard had been tacked. Cartridge boxes, powder cans, small tools, and a set of scales were neatly arranged on this clear surface. On two wooden pegs above the bench rested a Winchester repeating rifle.

From his pocket the sheriff drew an empty brass shell. Taking a loaded cartridge from the nearest box, he compared the two. He did not make the obvious statement that the two matched, or could be to remind the others that the rifle contained none of the cartridges and the reloading paraphernalia belonged to Daniel.

Instead he turned to Tom Hathaway, the tall and elderly third man. "I reckon you knew the old miser, Tom, best about as well as anybody else."

"I reckon," the other agreed.

"You was wonderful fer him even before the boys' mother died, and they come to live with him."

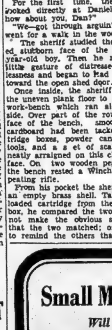
"To live—not his charity," the other man amended. "As he always took pains to remind 'em."

"I guess there ain't hardly been one cussed meanness he's put on 'em you ain't known of and tried to help 'em bear."

"I tried to help the boys just so far as I could sheriff," was the calm reply.

"I tried to show 'em the way of patience." Tom went on. "Especially Dan and Ruth; after they'd fell in love, and was courtin' together."

And, that morning, the sheriff suddenly broke in. "their uncle didn't like boys—Dan and Ruth's times—he'd have to cut down their livin' fer 'em. When they knew he had plenty, and more, hoarded in the bank. Money they wanted, got. Needed, and couldn't get, had to have, now. Ain't that what his uncle said to you, when you argued?"



"That can't be denied." Tom said at last, and his expression became deeply thoughtful. "My mind was running along them same lines when the sheriff, as I set in church. It seemed to me Dan and Ruth ought to have that money, some way. While they could still be young and happy with it.

"Sittin' there, I took a good look back over my own life—which all lies behind me now, I reckon I can figure it, and it come to me how different things would of been, if I'd had any kind of a start. It all come to me plain, I would of married. Ruth might of been the daughter I never had. I'm mighty fond of them two, Ruth and Dan, in all. I couldn't hardly blame them for wanting some way.

And, once more, the sheriff broke in abruptly. "That's just the point Tom. Just what I've been leadin' to. We all know you'd like to ease things for Dan. But here's where you weren't able to help any—and Ruth. Consequently, you can't see neither man or boy can do. About the only way I see Dan now is to counsel him to come home and me. peaceable".

But Tom Hathaway merely looked at the sheriff in feigned surprise. "How so, sheriff?" he asked. "You appear to of forgot somethin'. We all come home from church, separate. We got here, separate, Dan's gun was here, for any of us to use. We all haled the old man, equal. How's the law goin' to tell—which of us is the killer?"

"Just this way," the sheriff declared, with forced patience. "The guns been cleaned and oiled. There'll be no finger prints on it, likely. That, I grant you. But it's a long reach, over the bench, to put it back on them pegs. A man would do it with his right hand. His left, he'd put flat on the bench—palm down—to steady his weight on it. His hand would of been oily. There on the cardboard, is a clear fresh print of a man's whole hand."

The tense silence that followed this announcement was short. Dan sent a swift startled glance at his

Newspaper Advertising Changes Domestic Habits in United States

Tea Served in Seven Out of Eight Homes in U. S.

Montreal, August 30—Newspaper advertising campaigns, planned and carried out by the Tea Bureau, have had a profound effect upon domestic habits in the United States, it was brought out at a recent discussion held at McGill University.

Today, after five years of advertising, 54.6 per cent of male American over 18 years of age, and 64.8 per cent of women in the same age group are regular tea drinkers—a very considerable change from earlier figures.

Hugo Roper, noted market analyst whose surveys are reported quarterly in "Fortune" magazine, stated that tea is now served in seven out of eight American homes. Chief tea drinkers in the United States, Mr. Roper said, are Americans of Knglish, Scottish or Irish descent, lowest consumers of the beverage served wholesale at the "Boston Tea Party" are those of Italian or Slavic origin.

Interesting Comparisons

Investigators for the survey reported that amongst the non-drinking homes they studied nine per cent have tea for breakfast, one per cent drink tea at luncheon, 33 per cent at the noon meal, 2 per cent in mid-afternoon, 39 per cent with the evening meal and three per cent in mid-evening.

Tea is used more than once a day by 27 per cent of American housewives, once by 21.1 per cent, several times a week by 13.5 per cent, occasionally by 3.8 per cent, rarely by 6.1 per cent and never by 12.5 per cent.

Boys and Girls Finish Summer Reading Plan

Members of the Boys' and Girls' Department at Corby Public Library whose summer reading records showed a book-flight over Canada have concluded the "Wings Across Canada" project and have made happy landings at the home port.

Seventy-two children were registered in this year's reading plan which emphasized books on each province in the Dominion. This is the largest number of sailors in the summer reading classes, twice that of previous years.

Announcement of those who completed the entire flight was made by the children's librarian, Miss Kathryn Gallagher today. They are—Fay Mitchell, Georgina Mitchell, Alan Gregory, Annie Stewart, Dorothy Stewart, Bruce Lowery, Makia Woodley, Eva Rutter, Tom Woodley, Vincent Massey, Robert Wilson, Barbara Greenleaf, Talmie Sidney, Doreen Bryer, Hay Kelly, Donald Bexvis Kathleen Winter, Ruth Wise, Joan McCabe, Guest's Money Stolen

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Sometime ago I had a friend visiting me from out of town. During her stay my home was robbed and my guest's money was stolen.

Can you tell me if I should return this money to her? I feel as though I am responsible. This young lady works very hard for her weekly salary and it means a lot to her.

E.

This is indeed one of the most difficult and embarrassing situations for a hostess to find herself in. It is difficult enough for the hostess when the loss is an article, such as a ring, that in some possible way might be duplicated. But when the loss is money, the situation becomes even more problematic.

Naturally you, as hostess, feel the responsibility, especially since you realize what the loss means to your guest, and naturally you wish to assume the responsibility if you can possibly find a way to do so. Undoubtedly too your guest is unwilling to have you take this treasure of loss.

However, under these special circumstances, I would, if I were you, make an attempt to "duplicate" this loss to your guest. In this way you will show your generous spirit, and you give her the privilege of either accepting it or refusing to let you take the responsibility.

I do not advise you to give her the money in person, for this would be more embarrassing than returning it in her with a gracious and understanding letter.

Your letter might begin somewhat like this:

Dearest Jane,

Will you please be a darling and understand what is in my heart to say to you in this letter? You must realize how heart-broken I was at the most unfortunate and embarrassing robbery we had while you were with us! It was devastating enough to have the brigand enter our home and help himself to our things, but to have him treat our beloved guest in such an unseemly manner was too much.

Now, my dear Jane, the only thing that will heal our "robbery wound" is for you to salve it by being willing to co-operate with us in our deep wish to make restitution to you. Please, please don't add to our discomfort by saying "no". Instead please do make us happy by accepting the enclosed check. I am sending it to you with such loving devotion, and my prayer is that you will receive it with complete understanding of my sofriendly wish.

Wedding Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been an interested reader of your column, and was especially interested in your remarks on wedding announcements.

1—Would it be poor form to send wedding announcements to ex-sweethearts and also to a fiance of a sister recently married (who are not married) or to their parents who are good friends of the groom's family, but not know the bride?

2—Would a long dress and hat be appropriate for an afternoon home wedding with a number of guests invited? This applies to the bride.

C.

1—Yes. As a matter of fact it would be poor form not to send your marriage announcements to these people.

2—Community customs vary about the wearing of long dress at an afternoon wedding. In some communities it is "done", and in some (mainly in large cities and towns) it isn't, and these young ladies must properly follow the custom in their community. If, however, one is in doubt, one will always be properly dressed in a street length dress at an afternoon home wedding, even a late afternoon wedding. And whether or not a long dress is worn, a hat should be worn. A dressy hat is appropriate to the long dress.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I follow your column every day, and am very much interested in knowing what you think of my case.

For about a year and a half I went with a young lady, although I never asked her for "steady" company. I called on her and took her out occasionally, and never took out another girl. For three months of this time I didn't take her out or go to see her, as I wanted to think it over. Then I went back again, and we have been seeing each other for a couple of months now.

However, she's rather cold toward me, and although I'm sure she cared a great deal for me before we parted, I don't know what to think. She goes out with other boy friends at times, and I can't understand why. Can you figure this out?

M. E.

Well, my dear sir, what do you expect if you go with a girl for a year and a half, drop her for no reason at all, and then go back again? I think she was very kind and forbearing to take you back at all. Many girls would say you're "not at home".

If you're really serious, why not convince her of the fact, and tell her she will not be submitted to any more furloughs without some sort of explanation.

They Want to Be Popular With Boys

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two girl chums who want to be popular with boys. We are considered rather good-looking, and the girls seem to like us, but somehow we don't seem to make the grade with boys. We're sure you can help us, and as we read your column daily we would certainly appreciate your advice.

Two Lonely Girls

Perhaps your trouble is just youth and inexperience. You know there is technique in this matter of being popular, just as there is technique in playing the piano, learning to swim, dance or play golf. Some manage to be popular without learning the rules, but they are rather scarce.

fatal as the other. Please remember that boys are just human beings like yourselves. They like to be with girls who make them feel "at home"; try to avoid long pauses in conversation. Forget they are boys and be natural with them. Talk about sports and movies, and anything that you think interests them. I think that's all you need to make you popular.

"Nothing to Talk About"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've work for the same firm for two years, and see each other four evenings a week, and we are going to lunch together. We have discussed marriage, but what's to say is not enough for two. And if we married, I'd have to resign my position, as I cannot afford to have anyone to work for this firm.

We have begun to see each other too often and have nothing to talk about. Both the earnings do not allow him to take me out very often. We have to go for a walk, or stay home and talk. What he gets a better position, with more money, we hope to marry. Can you suggest anything for us?

Dissatisfied

I've had letters from other boys and girls who found themselves in your predicament—with "nothing" to talk about. So they decided to take up a profitable pastime. The one I'm thinking of right now was interested in amateur-making. So he and his girl went to the library and looked up everything they could find on this sort of work. They made a thorough study of this subject, and at first took orders from this friends for making simple things like bookshelves. She helped all she could, and their workshop was in the basement of her home.

Finally they were married, and before long they established a business, and they were making money, with plenty of orders coming in. The wife was a great help.

There are all sorts of profitable pastimes and I suggest you get books from the library and read up on some subject you're interested in especially.

Fashion Flashes

A charmer if ever there was one, is a bathrobe-dress of fuchsia velvet with a tiny clump of shaded coral orchids plumes.

Can't get along without a little fur wrap. A beauty is of beum marten with spiral sleeves, no collar and back fullness.

Plenty of time in which to wear a fur trimmed woollen suit. A new model is of purple ribbed woollen with a collar, sleeve bands and pocket flaps of mink.

It is good to have a costume to bridge the sartorial gap between pink summer and dark autumn. Such a costume might well be an ensemble with a coat of wide-ribbed diagonal navy blue woollen and a dress of printed blue and white satin.

Very grand for evening are some of those new platform shoes. Various shades of purple chiffon make the bands and draped ties on a shoe which has the wide platform sole covered at the sides with gold kidskin.

SMILING KEEPS LIP CONTOUR BEAUTIFUL

(By HELEN POLLETT)

DON'T LET your heart harden, no matter what happens. If you do, you'll have hard lines around your mouth, and they're ruinous to the beauty composition. Keep sweet the expression of your lips. The only way to do that is to have sweet thoughts.

Next to the eyes, the mouth is the most interesting feature. Like the eyes, its beauty is mainly in expression. Eyes stay the same, but the mouth is what you make it. Observe the doleful droop, the hang-dog look, the bear-trap clinch of the teeth which denotes intolerance.

When giving yourself a five-minute facial before the sandman comes keep the lips relaxed, do little circles round them with a finger tip. With flattened palms smooth the flesh from the centre of the chin up to the middle of the cheeks. That movement firms surrounding tissues, tones muscles. Don't forget that smiling is the best of exercises to keep lip contour beautiful.

Place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb at one end, second finger at the other. Keep the first finger stationary, draw up the thumb and other finger, causing the lip to flirn a Cupid's bow. That's the way to keep it long, away fine lines that form after the forties come along.

Hands will be grateful for molding treatment if they only take a few minutes. Always there is cream on them after the facial complexion is oiled; use it to keep your hands satin-smoothed and white as satin.

Palm the backs of the hands. Treat each finger to a brisk thumbing, working from base to tip. Friction the cream into the cuticle around the fingernails. Work on the nail substance; it loves a little petting, laps up creamy cosmetics.

A simple way to retain the youthful shape is to hold in the abdominal muscles. Never let the figure droop so that fibres go slack. Thickness suddenly reveals that even the loveliest frock will lose chic, style will be lacking.

PRISCILLA LANE
A pleasant expression adds to her charm

Long-legged girls are the ones who can wear the bouffant skirts that are so popular. They make the tall ones appear regal and slender, but they are no fashion dish for the short lady who is inclined to have thickened dimensions.

In the shoe happy choice when selecting a frock. It is necessary to exercise the seeing eye. Take a side-view view of the back, note if the waistline is at the proper place. Some of us are a bit careless when buying ready-made frocks, not always so much as a mirror is handy.

The woman with naturally curly hair must determine the effects of a hair dye before she uses it. Some coloring agents will do away with the natural undulation and that is a beauty loss.

It is wise to tie a small strand of hair with the new coloring agent watch what happens a few days later.

Parents Should Give Each Other Support if They Can't Agree

(By LISA ORENELLE)

THERE'S AN old theory that when a son needs to be disciplined, the job should be done by the father. Similarly, that the mother should always undertake the correction of her daughter. Perhaps are those who feel it works best that way.

But does it? Doesn't it, actually encourage to the limit a "house divided against itself"?

For instance, the father has wished his husband to accept responsibility for disciplining his daughter. He therefore feels quite free to spoil her, while maintain the dignity realise what a good sport her father is. He's unbeknown to the mother, who is just an old "meanie", always spoiling everything with "don't" and "can't". The mother is the enemy, the father her ally.

Unwholesome Condition

That is not only unfair to the mother, but unwholesome for a father "relation"—something that according to the psychiatrists, is very unwholesome condition.

And, on the other hand if the father shirks all the disciplining of the son and the mother spoils him, the result is equally bad. It's the same situation with the same unfortunate results.

Generally speaking, a son will accept advice and criticism more readily from his mother than from his father while a daughter is usually more prone to accuse her father of being less than her mother's. It works the same way with parents—the mother is generally more inclined to be critical of the daughter, the father of the son.

It seems to me, therefore, far more reasonable, if not according to custom for a father to discipline the daughter while the mother should undertake, whenever possible, the correction of the son.

Valuable Relationship

There is perhaps nothing more valuable for a girl than a close, frank, friendly relationship with her mother. But this is difficult if not impossible where the mother must do all the disciplining —difficult if not impossible without the father's support and co-operation.

And the same thing applies to a father and a son. The success of their relationship is largely dependent on the mother's attitude.

In all fairness, find for the children's sake, parents should support each other in the matter of discipline. If they can't agree, they should let the issue pass.

Nor should a father always say helplessly to his daughter: "You'll have to wait and ask your mother," leaving it to the mother to do all the disciplining. There may be occasions for that, of course, but, as a general thing a father's judgment is quite good enough to cedite the matter alone if he just puts his mind to it.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

INDULGING in the prevailing lunar aspects, this may prove to be a day of unpleasant surprises, sudden events with gain in any direction problematical. There are signs of sudden loss, but probably only boastful arrangers offering queer propositions that are not calculated to lure and for in final denouement. Travel, adventure, generally speaking, are favorable, conditions call for sturdy behavior and circumspection lest perils of every nature menace.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of sudden upsets and disturbances, with radical change or upheavals of a thoroughly disruptive and disorganizing nature. These may be superinduced by wily and treacherous strangers whose lures and prodigious proposals may be almost overwhelming in their audacity. Such persons and propositions should be summarily dismissed before calamity and financial peril ensue.

A child born on this day may be bold, audacious and full of initiative. Its foolhardiness may culminate in disaster, although it may be exceedingly clever, original, fond of adventure, research and rash chatelaine.

"Nervousness" Not Disease of Nerves

Term Simply Means an Abnormal "State of Mind," Says Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE TERM "nervousness" is used so frequently to explain some symptom that it has become commonplace, yet it is quite doubtful if many persons could give a clear-cut definition of the term or possess more than the slightest fundamental knowledge of its cause.

To most laymen nervousness means some disease of the nerves, in the sense that the nerves of nervous people differ in some way from those of a placid person. It is doubtful if many have ever thought to inquire in just what manner this difference could be demonstrated.

As a matter of fact, the medical profession is totally unable to determine the slightest difference between the nerves of the nervous person and a placid one.

When the physician says, "Your nerves are upset", or "You are nervous", or "You are on the verge of a nervous breakdown", he does not mean at all that your nerves would show the slightest variation from the normal if examined under the microscope. The term is a misnomer and does not have any direct bearing on nerves at all.

Unusual Agitation.

It means that through some cause, which it is the physician's duty to discover, if possible, the patient presents certain evidences of unusual agitation or anxiety carried through this develops symptoms in various parts of the body. It simply means an abnormal "state of mind" or an overstimulation or activity of the emotional centers and has nothing whatever to do with organic disease. It is quite a feria common thing, however, to observe an actual disturbance in the physiology of organs induced entirely through nervous influences. And these may be so profound as to completely incapacitate the patient. Some of the most serious prostrating illnesses have their entire inception in an abnormal emotional state, and tax the patience and ingenuity of the physician.

Lose Appetite From Shock

Almost every adult has experienced a sudden loss of appetite or inability to eat a meal after a severe fright or shock. Has it ever occurred to you to ask the reason? You know, in a general way, that it is in some way connected with the nerves and that you were so "upset" that you simply could not eat, that your appetite was completely gone. In fact, if you had tried to eat, against your better judgment, stomach would have disagreed with it immediately.

Now multiply this well-known experience by 300, stretching the months, and try to conceive of a chronic state of fear or shock or anxiety with loss of appetite during this entire time, with occasionally a slight let-up in the symptoms, just sufficient to permit the taking of enough food to prevent absolute starvation, and you have a mental picture of a very common disorder. There is no question but that these things occur in just the manner described, and the only explanation is some profound disturbance of the emotional centers. The brain and nerves of this sort of person may be exactly like those of a normal, healthy person in appearance and reaction to all sorts of sounds on each foot. This can be done frequently during the day.

Dear Donna Grace:

Do you think it is harmful to drink vinegar for reducing? Many young persons I know do this and seem to think it keeps the figure slender.

L. A. T.

Drinking vinegar to keep slim is harmful, and while it may cause the stomach to shrivel up it will not help the digestion and nervous system and cause the skin and eyes to lack lustre and health. There are many safe methods of reducing, and, as you know, the safest is less food will mean less weight. A diet of fresh salads, fruits, and lean meat, along with moderate exercise out of doors will cause one to lose weight. Butter-milk or skim milk is the best beverage and may be included in all reducing diets.

The very stout woman always insists on corsets and girdles made of heavy material and braced with stiff stays. The modern physician knows that this is a mistake and they have perfected the light weight corsets with just the right firmness and scarcely any stiffness. Always have the physician fit you and with much better figure and more comfort.

'Luxurious' Is Word for Bus Travel

(Three-Minute Journey)

By TEMPLE MANNING

LIKE THE iron horse, the bus is here to stay! It is but a few years back when a long haul by bus was a journey determined by one's budget, when economy was the order of the day. But now people travel by bus because they like it, very often preferring it to any other means of transportation. That is a triumph for the men of vision who control that vast network of bus transportation companies that cover the country.

Luxury is the keyword of the bus of today. There's little challenge to one's powers of endurance when a bus has de luxe sleeper accommodations for long hauls, individual, adjustable seats, soft lights and, in many instances, air conditioning. One western company is accepting delivery of 40 air-conditioned buses, and then its passengers can laugh at the devastating desert heat. To see these streamlined buses tearing along desert roads is something!

On Vacation Trails

The interstate bus system covers a labyrinth of vacation roads and trails. Most companies have travel experts to help vacationists chart a trip. These are planned tours, all-inclusive tours, with every item taken care of perfectly. There are three-day trips, week trips, trips lasting two weeks or six weeks. A New England tour will enable the vacationist to see all the beauty of that charmed holiday land, with overnight stops at smart hotels and a chance for a swim, a nice dinner and a dance.

Traveling by air-cooled bus.

Nowadays the bus rolls grandly up to the portico of the finest hotel in either different picture from that of a few years back. At historic shrines and monuments the bus makes a halt to enable passengers to get a good look and to take pictures.

Can Go Anywhere

Groups of boy scouts, girls and fraternal organizations are patrons of bus holiday trips. Special interiors are arranged to suit individual needs, and special buses are put at the disposal of the parties. With buses traversing 2,000,000 miles of highways, there is not a nook or cranny of this broad land that can't be visited. There are 25,000 interstate coaches, and heaven and the license bureau alone know the number of short-haul buses are rolling along. Every city of any size has its bus terminal, often complete with restaurants, cafeterias and shops.

The sixties' bias prevails for drivers have been stepped up and rendered even more strict by the interstate commerce commission. The rules cover over 40 pages, and every one of the hundreds of rules is rigidly enforced. So if you are thinking of taking a bus tour, don't delay, and be sure for as pleasant a travel experience as you have known.

Miss Secretary Can Look Spiffy All Day Long in Outfit Like This

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Despite the fact that this frock comes from France, it is directly in step with that old American favorite, the shirtmaker. The neckline has a convertible, high collar, cut on shirtboom fashion. The presence of a deep tuck to give a bolero resemblance to the blouse does nothing more startling than to give a new twist to an affectionately - regarded familiar outfit.

And this department is said this pretty tailleur. On the contrary, it thinks it is just fine, it just says sensationally, "Your friends are best, and old news, but good!" Pretty Miss Secretary will look spiffy in it all day long, and bloom for the twilight in the same outfit when she clamps on a coquettish doll's hat and her fur scarf.

Giants Tackle Pirates Today In Crucial Series of Season But Lack Capable Hurlers

Terry Forced to Use Dick Coffman as a Starter

CUBS COMING FAST

Only One Percentage Point Behind Giants For Second Place

By Bill Bond
Associated Press Sports Writer

The final tip-off on the sick and weakened condition of the National Baseball League's best assortment of active hospital cases, New York Giants, was offered today when Boss Bill Terry brought his battered crew face to face with the league-leading Pirates and had nothing better to offer as a starting pitcher than Dick Coffman.

Coffman has been worth his weight in World Series tickets as a game saver, and already has come out of the hole on 41 times this season. But the last time he started a game was June 19, 1936, in his first season as a Giant. And he was belted out of the box by Chicago Cubs.

Terry is hard up for pitchers, let alone an able-bodied one, and starting Coffman in the opener of this "make-or-break" four-game series with the Bucs is just the kind of a series of emergency measures.

Only Three Finish

Since Carl Hubbell won his last game Aug. 12, five days before he went to the sidelines, first of all of the season, only three Giant starters have gone the route, Hal Lohrman, Hal Schumacher and Harry Gumbert.

Lohrman was belted to the showers in his next two appearances; Schumacher was knocked down on Sunday despite the fact he is suffering from a more serious arm ailment than afflicts Hubbell, and Gumbert, like Lohrman, also was driven to cover his next two times out, the second time yesterday, when the Reds beat him 6-5.

It's a question who will benefit most from this Giant-Pirate series. If the Giants manage to win all four, they'd be only a game and a half off the pace, with a chance to catch the up-and-down Buccaneers when they return east. If it's anything else than a clean sweep, the Cubs suddenly may be in the contending position.

Cubs Playing Well

A single percentage point behind the Giants today, Gabby Hartnett's crew has been playing the best ball of any of the five division teams for the last week, having won 6 out of eight compared to four victories and five defeats for the Pirates, three and five for the Reds.

He is never definitely had his boys on the up-beat yesterday, when they handed the Dodgers a 10-3 trimming that was all over after the third inning, when Pittsburgh was leading by 4-1, Ox Stanton, bedded hurling effectively for his 11th decision, chipped in with a pair of singles that drove in three runs as part of a 15-hit attack.

The Yankees, meanwhile, pulled another full length out front of the American League's seven-team one division. Lefty Gomez's 15th victory and sixth in a row, coupled with Tom Henrich's 19th homer and fifth in three games, beat the Browns 6-4. Since Boston rescue while was taking a 15-1 shellacking from the Tigers and Cleveland was beaten 6-4 by Washington, the Yanks went 14 games up on the Red Sox.

York Batting Hero

Outstanding individual effort in the Tigers' gang attack were two homers and two singles by Rudy York, who drove in half a dozen runs.

The Bees, Cardinals, Phillies and Cubs in the National League, and the White Sox and the Athletics in the American were not scheduled.

Terry Gives Up On His Giants For This Season

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—Some of his colleagues are saying Bill Terry ought to be expelled from the managers' local because he has publicity interests. The Giants haven't a hope of winning their third straight National League pennant.

Terry, already more or less noted, if not beloved, for his forth-right-ness, flabbergasted a correspondent who asked him if he thought the Giants could make it. "Make what?" the Colonel was quoted as having replied. "The way we've been going we'll be lucky if we make the train."

This was taken to mean the Colonel had given up, with still a month of the campaign to go. This shatters one of baseball's most important tenets, which provides that a pilot must talk through his hat right to the last day of the season in order to at least a fighting chance to bring the leaders to roel.

Perhaps Bill's stubborn refusal to conform to pattern heralds a new era, when managers will not be expected by try to kid anybody—not even the club owners. Whether the owners and league officials and Giants' fans like it or not, Terry only has made official what most observers were convinced of a month ago.

Burleigh Grimes of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who is fast growing himself as outspoken as Terry, already is worrying about the fate that awaits the Pirates when they tackle the Yankees in the World Series.

"I hate to think about it," he said. "It will be like a race between a covered wagon and a racing automobile."

HARNESS HORSES READY FOR WORD AT LOCAL FAIR

Best Class of Horses Ever Gathered in This City

RACE WEDNESDAY

Recent Rain Will Put Racing Strip in Grand Condition

There may not be quantity but there is certainly quality in the field of horses, that are now located at the Fair Grounds ready for the fun to be held in connection with the Belleville Fair, which opens today, the racing program to start on Wednesday. Many of the horses, that performed so brilliantly at Ottawa shipped into this point and will move on to Toronto on Saturday for the big C. N. E. meet next week.

The reporter spent a pleasant hour on Monday evening talking with many of the horsemen, whom he has known personally for many years and can say that the horses stabled here for the present, most are the fastest, that have ever been gathered in this city in many years. The first horseman encountered was Dr. Meidrum of Norwich, who is here with Thomas Rio for the Free for all on Friday. Dillon Mc is a sensational pacer and will be hard to head in the summary. Vic Chapman came in with two Misc Admiral Grading and Prince Midwell and when they turn for the word, they will take some beating. Hopping Joe Cooksville has Victor Lee, who headed the summary at Napanee and Ottawa and is a prime condition. Louie Bennett, the patriarch of the horsemen in this district, being 81 years of age and still going strong has Axworthy Grattan, Tramp Abbe ready for the fray. Quinby Lee has been on the shelf for some time but is ready for a winning effort right now.

Jim Annis of Calgary, Alberta has Silver Bars and Betty Bars in tow and these horses have raced well since arriving from the west. Both will start at the meeting. Jim Abbott of Weston has Scotty Grattan and Margaret Dale with Vic Rourke here handling the reins, while Clint Litle will start Bud Dion his second last three year old and Day Grattan, a son of Grattan Dean, at the meet. Other horses will be arriving through the meet and the races should be keen in every race. The first day Wednesday the 2.27 and 2.14 class will be raced, on Thursday the 2.24 and 2.18 while on Friday the 2.30 and Free for All will go.

Napanee Gains Edge on Orfuns Winning First Game by 4-1 Behind Fine Hurling of Spratt

St. Louis Deserved Better Fate But Team Did Not Hit in Pinches

PLAY WEDNESDAY

Walt Gerow's Double Was Blow That Hurt Locals

It may have been the long layoff and the fact, that the Napanee squad was "hot" from their recent conquests of Picton and Trenton in final series, but suffice it to say, that the local intermediates failed to back up the seven-hit pitching of Speedy St. Louis in the clutches, and fell before the fine hurling of Slim Spratt, by a score of 4-1 in the first game of the series between Napanee and Belleville for the Bay of Quinte loop title, in the Gibbard-ville park last night.

The game was a fine hurling duel all the way with both pitchers going out with a fine display of chucking. Spratt, Napanee ace, scattered seven safeties and after the second inning, when the Orfuns got their lone run of the game on Gerow's double, Walt Gibb and young Walt Gerow's first error, blanked the Welfites with four hits whiffing eight and walking one.

Speedy on the other hand deserved a better fate, but the inability of his mates to paste the apple in the clutches, plus a couple of costly bobbles spelled disaster for the night's decision. The scattered four of the hits garnered off him, but the Gerow gang ganged up on him in the fifth, when they smashed out three hits which coupled with Curry's free ride after stopping a St. Louis shoot with his leg, sent three runs across the plate to sew up the pastime.

Had Glorious Chance

The Fanning gang had a glorious chance to tie the score in the fifth when Sonny Green and Collins battered out consecutive hits to fill the bases with no scoring position, but the usually reliable Gerow whiffed at a third strike and the chance was gone. Again in the sixth they had runners in scoring position, but inability to fathom the Spratt shoots resulted in a strike-out on the scoreboard.

Napanee tied the score in the third, when Walt Gerow's ringing single drove in Curry, who had hit ahead of him, and was paced on the second by virtue of Curry's error. Gerow's double in the fifth sent Curry and Gerow scampering across the plate, and the youngster himself scored when Bentley sent a fluke pop fly over Reid's head for the third hit of the inning.

But Johnson's wild throw to first base after two were gone in the sixth, aided by subsequent wallops of the homsters in scoring position again, but Bero's quick throw to second retired Sweet for the third putout.

One-Handed Stab

Kinkley's one-handed stab of Collins' line drive bid for a two-bagger in the first, and Sonny Green's fine throwout to the home were the fielding highlights of the game.

Walt Gerow led his mates with the hickory, getting a double and single while Curry got a single and brace. Card, Bentley and Sweet contributed one each, but the Weirites Sonny Green and Collins grabbed themselves a pair of hits with Sero, St. Louis and Wet kicking in with the remainder.

The second game of the series will be played in the Picton park on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—Hank Greenberg of Detroit now is well ahead of Babe Ruth's 1927 pace (that's the year the old master slammed out 60) and may go on to an all time record . . . Benny Leonard, whose first restaurant folded, will try it again . . . Detroit's sagog with those "Grimes to go" rumors again . . . Why Feller is losing—161 walks in 219 innings.

The United States west is coming up and predicting the collapse of the Pirates for fair . . . Bill Terry's fine hopes went with Hubbell's arm . . . That duke wasn't so Gold and Tommy Farr pulling away from Mike Jacobs and hooking up with German Taylor of Australia . . . Dahlia runs a great big boy .....Was Ferrell hasn't impressed Yankee fans.....He's credited with 10 wins in three starts, the last impression prevails he is all washed up and that Clark Griffith knew what he was doing when he handed Wes the well-known pink slip.

Mickey Cochrane probably will be back in the Majors next season, but the odds are it won't be with the Athletics—Connie Mack and Connie Mack is in the first flight of Mickey's admirers but when he quits he's going to turn the club over to his son, Earl.

Bus Haun of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman furnishes this one: Last year Carl Hubbell hurried home after the World Series for a bit of grief.....He is a left-handed pitcher, but a right-handed griever .....One day the club pro was trying to straighten out Carl's driving.....'Keep that left arm as straight as you can on your backswing and downswing" he advised.....Carl pulled up his sleeve and showed him his forearm—satary which.... 'My gosh, it's as crooked as Harry Stuffel's cane,' said Diddy Trotter, the pro.....It got that way because Hubbell finishes every pitch of his famous screw ball with the palm of his famous left hand turned up.

Joe DiMaggio's bat has Yankee fans flang-happy.....If Lou Gehrig can belt him home runs, DiMaggio season he'll become the second player in Major League history to Whang 500 four-baers.....(The Babe collected 714).....Most superstitious guy in the National League is Bill Lee of the Cubs who won't have his pitching turn on the day he is scheduled to pitch.

Two Ball Foursome At Country Club For Jeweller's Cup

A two ball foursome, the winning prize being the Jeweller's Cup, will be played at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Wednesday afternoon with the first foursome to get off at 1.30 o'clock. This is one of the most coveted prizes of the entire season to win at the west end course and a record setting will likely be seen. Each pair play one ball with the couple making alternates times. There will be a buffet supper at the conclusion of the game and every member of the club is asked to attend to make this function really worth while. The pairings are as follows:

Tom Carruthers and Miss Leona Stafford vs. R. McKeown and Miss Robert.

Mort Parker and Mrs. Parker vs W. J. Cook and Mrs. J. Robertson.

Lester A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. A. P. Allen vs A. H. Ketchenson and Mrs. R. Porter.

Roy Stafford and Mrs. G. H. Stobie vs C. L. Jewell and Mrs. H. Ketchenson.

A. P. Allen and Mrs. O. H. Scott vs Dr. Austin Wallen and Mrs. Chant.

Robert Pringle and Miss F. Lauder vs Cam. Wallbridge and Mrs. E. P. G. Hinnear.

Hazelwood and Mrs. Vanderwater vs Charles Spalding and Mrs. George Graham.

R. Stevens and Mrs. Lyall vs O. H. Scott and Mrs. McCreery.

Godfrey Scott and Mrs. Ackerman vs Dr. W. C. Morgan and Mrs. Kennett.

Dr. Chant and Miss Jean Stobie vs David Payne and Miss Joyce Payne.

Art Cole and Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn vs Mrs. Edward Kennett.

Jim Belair and Marjory Cook vs R. J. Wray and Mrs. W. H. Acker.

Joe Shortt and Mrs. R. J. Graham vs Dr. Ketchen and Mrs. Ketchen.

INTERNATIONAL LOOP FULL OF GOOD HURLERS

Joe Mulligan Pitches Masterpiece in Beating Bisons 1-0

WON ON WILD PITCH

Ken Raffensberger Wins 15th Game of The Season

By the Associated Press

If the lively ball is plaguing the major leagues and sending pitchers to the hospitals and sanitariums by the carload, it hasn't yet made much of an impression in the International League. Despite the awesome batting averages of some of the Newark Bears there is pitching aplenty in the International.

Joe Mulligan of Toronto Maple Leafs turned in last night's pitching gem, beating the Buffalo Bisons, 1-0, with a seven-hit performance. Ken Raffensberger of Rochester Red Wings nearly matched it when he stopped Montreal Royals, 5-1, in an eight hitter and Jack Haley of Newark Bears turned in a neat but not gaudy job in beating the Syracuse Chiefs 6-3 with seven hits.

Only game in which pitching went for Sweeper was at Baltimore where Jersey City Giants piled up nine runs in the first two innings and defeated the Orioles 12-9.

Pitcher Responsible

Fabian Kowalik of the Bisons, who opposed Mulligan, was directly responsible for the Leafs only run. He allowed only four hits, two of them in the fifth. An intentional pass loaded the bases and up came Mulligan whose weakness at the plate is notorious. At this critical juncture Kowalik unloaded a wild pitch and Mayo Smith scored with the game's only run.

It was the shortest game in the history of night ball at Toronto, one hour and 17 minutes.

Raffensberger, backed by some stout stickwork by Eliel Crabtree, had a little trouble with the Chiefs in winning his 15th of the season run lead as early as the third frame and his first from Syracuse. Les Crabtree belted in two runs with a Scarsella of the Bears had the stuck brace of singles and tallied two with four singles and Glen Gleeson more. It was Raffensberger's 18th victory.

Haley, the league's leading hurler, had a little trouble with the Chiefs in winning his 16th of the season and his first from Syracuse. Les Crabtree belted in two runs with a Scarsella of the Bears had the stuck brace of singles and tallied two with four singles and Glen Gleeson got a home run.

FRANCE EXTENDS

European crisis.

A communique announced the cabinet unanimously approved the declarations of Bonnet and the precise definitions which he formulated concerning French policy as well as instructions he sent in this regard to our representatives abroad."

The communique did not specify the nature of these instructions.

Most Serious Crisis Since 1914

Tension in Europe growing out of the seeming deadlock between Germany and France's ally, Czechoslovakia, over the autonomy demands of the Czechoslovak German minority was generally accepted here as the most serious crisis since 1914.

Despite increased governmental, diplomatic and military activity, however, France remained calm.

The army exercises, involving more than 30,000 men, had been scheduled for the area where the borders of France, Germany and Switzerland meet long before the current crisis developed.

The French general staff decided, however, to take the unusual step of replacing troops away on maneuvers with reserves. The 14th division moved into the garrison at Valdhon to replace the 13th, although the latter was waging mimic warfare only a mile away.

Keep French Troops in Field

One unconfirmed report said the troops might be kept in the field as long as Germany keeps her estimated 2,000,000 men under arms.

Although the French cabinet meeting today was planned as a general survey of the foreign situation, general opinion was that there was little more for France to do except to wait. All eyes were turned toward London where key members of the British cabinet were meeting.

Usually well - informed Paris sources said the British government information was that German political unity was based on the belief that France would not fight.

were said to regard possible developments today and tomorrow as "crucial."

The foreign office also denied there was a likelihood of a meeting soon between President Eduard Benes and Hendrich.

Czechoslovakia's seemed to be the coolest nation of the states directly involved. Life seemed normal. Citizens paused at newspaper bulletin boards and displayed interest but not excitement.

Officials said a series of incidents similar to those of last night could be of grave concern to the government.

Policeman is Hit

A policeman was hit with a chair; a Mayor had his collar ripped; Sudeten German guards surrounded a tavern in which were 66 drinking laborers debating politics; a German's joke started a free-for-all in a street; and a Praha storekeeper fought with a German, who tore a cartoon window display in last night's scrap.

The police report said most of the participants had been drinking, but elaborate testimony was sought to show the fights were minor to prevent exaggeration that might lead to misunderstanding between Czechoslovaks and Germany.

Menlein yesterday visited a dozen Sudeten villages, and although he made no formal addresses he did tell village councillors and mayors that "we approach the decisive

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

She grew shrewish then. "You won't take any of the responsibility, will you? It's up to me. If I go, I desert you. That's what every one will say, isn't it?"

"Does it matter so much what they say?"

"Not to you, I suppose. It never did. It does to me."

He moved in his chair. "Katie," he said slowly, "why did you take that letter of mine, years ago? The one from Beverly Lewis?"

She looked terrified. The color drained out of her face. "What letter? I don't know what you are talking about!"

"Then it doesn't matter," he said quietly. "When do you want to leave here? Tomorrow?"

She was still frightened, he knew, when she went up to bed, and she left the next morning. He knew that the departure was final, that she was taking herself out of his life for good. He tried to feel some regret when he kissed her. In a sense he did, at that. She was the last tie he had to his former life. She had destroyed him, doubly destroyed him; but she was Katie, and once she had loved him.

"Good-by, dear; and be happy."

She looked at him. "Happy!" she said. "With my life knocked to pieces! I suppose I just don't understand you, Chris. Maybe I never did."

She went away on that, not looking back, leaving him alone in that dying garden, with his useless hand locked in his pocket, with the wind ruffling his hair, and with a strange, haunted look in his eyes which followed her until she was out of sight.

Now at last she was alone, stripped bare of everything, even his pride. That night for the first and only time since he had been appointed to the hospital staff, he drank himself into a stupor. Then and only then he managed to sleep.

x x x

Katie got her divorce in Reno that fall. She wrote to Chris advising for it, and he drew against his rapidly diminishing bank balance to finance it. He sent the check and then went for a long walk through the farm lands. Long ago he had known that no man could travel two roads at once, yet he had tried it and failed. And long ago also he had rallied through an ashen day like this, watching the leaves scurrying before his feet and thinking that Nature went about her business prosaically, and without emotional nonsense, her only mankind interfered up its life withcraftwrought disturbance—pity, romance, grief and passion. He was young then, or he would have added remorse to the list. He had let Katie go her headstrong way, too busy and too self-engrossed to check her. There had been good stuff in her and he had let her go.

Fourteen years. For fourteen years Chris had loved one woman and for most of that time he had been married to another one. The human heart was a strange thing, he thought. It could go through the gestures of love with one woman and yet hold the image of another. It craved freedom and yet dreaded to be alone; and he who had craved freedom for so long now had it, and it meant nothing to him.

Another phase of his life began that same night.

He was ready for bed and about to take the final drink which would allow him to escape into sleep, when he heard the banging of an old car coming up the neglected driveway, and went down to the door. One of the village men was there, a worried little man, to say that his wife had the croup, and would the doctor look at the child.

"My wife's scared, Doctor. I don't like to bother you, but if you'd come and take a look at her—"

"I'm not practicing; but I'll come, of course."

He went upstairs to throw on some clothes, and to fill the case that bottle of his. He stood for a moment surveying it. Then he went deliberately to the kitchen and up-ended it.

When he moved downstairs again, there was a grim smile on his face. "All right," he said. "Let's go."

He picked up his bag with his left hand and went out into the cool darkness.

He spent most of that night by the child's bed in a small village house, content to be alone, to hear the long crowing intake of air grow less stertorous as the damage to normal breathing, until finally the baby slept. When at last he emerged into the dusk of a wintry dawn, his face showed fatigue, but there was a new set o his shoulders. Once more, he had made a fight—small as it was—and won it. He buried the empty bottle that day in Letitia's garden, along with several of its fellows. That phase was over, thank God!

But if one was over, another was beginning. The news went around the countryside that he was available, and little by little after that the people began to come in. He had no hours, there was no sign on that door of David's. But they came, afoot, in ancient buggies, in mud-spattered cars.

At first he made no charge. Then, finding that this hurt their pride, he let them pay him and David's prices: a dollar for an office call, two dollars for a visit. At the end of the first month he found he had taken in twenty dollars, and was instantly back to those first days of practice in the city, and his statement to Beverly that he had made the same amount.

Noel, coming home that year for Christmas, found him cheerful and more talkative. His right arm still hung useless for all practical purpose but he was increasingly adept with his left, found new skill in the office, interested and filled with importance.

"Now watch this, Noel. Catch the end, will you? Righdo. Hold it tight. That's the way."

The bandage would go on, snug and neat, with the boy's help, and like the bandage Chris felt his hold on life tightening.

He added another Christmas to his list that winter, with Hiram and Noel cutting down a tree in the wood lot, and Chris joining them to carry it home; the horses tittat with the cold air, the tree on the sledge scraping along a snowy lane, and the two men and the boy trudging along beside it.

That night they trimmed the tree, and as last Hiram mounted the ladder and placed an ancient and dilapidated angel on the top. When at last he came down, he looked around him sheepishly.

"The old man always said a prayer about now," he said. "We might just be quiet for a minute anyhow."

x x x

Chris missed Noel when he went back to school. But he was increasingly busy. The country people came in increasing numbers. Sometimes at night a car or a buggy would stop under his window, and he would find himself jolting along through the dark.

Something hard and tight in his chest began to soften; his smile was more spontaneous, his voice more gentle. Here again were the intimate contacts of his early days in practice. It did not matter that he was still earning less than it cost him to live. What mattered was that he had found a place for himself, small as it was.

But he was lonely, lonely as he had never been before in his life. There were long hours empty even of sound, for Mrs. Miller went home after his early supper. Snow came again in January, clogging the roads, banking up against his windows and cutting off most of his outlying cases. He cut a path to the woodhouse and one to Mrs. Miller's cottage, but with one arm it was slow, heavy work. He would put a foot against the shovel, push it under the snow and loosen it. Then a little at a time he could lift it out of the way. His back ached at night with weariness, his hand showed blisters, but he kept doggedly on.

Then just as he had finished, the snow melted, leaving his work to nothing. The roads turned into seas of mud, the paths became small streams of water. Mrs. Miller, plowing along her road, caught a cold which turned into pneumonia, and he had a hard fight for her life.

It was on a day when Mrs. Miller was still sick and things had gone very badly indeed, that Chris saw from the front door to find the village taxi driving away and Beverly on the steps.

"I'm here, Chris." she said simply. "What are you going to do with me?"

He stood still, looking at her. "What do you mean, Beverly?" he said. "I'm going to love you all my life, if you'll let me, and you go back by the next train."

But he opened the door, and she came in. She looked about her—like Katie. She looked only at him, and suddenly, across the hall she put her arms around him and laid her head quietly on his shoulder.

"My poor Chris," she said. "My poor, poor darling. I couldn't bear it. Isn't it time I stayed, Chris? Isn't it time, darling?"

CHAPTER LI.

Chris held Beverly there against his shabby coat, held her as if he could never let her go again. Then he groaned and released her. She was very pale, and suddenly she sat down on one of Letitia's old hall chairs as though she could not stand. She tried to smile, however.

"It wasn't easy to do this, Chris. "Just sit there, darling. Sit there and let me look at you. I've wanted to see you. God knows; but now that you're here, what am I to do with you?" he said. "You can't stay. I'm alone here, Beverly."

"Does that matter, if you need me? Or don't you need me, Chris? Maybe I'm too late—don't know? She slid off her coat and her hat and ran her hand across her forehead, as if to steady herself. "It's time to be honest, isn't it? All between us! I don't know what is true now."

"You can take it from me, my dear," he said quietly, "that what you have come to is true. But things are changed. "I don't want compassion. I don't even—" His voice broke, "am building myself a life of sorts here, and you must try to get my point of view. I can work this out alone. I can even support myself in a small way, perhaps."

"I don't fit into the picture. Is that it?"

"Listen, my darling," he said quietly, violently. "I'm managing. I'm finding myself, if there is such a thing. I grope a bit; that's natural, but I can't come back to you and no woman in the world is going to support me. Not even you, dear."

"You're sacrificing me to your pride, Chris. That's it!"

"I seem to recall that you did something of the sort in me once."

"I suppose that ends it," she said drearily.

"Not at all." He smiled again. "You're coming in to a fire and I'm getting you a drink. Sit still."

He followed him into the back office and watched him while he built up the fire. He was extraordinarily adroit with his left hand, drawing up a chair for her, giving it orders, even sweeping the untidy hearth.

She lay back in that big chair of David's as if she were exhausted, but when he had finished his deliberate, cheerful aloofness like a curtain drawn between them. She felt that she could not go on, that she had reached the end of a road which after all led her nowhere. She sat quite still while he went out to the kitchen.

"Sorry," he said when he came back. "I'm a careless sort of brute and you've had a long trip. If you can endure the sight of the upstairs—it's worse than this—you'd better go and wash up."

He let her go alone, watching her from below with inscrutable eyes—her slim body, her curious air of breeding, her high-held head. Every scene of him grasped for her, to hold her and keep her; but not there, not in that house through the long winter days, not in his life as it was and would be. When she stopped at the top of the stairs and looked down, he was looking up at her.

"My room is straight ahead," he said, "and I'll try to run down a clean towel somewhere."

She stood inside his door, looking about her. Here was the wide bed, with the Star of Bethlehem quilt spread awkwardly over it, the old maple chest of drawers were his small necessities, the few clothes he must require. Beside the bed was a table with an oil lamp and his watch and on the floor a pair of muddy boots. She put her head to her throat. So this was like her now, that he had come and stripped to the bare requirements of living!

She went over and put her hand on a pillow, touching it lightly and then with her eyes filling with tears. Then she went back to the window and stared at herself, there in front like her mother, she thought. She was not young now. She was in her thirties. A terrible fear seized her; it was the girl that he had loved, not her.

"Clean towel in the bathroom," he called, "and tea below when you're ready."

"I'm coming."

She ran a comb automatically through her hair, bathed her eyes with cold water, and went down the stairs again. Her hat was in the hall, and she carried it with her into the room.

"You'd better look up a train for me, Chris."

"Tea first. And do you mind cutting the bread? I'm awkward with my left. Funny, when you think of it! I used to be pretty good with one."

He had drawn a small table to the fire and put a clean cloth on it. The teapot was there, the cups and saucers, a loaf of fresh bread, a pat of butter.

"Pretty quick work. If I do say it," he said cheerfully. "But a pretty good cook, Beverly. I'm a better organized, of course. Noel can't. I'm keep chickens and have a vegetable garden."

"Noel? Who is Noel?"

He gave her a little silence for a moment. He poured out a cup of tea and put it by her right hand.

"I'd forgotten, Beverly. I'm sorry, Noel is Ursula Martin's child, and I look on him as my son. Hiram's mare adopted him long ago. He's the thirty-two son, now, and I wish you'd meet him."

"Don't be sorry. Why shouldn't I know? I like others than myself, Chris. And it doesn't hurt any more to think that."

But for a moment the ghost of Jerry was between them. Chris was talking quickly, driving away Jerry, talking of a man, a boy, and a dog through the summer days, living the fields, fishing, and digging among Letitia's flowers. Beverly felt faintly sick.

"I suppose," she said, "that 'no mere woman could break into that' wimmyvrate!"

"We got along. The going was poor now and then but we managed."

"And the woman? Has she got to go along by herself, Chris? That's rather worse than poor, you know."

He was standing in front of the fire, looking down at her, hiding his eyes with her before he let her go forever.

"Why alone? You're young and very lovely, Beverly. It isn't out late to make : life for yourself."

Chris."

"You don't know what you are talking about. You don't belong here. I do, or I shall in time. And one thing's certain, Beverly. I can't support you, and the last vestige of pride I've got would be hurt if I let you support me. When things get better, if they do—"

She rose abruptly. "Then I suppose I can come back, on your terms! Is that it? No, I'll tell you something I never thought I could do, and you're still too much for me. If I go now, I go for good."

"My darling," he said gently, "I am not altogether the egotistic fool you thing I am. I know this life. I am an aunt of miles going through it, and I know. And I saw some one else try it and fail. I can't—" She made an impatient gesture. "Must you always play God with me and with my life? If that is love—

"It is love, Beverly. Some day you'll see it yourself, but I don't think you always. I've never changed. Perhaps if I cared less—"

"You'd make me happier! That's silly, Chris, and it's sentimental. It is like you. It's pure egotism, sense."

He gave her a twisted smile. "But I am romantic," he said. "Incurably romantic until I look at you."

It was the first time she had seen his hand shaken from him. Now he drew it out of his coat pocket and looked at it, still with that twisted smile.

"You see!" he said. "It doesn't belong to me. I can't give it orders any more. But I'm tied to it. I can't even cut it off."

"Don't, Chris. It's dreadful to hear you. It's your own hand, your dear hand. It's a part of you. And who knows? Some day—"

But he was putting it carefully and slowly back into his pocket.

LITTLE SPACE NEEDED FOR LANDING THIS SAFETY PLANE"

Designed by Emil Kropf, noted German stunt flier, this new "safety plane" is seen leaving the ground at a sharp angle just after taking off. As the name implies, the airplane was designed for the utmost possible safety and requires little room for landing. It has a wide speed range, being able to attain more than 200 m.p.h. and slow down to 20 m.p.h.

FIRE SWEEPS OVER PHILIPPINE CAPITAL'S SLUMS

Rolling over the city in dense, black clouds is the smoke from the fire that roared through Tondo, thickly-populated slum area of Manila, Philippine Islands, sweeping before it hundreds of homes. The picture was taken at the height of the conflagration, which despite the great amount of property damage caused, as well as numerous injuries, was free from loss of life.

TWO HAVE LUCKY ESCAPE IN HAMILTON CRASH

Caught in a downdraft as it took off, this airplane, piloted by John Brooks, of Hamilton, Ont., failed to gain altitude and crashed to the ground, severing four high tension wires and narrowly missing two trucks on a nearby highway. Passengers in the plane were Miss Ethel Milner, 19-year-old nurse, but both she and Smale escaped with bruises. Below, up, the accident took place at the Hamilton civic airport. The high tension wires struck the top of the wings, carried 4,000 volts and rescuers who rushed to the wreck were surprised to find the occupants alive.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop were taking a walk for pop's health, and Sam Cross started to go passed and I said to him, Hay Sam, have you got that cent?

You'll get it, dont worry, Sam said.

And he kept on going, me saying to pop, Darn that guy. I mite of known better than to of loaned him a cent. I bet I'll never get it if I live long enough to have white whiskers. What do you know about a guy that borrows a cent for 2 days and then dont give it back for 2 weeks and maybe never? I said.

I know plenty about such guys, and I think you ought to take steps about it, pop said, and I said, Wot O. I've asked him enough, what steps can I take.

You can take drastic steps and tell him them with you pop said. We'll go to his house rite now and we'll begin by pounding and kicking on the front door, he said, and I said, Well-gosh, pop, why I mean cant we ring the doorbell?

Well all rite, we'll ring the doorbell, but that seems like a half way measure to me, pop said. I only hope his father comes to the door because I dont like his father's looks much, and I'll demand that a cent from him, and if he refuses to know what business it is of mine I'll take him by the neck and shake the cent out of him. Come on, I just hope old Cross is home, pop said, and I said, Well O, pop, never mind, I think maybe I can get it myself.

All rite then but in that case, never dun a creditor in public, it's bad form and I even believe it's illegal in certain parts of the country, do you see what I mean? pop said, and I said, Yes sir.

Wich I did.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Pure water: In 1766 Cavendish exploded a quantity of hydrogen and a quantity of oxygen and obtained water, pure water, which can not be obtained from rain or snow where in nature. This was the first time that the composition of water was proved. Natural water contains, besides oxygen and hydrogen, some minerals dissolved in it; and when the total content is high, it is known as hard water. Hard water may be very pleasant to the taste but readily lather in it, it is not hot because it does not agreeable for cleansing purposes. Many cities, besides purifying their water supply also soften it and save their citizens many dollars in soap.

French Army Commission Weighs Crisis in East

Hasten War Plane Shipments Is Aim of France and Britain

Washington, Aug. 31—(AP)—Great Britain and France, facing a crisis in Europe, are making every effort to hasten delivery of the warplane reinforcements they have ordered in the United States, informed persons indicated today. However the craft were not expected to be ready for shipment for four or five months.

The German-Czech situation, which occasioned the appeals for quick delivery, is receiving the closest study by President Roosevelt and State Department officials. Should conflict break out in Europe before the planes are completed, the United States presumably act might prevent their shipment.

Great Britain has ordered 400 reconnaissance and training planes in the United States—200 from the Lockheed Company and 200 from the North American Aviation Corporation. France has ordered 100 pursuit planes from the Curtiss-Wright.

France preceded Britain, through manufacturers here, in taking the first formal step toward obtaining licenses from the munitions control board for the export of the planes.

Licenses totalling $5,000,000 were issued for French planes last month, but shipments have not started. British has not yet applied for the licenses.

Licenses for shipments to Germany totalled $136,384, consisting almost entirely of civil airplanes. Before the six months licensing actions control board, however, three are listed as war material.

BACK-TO-LAND SCHEME PRESSED BY ASSOCIATION

Many Receiving Relief Are Able To Operate Farms

RECOMMENDATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 31.—(CP)— Many receiving relief in Canada and other urban municipalities are able to operate farms and should be placed on them as a back-to-the-land scheme, the Ontario Municipal Association was told today. A formal resolution attracting the farm plan was presented by a special relief resolutions committee.

The government should consider the advisability of establishing farms of sufficient acreage to bring costs in various areas of municipalities, the committee recommended, pointing out that costs of living vary greatly in the province.

Other recommendations of the five-man committee headed by C. D. Hayes of Fort William, Ont., were: The government should arrange an inter-provincial settlement regarding residence of relief recipients; that hospitalization costs for non-permanent residents should be charged to municipality in which they become ill.

Bad housing conditions are driving people into hospitals at a heavy drain on public treasuries, Alderman Peter Grant of St. Catharines said. He contended however that the housing question was essentially a government and a municipal responsibility and that municipalities were unable to accomplish anything like what the Ontario government launched a housing scheme. Thereby saving health and providing employment.

CEMENTKARRIER AT GOV'T. DOCK

Laden with 800 tons of black coal, destination for Corbyville through the Schuster Company Ltd., the white-painted Cementkarrier of Montreal registry, normally employed in freighting cement from the Lake Ontario plant to ports of Toronto and the east, arrived in the government harbour here this morning and proceeded at once to directly unload through her conveyors.

Piloted by Captain Knudsen, web footed mascot of the vessel, the freighter had no interested audience of many spectators as she warped in at the dock addition. Diesel powered, the Cementkarrier is one of the most modern freighters on the lakes and was loaded at Charlotte, New York, this week.

At the same time the coal carrier Henry Darrywe, was busily engaged at the Belleville pier where she was loading 1150 tons of coke from Montreal to the company.

SUDETEN SPLIT GROWING WIDER SOME FEAR CLASH

Conservative Group Dreads Possibility of War in Czechs

CZECHS WORRIED

By ALVIN STEINKOPF
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Praha, Aug. 31—(AP)—A growing split in the Sudeten German party over the question of peaceful solution of the long-standing dispute between Czechs and Germans over minority rights.

The radical element of the Nazi-supported Sudeten party wanted to reject a government compromise proposal which would grant the demands for territorial autonomy.

The conservative group, however, fears the menace of war and which knows that much of a clash would be fought on Sudeten territory—is urging that the government's plan to divide the Czechoslovak nation into self-governing cantons be accepted as a basis for negotiations.

Show of Solidarity

At party headquarters a show of solidarity was being maintained.

But it was obvious there were difficulties within the party. One group led by Deputy Karl Frank, who is known as extremely friendly to the Germans, and another element following the leadership of Deputy Konrad Henlein, the latter's personal friend.

Between the Sudeten subchieftains was the leader, Konrad Henlein, the last to make a decisive word. The British mission seeking to mediate the dispute was expected to confer today to discuss the situation with his "political friends." Whether he meant such "political friends" are to be found in Germany.

Attempt at Understanding

A conference between Kundt and President Benes yesterday indicated the President was trying to reach at an understanding with the Sudeten Germans through the conciliatory efforts of the party reformed circles believed.

The Czechs were worried by a continuation of a sharp press campaign in Germany against Czechoslovakia.

"But it is to be hoped hence[with" remarked the newspaper Lidove Noviny, "that Germany still may be persuaded not to use its strongest measures and there is the possibility it will content itself with exerting strong pressure."

Aside from a few more tavern brawls in which excited Czechs and Sudeten Germans tried to settle the issue with fists, Czechoslovakia was quiet. Authorities reported such brawls—of which two were reported by police in the smoking public last night—were being exaggerated by the German press, although there was a deep concern that such conflict become a serious incident.

LOWER TAXATION ON REAL ESTATE IS ADVOCATED

But 'What Are We Going to do About it' Asks Brantford Man

SOCIAL SERVICE

Real Estate Goose That Lays Golden Egg Gets Smaller

Toronto, Aug. 31—(CP)— Municipal taxation in Ontario is high "because citizens are demanding more services", C. C. Middleboro, Owen Sound solicitor and city clerk, declared today in an exhaustive analysis of the question before the Ontario Municipal Association annual meeting.

"What are we going to do about it?" asked E. A. Darby, Brantford city treasurer, in complementing him. Mr. Darby urged it was necessary to lower taxation on real estate. Then building would be revived and employment stimulated.

Five Reasons

Mr. Middleboro gave five reasons why he believed Ontario tax rates were high:

1. Social services provided by local authorities have increased 10-fold in the past few years.

2. Communication services have had to keep pace with motor traffic needs.

3. Educational policies have forced huge expenditures for building, equipment and larger teaching staff.

4. Police protection, public health and other departments, of local government have had to expand to keep pace with popular demand for more and more service.

5. Finally, the basis of taxation has been shrinking.

Golden Goose Smaller

"Through depreciation of real property and steady increase in exemption, the goose that lays the golden egg is getting smaller. How much smaller it can get and still lay larger and larger golden eggs each year is a problem for experts other than I," he said.

George Wardrope of Port Arthur favored a greater tax on income than on real property. Then, when a man lost a job, he would not forfeit the home on which he put so much work.

Heavy Social Service

Municipalities must be given some other way of raising money or be released of the heavy social service costs now borne by them, Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto declared today in welcoming delegates to the 40th annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association. The meeting opened in Toronto yesterday in city hall here.

The association had done much good in the past, said Toronto's Mayor, but never was its work so

FAR MORE MOBILE ARMY ON FOOTING FOR MORE MOBILE

French Opinion Favors Benes' Plan of Cantonal Government

ESTIMATE OF NUMBERS

Chamber Demands All Data on German Mobilization

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Paris, Aug. 31—(AP)—The powerful French army commission was called to meet today with Edouard Daladier, Premier and National Defence Minister, to weigh possible effects of the mobilization of a huge German army.

The commission of the Chamber of Deputies announced that Daladier bring to the meeting (at 10 a.m. (EST) all information the French secret service could gather on the extent of German military preparations. It was the French government estimated numbered 2,000,000 men. (German sources estimate 500,000 to 1,000,000 men will be in the field on fall manoeuvres by mid-September.)

More Mobile Footing

It was reported unofficially the commission might take steps to put the French army on a more mobile footing, should it be necessary to back up promises to defend Czechoslovakia if she were invaded by Germany.

The cabinet yesterday reaffirmed that promise unanimously, a formal military spokesman announced.

The army commission's 44 members include a large percentage of the total number of deputies who often is called the "little chamber" and was said to be composed particularly with the accelerated preparations along the French frontier.

Ultimate Concession

Informed French opinion was that the plan of self-governing agreement which President Benes reported to have offered the Sudetenties was not only reasonable, but represented the ultimate concession that Czechoslovakia could make and still retain national unity.

Fears in Paris centred on the possibility the Sudetens would reject the plan, leading to a deadlock in negotiations which might not be broken except by resorting to force.

Police to Determine Contents of Bomb Placed on Window Sill

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 31.—(CP) Police are seeking to determine the contents of an home-made bomb, placed on the window sill of the home of John Ulicne, an employee of Walker Metal Products, Limited, early this morning.

John Pitka, 33, a former employee of the Walker Company, was taken out of the picket line surrounding the plant and booked at police headquarters for investigation following the finding of the bomb.

Ulicne turned over to the police a half pint can with a fuse wire attached.

An examination of the fuse reveals that it had been lit but had gone out before the fire reached the contents of the can.

COOLER WEATHER IS WELCOMED BY FAIR VISITORS

Tuesday's Attendance is Highest Yet For Some years

GOOD PROGRAM

Cooler weather, welcomed by visitors, exhibitors and stock alike which ushered in today's second day of the annual Belleville Fair apparently has put a damper on threatening weather during the morning and the steamy heat of the afternoon.

But yesterday, even though it had its drizzling spells, the weather this morning by Fair officials following considerable tabulating, to have been a good day, one of the best for some time past when compared with other opening days of free admissions for the children, and slight attendance annually recorded for the opening. Today will be even better and a noticeable increase in attendance will be experienced until the last afternoon, Friday, when the weather man will interfere with present optimistic hopes.

Tuesday night the gates clicked more often this morning since nine o'clock when the first of the last of the cries of the dying men for their wives and children.

Mrs. Ernest Simmons, Marble Street, Patrick Di Marco and Joseph Forte, placed as the guests as they described how their four fellow cell-mates weakened and died, while others moaned in their terror for water and for the heat to be turned off.

Di Marco said: "I told them some died. They (the guards) replied, 'That's their hard luck'."

Each witness blamed Smith and Rogers for refusing them water as punishment for taking part in a hunger strike.

During the hearing spectators were barred from the courtroom to prevent a possible demonstration. The guards did not testify. Di Marco one of the first prisoners placed in the "screws" cell, said he knew when he described the last night there.

"The boys were hollering, 'we can't make it,' " he recalled. "No handshaking like many other figures were red hot—you couldn't touch the metal walls, were red. The floors were mild, though.

"We used water from the Hoppers (toilet bowls) for drinking and washing."

Could Use Live Steam

Meanwhile, Governor George Earle, disclosed to newspapermen after a private visit to the prison that the punishment cell block was equipped with a device for forcing live steam directly into the cells.

"By a simple turning of the valve you can turn on the water or another valve," he said, "live steam can be sent into the cells from the boiler toilets."

Pardon Governor said Warden William Mills told he knew nothing about the existence of the mechanism.

Earle, blaming the deaths of the four men on "grim gruesome circumstances over which we never lived", took steps to prevent a similar tragedy. He ordered state officials to inspect all county prison and town 'lockups' once a week.

CONVICTS CHARGE PRISON GUARDS 'TURN ON HEAT'

Coroner Promises Drastic Action Against Those Guilty

PRAY FOR MERCY

Philadelphia, Aug. 31.— (AP) — An investigation into the "oven cell" deaths of four Philadelphia County Prison inmates apparently had a climax today at an inquest which Coroner Charles Breach said would result in "most drastic action against those guilty."

Figuring prominently in the proceedings were two prison guards, who testified they built on humidifier charges and accused by three convicts of "turning on the heat" which baked to death the men in stuffy punishment cells ten days ago.

The convicts, among 31 who survived a "heat cure" told yesterday at a hearing for the guards, Francis Smith, 43, and Alfred Brough, 39, of spending three days and nights in cells heated to high temperatures by a battery of radiators in a corridor.

They told of fellow prisoners pulling the cover of one's attempt to take his own life by bolting his head against the hot concrete wall and of the cries of the dying men for their wives and children.

Di Marco said: "I told them some died. They (the guards) replied, 'That's their hard luck'."

Each witness blamed Smith and Rogers for refusing them water as punishment for taking part in a hunger strike.

Latest Zeppelin Built in Germany To Be Floated by Hydrogen Gas

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Aug. 6, 1937.

31—(AP)—Germany's latest zeppelin, the LZ-130 is to take to the air for the first time next week, lifted by hydrogen gas as was the Hindenburg because of the prohibition helium still is not available.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, pioneer in zeppelin navigation, is to be command ore of the flight of seven hours the belief in the soundness

The new ship will carry a crew of 30 and 50 passengers and said passengers are not to be carried until she is filled with helium.

Dr. Eckener's determination to fly now, although the LZ-130 is without the helium which Germany has been unable to obtain from the United States, led to widespread conjecture that efforts are being

LOOK TO BERLIN, PRAHA FOR MOVE IN CZECH CRISIS

British Observers Collect Data of Incidents in Bohemia

HENDERSON TO BERLIN

Ambassador Does Not Carry Note to Adolf Hitler

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 31—(CP Cable) — The British cabinet lifted its collective eye to Berlin and Praha today in anticipation of the next development of the complex Czech crisis.

Still answers to the following questions are supplied by events, the British public is likely to be that of watchful waiting:

1. Will the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia show a spirit of compromise?

2. Will the Czech government go far enough to meet the Sudeten German halfway in their demands?

3. Will Chancellor Hitler of Germany step into the anti-Czech and anti-British press campaign which is aggravating an already critical situation?

Henderson to Berlin

Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador to Berlin, returned there by airplane this afternoon. It became more and more plain he did not carry back a note from Prime Minister Chamberlain to Hitler. What he had is full of knowledge of British policy, ready which it can drop in the most fertile ground.

The British action depends on events. At the moment the focus is on the conversations between Sudeten German and Czech authorities with the hope they will develop into a basis for settlement.

Policy Outlined to Ambassador

Behind the scenes there is growing feeling in official circles that any country or party concerned in this dispute which shows a lack of a real desire to cooperate in amicable solution would be guilty of "criminal folly."

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax today received the Ambassadors of the United States, France and the Spanish government and it is understood outlined British policy in full to them.

Observers in Bohemia

London, Aug. 31—(Ar)— Great Britain placed a ring of secret observers today in Bohemia to help keep her informed on that troublous home of Nazi-dominated Sudeten Germans.

Two considerations dictated the action. One was that a provocative press campaign in Germany against Czechoslovakia would stir up really dangerous and war-producing incidents. The other was that Chancellor Hitler, self-styled protector of the 3,500,000 Sudeten German could start a campaign which would refuse to let his Lieutenant Konrad Henlein and the Czechoslovakia newest peace plan—a scheme for granting her minorities, including the Sudeten Germans a measure of self-government like that of the Swiss Cantons.

Report Small Incidents

From the observers, Great Britain wanted accurate, reports on the daily small incidents in Czechoslovakia—bar-room brawls, fistfights and the like which German newspapers reported as "terror and brutal Czech methods", "ruthless aggression," "atrocities" and "a pall of violence."

While the British Government awaited these reports, every answer to the Czechoslovak peace plan, the fear it would be rejected appeared to have a firm foothold in Britain.

The Band is en route to the Canadian National Exhibition where it will play this week.

CONDITION FAIR DOCTOR STATES

The condition of John Daley, 67 year old Hungerford resident, and inmate of the Hastings County Home, who was severely injured in an automobile accident yesterday afternoon, was reported to be unchanged by hospital authorities this morning.

The elderly man was rushed to hospital suffering with severe facial lacerations while his skull is believed to be fractured. Dr. Kennedy, who attended the injured man following the accident said his condition was fair.

ESTABLISHES RECORD PICKING TOMATOES

Establishing what is believed to be an all-time record, Gerald Spencer, Hillier resident, picked one hundred and twenty bushels of tomatoes in nine hours' work yesterday.

Picking fifty bushels in four hours work in the forenoon on the farm of his father, Clarence Spencer, he rounded out a good day's work by picking seventy bushels in five hours in the afternoon off the vines of a neighbor. Willie Pettingill, Spencer averaged thirteen bushels an hour.

32-POUND LUNGE CAUGHT IN LAKE

Fishing at White Lake, near Crowe's Landing this week, F. Allison of this city, joined the ranks of local fishermen who have been able to land one of the bigger ones. Trolling for lunge, the local man managed to capture one of the largest taken from the lake this season, a 32-pound specimen, which fought a lengthy battle before being hooked. The lake is one of the smaller ones not marked on ordinary maps of the northern district.

SOME REFUNDS FOR RELIEF GRANTED

Belleville is very much in the same position as the city of Windsor, where investigation has revealed that of the approximate amount of $30,000,000 spent on relief in that city during the past nine years, only 40 cents has been paid back by a grateful recipient. It is stated by the local relief office.

The city's record, however, may be a bit better than that. On a few occasions it has been admitted some refund has been made, but they have been small ones.

In Toronto, it is reported, 260 former indigents now have jobs, are making refund payments to welfare authorities which total $4,722 to date.

CITY HALL AND TOWER ARE NOT OUT OF LINE

To settle definitely the question of whether the city hall building and tower are out of plumb caused by settling of the lower masonry during the many years of its existence, instruments were employed by City Engineer Chas. Mott this morning to make a complete check of the building.

"It's just as straight as a plumb line could make it," was the statement of the city engineer after a careful check of the building.

There have been statements that the building is out of plumb, but if it is, the incline is so slight that our instruments can't detect it."

It is admitted, however, that strong winds do affect the building, causing a decided sway, but all tall buildings are subject to this, and wind stress is taken into account at the time of construction.

ORNAMENTAL WORK IS QUITE ENDURING

Concrete ornamental work as enduring as the ages was placed on the upper sections of the city hall tower at the time of the construction of the building, it is agreed by local contractors and experts following inspection of sections of the cement facade removed on Tuesday morning's early electrical storm when a bolt of lightning made a direct hit on the south face of the tower.

Heavy pieces of the concrete recovered by the office of the city engineer upon examination were found to be of a dense mass. Very fine sand and some other binding ingredients with which cementmen are not familiar were used over a century ago to give the work solidity.

POTATO CROP HEAVY IN PRINCE EDWARD

In spite of the fact that the quality of Irish cobbler potato that yielded forty-eight barrels from a bag of seed, was harvested by Gerald Ackerman, South Bay farmer, the other day.

START NEW WING FOR COUNTY HOME
Spacious Basement For Wing is Nearly Completed

Completion of the spacious cement basement, the foundation of a four thousand dollar addition to the Hastings County Home, marked another step towards the erection of the new wing that will fill a long felt want at the institution.

The addition when completed will include film escape, sun porches, dormitory rooms and accommodation for the sick of the Home.

Glassed in sun-porches will be a feature of the three-storey addition, while the basement will house laundry supplies and other equipment of the institution.

Trenton for electric wiring and plumbing were placed the other day with Hibbard Electric and Howe and Hagerman, respectively. The new wing is expected to be completed within two months.

A subterranean pass for the accommodation of aged inmates who in the course of their daily routine have to cross the highway at this point, is now under construction by the Department of Highways. A short distance away a cattle pass is also being built to enable the stock of the institution to go to pasture without fear of accident or delay of traffic.

JAPAN REJECTS ON ALL COUNTS U. S. PROTEST

Admitted Attack Continued After Plane Alighted on River

Tokyo, Aug. 31—(AP)—The Japanese government tonight rejected on all counts the protest of the United States against the destruction of a Chinese-American airliner near Canton, South China, by Japanese warplanes on Aug. 24.

The Japanese reply to the protest delivered Aug. 26 by Ambassador Joseph Grew admitted, however, that the attack of Japanese planes continued after the airliner had alighted on a small river between Canton and Macao.

Fourteen persons aboard the plane, all Chinese, are believed to have been killed, either by Japanese bullets or by drowning, the only North American aboard, Pilot H. L. Woods of Winfield, Kas., escaped injury and two Chinese survived, one wounded.

The United States note registered "emphatic protest" against "the jeopardizing in this way of the lives of American as well as other non-combatant occupants of unidentified civilian planes" and also pointed out that the destroyed airliner was the property of the China National Aviation Corporation, in which "Pan American Airways has a very substantial interest."

Information Different

The foreign office spokesman said Japan was compelled to reject the protest because Tokyo's information differed from that apparently reaching the American authorities.

The American version, first drawn chiefly from Pilot Woods, who reported that five Japanese planes locked the plane into a 5,000-foot route from Hong Kong to Chungking, machine-gunned it in the air, compelling him to set it down on the river, and continued the machine-gunning after the plane had alighted.

"I can say positively that the machine-gunning ended as soon as the plane's identity was established" the foreign office spokesman asserted. He did not say, however, when the identification was made.

Disclaims All Guilt

Japan's reply, handed to Grew tonight, disclaimed all guilt in the destruction of the airliner and, in effect, denied that the incident was of concern to the United States.

It asserted the contention that "the plane acted in such a manner as to invite suspicion." It asserted that the circumstances to which the aircraft in question belonged being a Chinese juridical person, the incident is not one which involves Japan directly with any third power.

The reply contained the admission that "during the brief period (after the plane had alighted) which among our craft continued the attack" but it also referred to "wide discrepancies between the pilot's account of the incident, as given in your excellency's note, and reports in the hands of the Japanese government."

FAIR VISITORS SHOULD INSPECT LIVESTOCK SHOW

Probably Not as Large as in Former Years But Better in Quality of

SPLENDID HORSES

Sheep And Swine in Abundance And of Fine Quality

A visit to the Belleville Fair would not be complete without an inspection of the livestock now stabled on the grounds. A fair is primarily for the showing of the products of the farm and that is most important to the farmer is the showing of livestock, in which can be seen the advancement that is being made in the industry. As the reporter was making his rounds of the grounds on Tuesday afternoon, he noticed the Hon. T. A. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture, devoted his time to the industry by sitting on a box near a ring with a group of Ayrshire cattle and the owners as one farmer would talk to another. He was obtaining first hand information of the cattle interests in this section and before leaving the owner, complimented him on his fine herd.

The cattle exhibit is probably not as large as in former years but the reporter is of the belief, that the quality is considerably higher and that farmers generally are not all rearing a better grade of cattle through pure bred sires but that the grade is better than in the standpoint. The same can be said of the horses exhibited, the farmer clinging to the general purpose and rapid disappearance of the horse in this district some years ago. The harness horse is fast being displaced by the automobile but they are still some, who love a good horse and good horses are in abundance on the fair.

Beginning to Raise Stock

Again the farmer is beginning to raise stock, especially in the horse field, and it was surprising to see the number of mares quartered at the grounds with foal by side. These little animals were the pick of the youngsters, who thronged the grounds and no doubt they enjoyed the day for it meant an extra treat for apple will be in trouble in showing off before the crowds. The sheep and swine exhibits are also numerous than last year and it was with difficulty, that the directors of the various sections of the show found proper housing for the animals. All the stock seen on Tuesday was in prime condition showing, that crops are of excellent quality and good quantity this season.

There are three fine herds of Ayrshires, owned by the Carlebrook-side farm of M. E. Rutherford, Bonar Law, Maplevale Farm owned by T. D. Creighton of Bath and Alex Stone and Son, Consecon, Ontario. Mr. Rutherford is showing 28 head with the oldest animal four years while his sire bull, Ardmachal Sunset two years old was first at the C.N.E. and second at Royal Winter Fair as a yearling. Mr. Rutherford is disposing of a large number of his cattle to U.S. buyers this season and four outstanding shown will be shipped to Grove School at Lakefield at the conclusion of the fair. MacFarlane to Trinity Church was conducted by the Rev. A. E. Pepper, rector. The late Mr. Hart passed away at his home on Thursday night following a lengthy illness.

Although he had lived a rather retired life during the late years of his life the late Mr. Hart was born of a very high parentage, his father being the late Sir Robert Hart, sometime British Ambassador to China. Mr. Hart during the Great War enlisted in the United States and although he did not have a permanent residence in this community where he was a popular and respected resident, Mr. Hart at one time took active interest in sporting activities in the village although of late years he was forced to abstain from all such activities.

A Secret

A local resident has adopted a very peculiar habit recently of eyeing one and all day suspiciously before approaching them and then it seems he does it very gingerly.

The reason for this apparently unwarranted procedure came about in a rather unusual manner and through no fault of the littles at all. The other night this resident was returning home when he spied a 'cat' and being of a very kindly nature he stooped to pet the cat before passing on and immediately afterwards he noticed a peculiar odor permeating in his immediate vicinity. Ordinarily when he passed a fellow who has indulged rather and chat but this night every resident seemed to have an important appointment in a remote spot—at least it was remote from the vicinity of this unfortunate resident. But to make matters worse when he arrived home his wife remarked that being a cordial one was a complete stranger for the first time in his married life he found himself being ushered out of his own home and on the porch until he had changed his attire and now the cat family have a true and valued friend through the treacherous activities of one of their fellow animal friends.

A Trio of Soap Box Derby Champions

ERNEST YOUNG

Ernest Young, thirteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, 4 Pine Street, who finished second to Bob Wilson in the race for the Canadian Soap-Box Derby title held at Belleville under the auspices of the Kinsmen Club, and later went to Toronto to drive a thrilling race to eliminate Barney Wright, in the grand championship race for the Toronto title. Previous to annexing the grand championship, he, with Wright, showed a clean pair of wheels to the cream of the Queen City drivers in a race that thrilled ten thousand spectators. Ernie is a happy competitor with his pals, and entertains high hopes of winning the Canadian title next year, and representing his country at the world's championship races held in Akron, Ohio.

At Akron, Ohio, he held high the banner of Canada, finishing third in the international race sponsored by Chevrolet Motor Division after eliminating Australia and South African entries. Bobby is a brother of George Wilson, who won the coveted Canadian honors a year ago, and represented his native city and country at the World's Championship events held in Akron, Ohio. All drivers in the championship races held at Akron must be sponsored by a newspaper—Bobby raced under the colors of the Ontario Intelligencer of Belleville. His racing car advertising this sponsorship in large letters.

He prides himself on his ability to drive, and took a great interest in winning the title in his class at the Toronto Danforth Santmen Men's Association picnic.

"We showed those Toronto fellas what speed was," Barney grinned after his victory. "But just watch me smoke in the race held here next year."

Suffered Crucifixion

Because he refused to join his former comrades in a crime spree of a new series of burglaries, 27-year-old Edward Collins, Reno, Nev., executive, was literally crucified by two men. This was the story he told police when he was rescued from a wooden cross to which his hands and feet had been nailed, by motorists who heard his screams. Collins was released from prison three months ago and declared that his decision to go straight angered former confederates.

ONE MAN OR A PEOPLE

The other day the Right Honorable Winston Churchill spoke of vast issues resting with one man in the present state of the world. And the newspapers of the past few days have suggested that a semi-personal letter from the head of the British government may be sent to this one man, urging upon him the fullest realization of the perilous state in which the world is. Of course that man is Adolf Hitler, German Chancellor and dictator.

Few people would desire so great responsibility like this. For with the honor whatever it is, goes a duty, under which a man might well shudder, lest he err.

Fortunately in democratic lands there is a voice of the people, which counts and the leaders are the men who express and carry out the united will of democracy. In this are great men to whom is handed the duty of carrying out the wishes of the people and yet who themselves are subject to the direction and will of the people. This democracy may be more cumbersome in reaching a decision and the point of action, but it is practically always the voice of justice. At any rate it is the combined opinion of the people and is likely to be right, whereas the will of one man is not so likely not to err.

The will and mind and interests of one man cannot develop indefinitely, but under the Anglo-Saxon democratic system, the interests of the state can develop down the corridors of time as British liberty has done. Never has British liberty so reached and fallen backward as has Germanic liberty. The development of the latter country of course was broken by the war and militarism and consequent results.

Under British democracy which slowly broadens down from precedent to precedent, power awful in its extent may be given into a man's hand to carry out for the benefits of the nation and the world. That man is the servant of the people, not the dictator of the people.

PRESERVING CALM

The calmness of the British people again is tested, but the calmness remains among this amazing people who have grown up in the islands of the sea. This is probably the modern emergence of social development of the British Isles, of their freedom down the ages, that makes them calm in the face of peril or the threat of war. Happy people who can know of danger and yet possess themselves in peace and happiness and work for peace!

HAPPY VOICE AND SMILING FACES AT THE FAIR

A happy merry day was given to the children at the opening of the Belleville Fair. They were one of the main attractions of the fair ground yesterday. They brought what so many adults have long since lost or are losing, that imagination and curiosity which are the wonder of man and the way of progress in individual and social life.

There is nothing like a fair to draw out every faculty of the child. It is something along the line of the circus which puts children into ecstacy. The fair accomplishes the same result, not with the unusual but with the products of the farm and city, and could may not even the most expert farmer and business man questions which will puzzle him, all because the young mind sees so many avenues down which the alert child mentality skips with glee.

If Belleville fair does little more than offer inspiration to the children who attended yesterday and will attend on other days, it will have achieved much. But it does offer more—it inspires the producers themselves as they see what enterprise and breeding of stock and growing of seed and vegetables can accomplish.

TWO-WAY RADIO FOR POLICE

Two-way radio for police cars is likely in Toronto.

Here is another link being forged to tie the hands of bandits and other offenders against the laws.

Bandits for instance steal cars often without radios in the perpetration of their hold-ups and hence are not likely to know what clues the police are receiving over the radio. Thieves have to go under cover and must have stolen cars. Any other cars would be a give-away.

When the policeman in the patrol car can talk back to the police headquarters, the efficiency of radio will be many times increased in catching bandits.

It is a safe venture to say that radio has

SPOTLIGHT OF PUBLIC ATTENTION IS FOCUSSED ON TAXATION, municipal and other forms. Newspapers are asking in large type on the Front Page: HOW FAR CAN TAXATION GO? Property owners tell us that property is taxed for all things it benefits by and a whole lot more, just because that seems the easiest way to raise money for municipal purposes. Some taxpayers get so angry they rear and tear and almost go over backward, while others calmly study the situation and seek a remedy. Uncle Sam, it seems, is afflicted with the same growing pains, and one chap over there put his feelings in words, as follows:

In reply to your request to send a check, I wish to inform you that due to federal taxes, state laws, the present condition of my bank account and sales it almost impossible. My shattered financial condition is due to federal laws, state laws, county laws, city laws, corporation laws, liquor laws, mother-in-laws, brother-in-laws, sister-in-laws, and outlaws.

Through these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, amusement tax, head tax, school tax, gas tax, light tax, water tax, sales tax, liquor tax, income tax, food tax, and excise tax.

I am required to get a business license, car license not to mention a marriage license and a dog license.

I am also required to contribute to every society and organization which the genius of man is capable of bringing into life; to women's relief, to unemployment relief and the gold-digger's relief. Also to every charitable institution in the city, including the Salvation Army, Community Chest, Red Cross, Purple Cross, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Y. M. C. A.

For my own safety I am required to carry health insurance, fire insurance, property insurance, liability insurance, earthquake insurance, tornado insurance, and old age insurance.

My business is so governed that it is no easy matter to find out who owns it. I am inspected, suspected, and disrespected, rejected, dejected, examined re-examined informed, required, summoned, fined, commanded, and compelled, until I provide the inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race. Simply because I refuse to donate to something or other I am boycotted, talked about, lied about, held up, held down, and robbed until I am almost ruined.

I can tell you honestly that except for a miracle that happened I could not enclose this check. The wolf that comes to many doors nowadays, just had pups in my kitchen—I sold them and here is the money.

NUMBERS RACKET WHICH 'DUTCH' SCHULTZ CAPTURED, consolidated, and manipulated until he was bumped off by his associates for getting too greedy—also responsible for the murder of "Legs" Diamond, "Mad Dog" Coli who sprayed children playing in the street with machine gun bullets, and others, is being exposed in the courts of Manhattan but flourishing as usual in Harlem. The seventy-million dollar a year racket would seem to be profitable enough to give the suckers an even break, but now evidence is being offered to show that even in this the drawings are manipulated to give the operators the dirty end of it. Seems as tho' the theme song of the underworld is "Never give the suckers an even break, or anywhere near it."

THAT'S DIFFERENT

Evening wrapped the countryside in a mantle of peace. The boy stood on the bridge, and the happy smile on his innocent face was beautiful to behold.

Beyond the brow of the hill a dull red glow suffused the sky.

"Ah, my little man," said a dear old gentleman passing by, "it does me good to see you appreciate the beautiful effect."

"I've been watching it for ten minutes," replied the boy.

"And do you watch the sunset often?"

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Each Case of Rheumatism or Arthritis Must be Treated Individually

There were so many names given to the various disturbances of the heart that it became necessary to get out a book about the names in which nothing but the names of these disturbances grouped according to the cause, the structure, the action, the strength, the regularity, and other conditions of heart. There is no description of symptoms or treatment in the whole book. The medical profession is divided as to these names.

It would seem that the time is at hand to get out a book on the different types of rheumatism or arthritis.

Dr. Bernard Lawrence Wyatt, Tucson, Arizona, in The Journal of the Kansas Medical Society, speaks of the lack of agreement among physicians regarding the name, cause, classification of the "arthritides", and the modern opinion that the changes in the structure in joints and adjoining tissues merely show an altered condition of the body as a whole.

It was pointed out that patients with one type of arthritis require a much different program of treatment from those with another and that every patient presents a separate and distinct individual problem and distinct individual attention must be given these or individual treatments are rest, removal of infections, bowels, gall bladder, sinuses,—diet—cutting down on starchy foods and in some cases cutting down on liquids also, —eunbathing, vaccines, and a more recent method of blood transfusion causing of an attack of jaundice. When the jaundice clears up it often leaves a great improvement in the condition of the arthritic or rheumatic patient.

This causing of jaundice to a rheumatic patient seems to develop certain defences of the body which have a favorable action on the body tissues affected by the arthritis.

As the rheumatic or arthritic symptoms may return after having been cured or greatly helped by any of the various methods including the jaundice treatment, Dr. Wyatt suggests immediate further treatment by means of rest, both for the part itself and for the whole body, and the stimulation of the natural forces of the body.

W. Y. MILLS OF KINGSTON, SPEAKS

Kiwanian Invites Belleville Club to Attend Convention

An invitation for all Kiwanians of the Belleville Club to visit the district convention to be held in Kingston from September 15-20 was extended at the weekly luncheon on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel by W.A. "Billy" Mills of the Kingston club. The speaker outlined the program that had been decided upon and he stated there might be fireworks at the convention sessions owing to the fact that Canadian Clubs had minor representation on the International body.

The luncheon was presided over by Eddie Logan although the president of the club, Albert Boynton was in attendance. There was no community singing due to the fact both the pianists of the club, Mrs. Riggs and Phil Huddleston were out of the city. Harry Middleton, past president of the Pembroke Club was introduced, while Fred Whyte put on the book which unavoidably absent and George Griffin, Sid Howell and Frank Powell were the winners of the prizes offered. The speaker of the day was introduced by A. B. Collins, K. C. and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Fred Deacon.

Mr. Mills praised the efforts of the Belleville club and believed that the booster idea was a good one as it gave every member of the club a chance to tell his fellow members a little bit about the business he was engaged in. During the course of his address the speaker told a number of humorous stories, that caused the members great merriment. He described in detail the visit of President Roosevelt to Kingston to receive an honorary degree of law from Queens University and the wonderful effect his address had on world affairs. He also described the opening of the new bridge at Ivy Lea and the opening of Fort Henry at Kingston during the recent centenary celebration in that city.

The speaker was of the opinion that Kiwanians are always better Kiwanians after they rub shoulders with other Kiwanians at district conventions and hoped for a large attendance from the Belleville club. A big trip down the St. Lawrence and a dance at night will feature Monday's program while the Governor's dinner and Ball will be held on the last night of the convention.

GERMAN FLEET MANOEUVRING

Fleet Manoeuvres in North Sea Are Called Routine

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP)—Germany's rebuilt navy is holding manoeuvres in the North Sea, it was disclosed today while preliminary army manoeuvres continued in various parts of the country and chancellor Hitler inspected fortifications along the French and Swiss borders.

The fleet manoeuvres began last Friday and may last until the middle of September, the navy ministry said. They were described as "routine." The number of units participating was not divulged.

British Fleet Games

(The powerful British home fleet has been ordered to leave English ports Sept. 5 for Northern Scotland to put on war games in the North Sea. The fleet will not return to its base in the south of England until November. The manoeuvres were described in London as routine exercises, such as are held three times a year).

BUCK LEAPS INTO PATH OF CAR, IS KILLED

Forest, Ont., Aug. 30.—(CP)—Howard Blade of Zurich went deer hunting—with his automobile. Blade said a big buck leaped out from the side of the road into the path of his car and was killed.

Deported as Spy

Capt. Thomas J. Kendrick, British passport officer at Vienna, was ordered deported from Austria by the German government after Kendrick had been imprisoned in his hotel on charges of using his position to act as spy. Kendrick, pictured here during his last visit to England, was seized by German secret police while motoring near Salzburg and British protests were met with orders for Kendrick to leave Austrian territory "within the shortest time possible." He was released without trial.

Powers Wonder If Nazi Germany Has Won Hungary

Fate of central Europe may be decided in the struggle now going on between the Little Entente nations and Germany over the kingless kingdom of Hungary, strategically located in the Danube valley. Admiral Nicholas Horthy's conversations in Kiel and Berlin with Germany's Adolph Hitler—conversations which both expressed fresh sentiments looking to close collaboration between Hungary and Germany in association with Italy—have brought the question to a head. Czechoslovakia, Roumania, and Jugoslavia have been attempting to block expansion of Nazi influence by luring Hungary away

INTERESTING DISPLAYS TO BE SEEN AT FAIR

Artists Fascinate Crowds With Daring Acts as Circus Presented Before Grandstand

Program Climaxed With Daring Slide by Queen of Air

FEATURE ACTS

Clowns Prove Themselves Versatile Performers in Show

Everything to make up a circus but the big tent: clowns, band, acrobats, performing animals, talented artist artists who hope that Death will be taking a holiday, peanuts, popcorn, children, parents, grandparents; in other words, the Garden Bros. Circus, that takes place each night and afternoon of the Belleville Fair before the Grandstand. Audiences had a first taste of the program yesterday afternoon, while last evening, not after fact fascinated the crowds that arrived at an early hour to see this miniature circus, an innovation in Fair programs.

The climax to an evening of entertainment and enjoyment was the most spectacular act of the evening by Miss Orace, the Queen of the Air, dancing for her life on a slide three inches wide, one hundred and twenty-five feet in the air, five hundred and twenty-five feet in length, to the ground. A mistake in seconds the slide was over, and the audience, could breathe again.

Band Takes Part

Belleville Municipal Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Fred Johnson opened the day's show in rousing style with their short concert last evening, and created the proper musical setting throughout the performance. These Belleville musicians must go considerable credit for the success of the evening.

As the Band concluded the opening numbers, there was a rush to the centre of the stage and finally the centre of the grandstand, as a motley circus fashion, they harassed the good natured crowd, and delighted them with their antics.

Owing to the wet condition of the track, the ring for the performing animals was arranged at the left of the platform, and here all manner of circus animals, from tiny dogs to Lindy, the elephant, took the spotlight, to the enthusiastic applause of the onlookers.

Ponies Open Bill

Six military ponies opened the circus bill. They cantered about in twos, threes, alone, played dead, danced on their hind feet, rolled barrels and in tableau formation stood upright with front feet on the top of the backs of them, bowing to the ground, they acknowledged the applause of the crowd.

The clowns proved themselves versatile members of their profession, turning from comedy to difficult acrobatic stunts, sometimes in more clowning. In the Revolving Ladder act, these two performers, apparently about in mid-air, balanced, teetered, and narrowly escaped collision with each other on several different times. Following this number a stretcher was carried to the ring, where a beautiful white Lilly-ferry horse walked daintily gracie, and with the utmost poised motionless on a stand and revolved around on a platform moving with the hind feet. Joined in the ring by a mule the act was completed with a statuesque effect, both animals being motionless.

A Real Artist

Senorita Consuelo, a charming Spanish artiste, performed perilous bar work, high above the ground, swinging by one arms, in one turn, and by her teeth in another. Graphically announced as the "Death Loop," her performance was that of whirling about the highest bar, head over heels, clinging only to the teeth of a swinging arrangement.

Clever indeed was walking a tight rope, walking across the floor on their hind legs, and playing "Loudon Bridge" on a bell heard by all children and older folks.

The program was further brightened at intervals by new pranks of the clowns. The antics of these performers on the Horizontal Bars added to the thrills of the audience, with the climax coming in the dividing the usual merry laugh. A Mirage Riding act introduced two beautiful horses and talented riders, an interesting novelty being presented.

Exploits on Slack Wire

Exploits on the Slack Wire next claimed the attention of the clowns. As one accomplished difficult and hazardous feats, his partner coyly danced around in voluminous night dress.

At this point in the program the Hydro forms a decorative setting for an exhibit that only the Hydro could display. The many electrical appliances which bear the name is famous are arranged in a most attractive form of display, action they drew favorable comment from the many that viewed it yesterday.

Tall, gleaming electric refrigerators form a most attractive setting to the colorful display that is tastefully arranged in the Hydro booth. Washing machines, electric stoves, and ranges artistically placed in the booth are the full many fine points of the different exhibits form a pleasing picture.

A steam electric iron demonstrated by a saleswoman in the attraction of a large crowd yesterday afternoon as reporter passed by and watched his cool being pressed by this up-to-date method.

The size of the exhibit is located a modern electric kitchen, one of the most popular booths as it became many an envious sigh to emanate from housewife. Completely equipped with modern electric fixtures a gleaming white refrigerator, the latest electric stove, with clock, speed cooker, toaster, dishwashers, with sink to match, cabinet, in fact everything in electrical aids goes to make the lot of the housewife an easy one. The kitchen is completely under subdued glow of soft lights that shade overhead.

Ladies Drag Store

Two attractive young ladies tastefully dressed in white uniforms in large crowd of thirsty children and adults at the Ladies Drug Store Booth. Hall hats given away with purchase drew the attention of the ladies. The booth is very attractively arranged, and arrayed in a decorative scheme that pleases the eye.

John Lewis Company

Modern Canadian appliances, said to be the last word in heating system, are displayed in the booth of the John Lewis Company's display. Added to this feature are electric fans of every description, and for the burning furnaces, refrigerators, electric ranges, electric washers in effect in this exhibit is the modern fireplace, complete with log and flitting that gleam in the glow of an artificial fire.

Kitchen Radio Service

Ever more radios, said to be the last word in radio reception are shown in the exhibit of the Kitchen Radio Service display. Grand models that look fine on their mahogany counterparts occupy the spotlight booth with various other models showing up against a tastefully decorated background.

Arthur Bills

A cottage window, complete with lace curtains and flowers, is the setting for the display of shingle siding placed on the exterior wall in the Arthur Bills exhibit. Here can be seen the many colors and shades of shingles that are used in the siding flooring, hardwood flooring and interior finishing. All arranged as to make this exhibit a most attractive one.

J. J. Hibbard

Blue and white decorations gleam from the attractive building radio display where the J. J. Hibbard Co. exhibit scintillates in its colorful setting. Here the latest radio models stand in gleaming glory, soft music emanating from loud speakers that are ingeniously hidden. Small compact models for the small home and large console models round out the exhibit that stands out well. Frigidaire refrigerators, electric ranges also in the Hibbard display, and his weight to bear on the figure of Miss Orace, identification of the victim would be exceedingly difficult. And then there was a final treat in store for the juvenile population. The boys were invited to have a ride on Captain Dan Cadieux's pet calf up dozens of youngsters, who appeared as if by magic. Ten managed to claim a place on Lindy, that act went well until Lindy did the "Big Apple" and threw her riders to the dirt in his back. His small passengers weren't sorry when the jam session was over.

Queen of Air

Thirteenth on the list of acts came The Queen of the Air and this fearless performer Miss Orace, exhibition doesn't bother her one bit. Of all the crowd last evening she was the coolest. On the slide, one hundred and twenty-five feet in the air, without nerves as she took her place before the crowd, gave curtsy gladly and then plunged down from the glittering lights of the bars, through clouds of fear to the earth, clinging only by her teeth to arrive fifteen seconds later at the feet in front of the grandstand. Watching her poised, a tiny figure against the sky, speeding down the slide, on the wire, the crowd was spellbound with admiration and applause when she gracefully bowed before them, the applause was deafening as the band leaders paid tribute to the bravery and daring of the young artist.

Following this act when the King" announced the end of the program and the lights, its entertainment and novelties, tents of trained animals, the human cannon ball artiste of the Fair claimed the attention of the visitors.

POULTRY DISPLAY LARGEST IN THE HISTORY OF FAIR

Building Completely Renovated And Pens Filled to Capacity

SPECIAL PRIZES

Prizes For Entire Pens Enhance Exhibitor's Chances

Rich in plumage the stately poultry exhibit at the Belleville Fair far surpasses any previous showing of chickens, hens, ducks and geese ever in the history of the Exhibition. The premium list of this exhibition is far in excess to that ever displayed in previous years, while the pens are filled to capacity.

Completely renovated, the poultry building at the west end of running water and all modern conveniences of a modern exhibition. The building has been redecorated while Chairman Jack Holley has made a beautifying touch to the spacious evergreens and flowers about the interior.

Ninety-two individual yards are on exhibition and will be judged today, while in the pens there are an additional 28 specials to be completed a total of 120 poultry pens this year. From the stately white leghorns and mammoth Bronze beautifying touch to the sprightly games and Bantams the poultry sections are of outstanding quality and to miss the poultry display at the Belleville Fair would be to miss the entire exhibition.

Turkeys Great Eye

As one enters the building from the south end a gobbling turkey in presence two mammoth pure white turkeys with the conventional tuft of hair in the background. Immediately to the west are the Toulouse geese. Embedded among the pens are of pairs of duck, Rouens, Pekins and Runners, Toulouse and other pens greet the eye at the centre of the building with the larger and heavy breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Jersey Giants are ranged on the floor space while the lighter varieties, such as Bantams, Leghorns, Hamburgs and Polish are displayed in special pens that attract the eye level. Several exhibits of New Hampshires, Cornish and Polish birds were greatly admired yesterday afternoon by the large crowd added special prizes for championship display pens in all conventional classes of poultry this year.

Take a Visit

For an educational few minutes a noted poultry could be spent more than to take a trip through the Poultry Building and visit the Arthur Bills exhibit. Competition for the various championships will doubtless reach its peak as the display of poultry this year by far exceeds that of previous years in quality. Positively the finest exhibition of poultry I ever saw at any large fair, remarked the ageless Chairman Jack Holley as he viewed with admiration the exhibit and gazed pleased displays in the Poultry Building.

BOUNTIFUL ARRAY IN RIOT OF COLOR SEEN IN BUILDING

Fruits, Grain, Seeds And Flowers Well Displayed at Fair

FINE ARTS

Fancy Work Exhibit Excellent in Every Detail

Devoted to the displays of fruits, grains, seeds, flowers and household arts, the third of the Fair Buildings presented a striking appearance, as flowers and fruit in bountiful array commanded the instant attention of the visitor, with the riotous blending of colors that met the eye.

This building has first claim on feminine interest here are displayed the arts of special delight to the homemaker. On one side are grouped examples of needlecraft that are sure to arouse the sincere admiration of those who appreciate the beauty of handwork. While the entry list is not quite as large as previous years, the display is distinguished by the great variety of entirely new work by the originality of needleworkers, and the lovely designs, colors in good color harmony and intricate stitchery.

Fancy Work

Every type of fancy work is found here, and keen competition has been keen in the various lines of work suited to the fancy of the woman, clothing, knitted wear, house dresses, gloves, handkerchiefs, underwear, aprons, baby dress, the handiwork of skilled fingers comprise the most interesting section of the display.

Household linens of a fine, well as durable nature, make a beautiful exhibit. The lace table cloths executed in each crochet are the envy of the city's hostesses. No less artistic and appealing are the embroidered cloths in Italian cutwork, the luncheon sets and doilies. The pillow cases are emphasized the vogue for pastel initials embroidery, in contrast to the pure white which led in popularity for so many years. The fine linen towels and other towels were achieved by cut work drawing, and various forms of weaving. The favoured afghan and cushion sets in bizarre colors, or the more subtle shades, and the brilliant hued hearth rugs of rag design all made a brilliant dash of color in the display.

Fine Crochet Work

The lacey beauty of crochet was seen at its finest in the filet or square mesh, which is the test of the skill of the artist. Exciting admiration were the filet sets in collection of bedspreads, in crochet, knitted silk or rayon. But the most beautiful work of the hour who came to admire were the beautiful bedspreads in the pinnacle of popularity. At Belleville this year will be found some of the most beautiful examples of this particular type of art needlework. Two of the best examples were on white backgrounds, the one in beautiful floral design whose god rim was studded with circles of pastel-toned petit and the other a most unusual design in marvellous quilting, and the other had as a border a raised weave throughout the border and in the centre, of a two-shaded green shell design. Both were of the grape design done in dainty shades. They really appeared to be the loveliness of the articles in this department, many visits are necessary to do justice to the beautiful display of articles for the home beautiful.

Plants, Flowers

Centring the building, to the right is the pantry fill of the plants and flowers section. Foliage plants and potted flowers in bloom vied for favour, with the cut flowers. The exotic colours of the sinnias, the delicate shades of the asters, the tall, the deep autumn hues of the chrysanthemums in brilliant hues ground for the smaller blossoms. Perfect display and artistic and graceful medley of bloom.

Always a matter of particular interest to the visitor is the Bamford display and this year's exhibition surpasses all. The large stature greenhouse, with tiny flower beds, a revelation in what can be accomplished by an artist, with an eye to colour and symmetry of design. Begonias, Gloxinias and fuchsias are presented in a picturesque fashion. The begonias specially is com- positively glamorous with their polished surfaces and rich colours. A new variety is introduced when "eyes" give squash a helicopter look. Here is once again to be congratulated on having scored a signal success in his exhibit.

Fruits, Vegetables

Completing this part of the building are the displays of fruits, vegetables, grains, seeds, honey

'Fair Must Grow Year by Year, Your Fair Has Done This' Hon. P. M. Dewan Declares

Department of Agriculture Fairs Will Receive Every Effort to Improve

INTEREST IN FARMING

"Belleville's Fair, set in well tai'd grounds, and with a beautiful front which showed off fresh green lawns and colorful, well-kept flower beds which immediately attract the attention of the visitor, has shown progress year after year. I can only hope for this continued success, and as long as the directors of the Fair continue to make it a success, you have assurance that the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and myself are behind you," declared Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture in his official opening of the 1938 Fair on the grounds shortly before three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Progress Is Essent'al

"Any fair, like any good farmer, must continue to show progress year after year. Your Fair, I am happy to say, has done this, and you are wholeheartedly behind you," added the Minister.

Mr. Dewan told officials which hold these annual fairs which can always show progress, declaring "They are the ones who do not try to do their part in keeping up with the times. Governments and government should continue to pay fellow farmer. Only a fair is he privileged to learn but what the other fellow is doing, and to find out just how his produce compares. The Fair is the show window of agriculture.

Quality and Standard

"The Ontario Department of Agriculture is anxious to improve and maintain quality and standard and is anxious to elevate the standard of fairs generally, and we must see the sincere efforts of fairs generally to improve. There must be a gradual improvement, and that will in time permit the fair to get along without the Minister of Agriculture's knowledge of extracting money from residents through methods watch

Dewan, following his introduction, and explaining that he spoke from many years of experience as a member and secretary of the Woodstock Agricultural Society.

Those Who Give Services

"It was there I learned the value of the services or those who give of their time and efforts to help them on fair one of the best. Time and service which sometimes is not appreciated by those who have not been connected in such a capacity. I like the work, and I confess, I would be lost if I did not help open several fairs of the Province when called upon."

Returning to Belleville was like returning to familiar scenes, commented the guest speaker, because he was in Madoc that time when Mrs. Dewan taught in high school. Since then close contact has been maintained in this and district.

Increas, Interest in Agriculture

"The aim of any Fair is to increase the interest in agriculture and improve quality of the product at the same time," pointed out the guest speaker. "All should strive to do a little better. It should be the aim of every fair to provide that means of doing better by offering this competition because farmer and government should continue to pay fellow farmer. Only at a fair is he privileged to learn just what the other fellow is doing, and to find out just how his produce compares. The Fair is the show window of agriculture.

Quality and Standard

"The Ontario Department of Agriculture is anxious to improve and maintain quality and standard and is anxious to elevate the standard of fairs generally, and we must see the sincere efforts of fairs generally to improve. There must be a gradual improvement, and that will in time permit the fair to get along without the Minister of Agriculture's knowledge of extracting money from residents through methods watch

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE THIS may be a particularly lively or exciting day, judging by the time the stars are registering, it may not prove to be a particularly happy or successful one. There may be difficulties, inharmonies or disappointments in employment, especially in those professions in which writings, publishing, advertising or contracts of a business nature are involved.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be engulfed in a few days of nervous vexation and loss that may affect their business or employment and have unhappy reactions in their private or home life. This might be caused by the gossip or direct malicious attack from young people in whom you confided, especially if the contact relies to writings, publishing or contracts.

A child born on this day may be nerv.us, high strung, supersensitive and talkative to the extent of Ronald Reagan and Mary Maguire in "Sergeant Murphy" coming to the McCarthy-Theatre.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Announcing a Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend has been married for several months and she wishes to announce the marriage at this time. Please answer these questions.

1.—Is it correct to have pictures in the paper when the announcement is made in this late date?

How should the newspaper announcements be sent?

2.—Is it correct to send wedding cake to friends and relatives?

3.—After marriage what is the proper way to sign one's name?

Reader

1.—My idea of the best form and the best taste of announcing a marriage that has taken place so long before the announcement is made is to announce it with as little fanfare as possible with as little emphasis as possible on the tardiness of the announcement. This is the logical too to me, since the casualness of the ceremony plans is appropriately reflected in the casualness of the form of announcement.

If formal announcements are sent out, if a belated announcement and photographs are sent to newspapers, it most certainly calls attention, unnecessarily I think, to the lateness of the announcement date. However, the couple may not object to this, and if they don't, they may send formal announcements and have an announcement sent to the newspaper. It is they who must figure out the reaction of their relatives and friends to this procedure.

But, no matter what they decide to do about the sending of announcements, they should not send pictures of this sort to relatives and friends. This would be pointless and ostentatious.

Suggest to your friend, if you agree with me, that she spend her money telling the news to relatives and friends who live near, and writing notes to those who live at a distance. Then those most concerned with the news will have been informed. And soon, very soon, the happy news will spread.

2.—Let's say the woman's maiden name was Ann Elizabeth Conway, and that she marries John Robbins, son. Her informal name is now Ann Conway Robbinson. Her letters to her close friends will, of course, be signed Ann. Her in-between letters (say to people whom she does not know very well, but who do know her formal name) are signed:

Very sincerely yours,
Ann Conway Robinson

But when the reader must be informed of her formal name as in business letters, professional letters, and so forth) this is the correct form of her signature:

Very truly yours,
(Mrs. Ann Conway Robinson)
(Mrs. John Robinson)

Graduation Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending out programs and invitations to graduation exercises, is it permissible to write somewhere on them "No gift, please" or something to that effect?

There are some people to whom I would like to send invitations, but I do not want them to feel obliged to bring or send a gift.

B.

I cannot regard this objection of B. concerning the giving of gifts for any occasion as mannerly, though I realize that it is a sore point with all generosity of spirit. Friends should, in my way of thinking, be allowed to do as they wish about giving gifts. Most people like to show such special affection or their devotion or friendship in the form of a gift to mark a milestone in life (it seems ungracious to take this pleasure from them. And I think that those who do not wish to do this will feel embarrassed at not doing it. And nowadays there is such a world of charming and inexpensive gifts that this somewhat solves the problem.

Are Women Responsible For a Man's Philandering?

It seems to me, after several decades, experience in answering all sorts of questions in this column, that the philanderer is born, not made.

He can't help it any more than less favored folk can help a hump, cross-eyes or a hunchback. This is equally true of philanderers of both sexes, for the common gender clause is not confined to either sex. The following letter shows what I mean:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm an army girl and live at an army post. I graduated from a state university last June, came home, made a fell in love with a man of whom my mother and father disapprove. He's been married and divorced. He's handsome, witty, fascinating, and has had a number of affairs.

But I can't help myself. His affairs are his fault. The women, married and single, just won't let him alone. Without being positively rude, he can't turn down their invitations and the way they pile him after-yards. My mother and father don't see things as I do, and tell me it I marry this man I'll be born with them in less than a year's time, but I disagree.

A married man isn't the free-for-all that a single man is, and I am not an unattractive girl. I believe I can hold him. And he has confided to me that when he settles down this time, it means settling down for keeps with him, that he's bored to death with being pursued by silly flirtatious women.

I've always been impressed with Army Girl

Old King Solomon, who seems to have been the super-philanderer of all times, cried out: "Comfort me with apples for I'm sick of love." But I don't doubt for a moment, after he had finished his apple feast, that he went back to philandering.

In the last analysis, my dear, it's up to you to make this momentous decision. Married to such a man, as you describe, you will probably spend your life on the heights of ecstasy and in the depths of despair. But as a friend of mine, who has achieved considerable success in her profession, and who has a husband identical with the one you describe, said to me: "I prefer the martial roller-coaster, rather than plodding along the cinder path with a dull girl."

Which do you prefer? Your decision should be made knowing what you're in for. Any woman who undertakes a skirt-chasing life's road to the altar at her own risk. Every flutter of an eye-lid is the signal for him to flirt, and he can no more help the pursuit than the will-o'-the-wisp which has led travellers from the beginning of time.

Divorce court testimony shows philandering husbands who love their wives dearly, and are not at all upset them more than any other woman, but they never can resist the temptation to have one more romantic adventure. And how these poor unstable creatures have

From the Clouds

By ADELAIDE R. KEMP

Martha drew the old rocker, with its patchwork cushion, closer to the window and in the fading November light looked with disapproval eyes at the dark calico dress she had spread across her knees. The hem, like the skirt, after a long united existence, had parted of one accord, holding remained but the ends of rusty lace at the neck to tell of past splendors.

"I can't ever wear it to church again," she murmured and her face was expressive of disgust. To Martha church was as much a habit as brushing her hair or washing her face. Six days might pass as well wish for an automobile as the price of a new gown.

The clock on the mantel struck five. Martha lifted her eyes and looked down the darkening road. Here and there on the hills a farmhouse dotted the landscape. Not far away rose the spire of the little church. Suddenly she uttered an exclamation. From out of the sky, as it seemed to her, with a noise like the discharge of fireworks, an airplane was wending its way overside. After a series of circles, like a bird with enormous wings, it landed almost at her very door.

To say that Martha was startled would have been putting it mildly. Never in all the fifty-odd years of her existence had she experienced such a shock. The old silk dress slipped from her lap unheeded, she rose hurriedly and crossed the kitchen to the door. By the time her trembling fingers had opened it the great bird-like thing lay quiet.

A curious looking figure had jumped lightly to the ground. Martha felt a momentary inclination to slam the door and shut out such an apparition, but innate hospitality won. The approaching figure had by this time removed a pair of goggles and unfastened the side flaps of his helmet disclosing a most reassuring bronzed young face and eyes blue as the sky from which he seemed to have come.

"I hope I haven't frightened you half to death," he said, a pleasant smile displaying the whitest teeth.

"I heard you coming. You wouldn't have to," retorted Martha answered. She was recovering somewhat from her nervousness. "I never seen one of them things before only in pictures," she added. "I should think they'd scare the birds something awful."

The young man laughed heartily. "Well, I'm wondering as long as I'm here is your name? If you could give me a bite of supper and a bed for the night, a cup of tea and some bread and butter would be plenty. I'd like to tinker on the old plane a little. She's really gets dark. But I wouldn't want to put you out," he added.

Martha nodded. This was the biggest adventure she ever hoped to experience in her life.

"You get your tinkering done. I'll getting dark. I'll have supper ready." "And I'll get supper."

That was the memorable evening for Martha. The young aviator told her of adventures above the clouds in distant countries, during the war that fairly exhausted the strength of her imagination. Supper, too, was forgotten. The old silk dress remained a heap on the kitchen floor. It might have remained there until the next morning had her company not gone to bed. Martha for one last look at his airplane. There was a cushion on the seat, a shoe caught in the folds. He stooped, picked up the shoe and—

"Oh," he exclaimed, "just look what I've done now."

"My goodness," said Martha shamefacedly, "if my old dress hasn't torn lying there. I never you came. I was seeing if I couldn't mend it once more. I'm awful sorry."

"Well I've finished it sure enough with that great foot of mine. I'm awfully sorry."

In the bright sunshine of the following morning Martha examined by to her unexpected guest.

"Deary, deary me, Martha," he said, holding her hand for a moment, "I'm coming back in April to see you. Have a new dress and a good trip then above the clouds. Only you must promise to let me to make augured doughnuts."

"Guess you've got me set terms cute," ejaculated Martha, shaking her head energetically. "But I'll be watching the sky for any white spring comes for you and your bride."

A few moments later and her company had made a noisy farewell. Nothing remained but a memory and a mere speck in the distance. There were tears in Martha's eyes as she watched out the window wistfully. Until the first time she saw a white envelope lying on top of the old silk dress. She opened it hastily. Inside the paper fell out. On one was written:

"Dear Aunt Martha.—The enclosed is for a new Sunday-go-to-meeting dress. I'll bring a better one from New York in the spring. Your nephew Bert."

The other slip was a check for $25.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sergeant Murphy"

Officially audience-tested and approved is Warner Bros. melodrama, "Sergeant Murphy". This is the story of an army horse, directed by B. Reeves ("Breezy") Eason, under the supervision of Jack Saunders, and featuring Ronald Reagan and Mary MacGuire in the leading roles and coming to the McCarthy theatre.

At the Presidio of Monterey, California, trails scenes of cavalry and artillery manoeuvres were being filmed. Eason, assisted by officers and men watched every move made by Eason, who was the director of "The Charge of The Light Brigade," "The Charge of The Light Brigade," and "Stella Dallas," among others interested, seemingly, than the actors, offering whispered side-line suggestions and criticisms on technical details overlooked by their superiors.

The men wanted the picture made perfect; they didn't want the men of other army posts to pick flaws in their methods and manoeuvres. Their pride of regiment made them feel responsible for the production.

While a platoon of movie rookies were being drilled by an officer of cavalry routine, a veteran sergeant, Eason noticed, was given a slight detail was overlooked—he unable to correct it or interfere—was directing the scene in typical top-sergeant language.

"Why that so and so . . . letting them take pictures and the men at attention with their rifles in their hands. Doesn't he know reins should be held in the left hand with the right arm full length at a man's side? Let me in there. Let me show them! He did.

Pertaining to the artillery, another error was noticed and criticized. At artillery practice, the range finding officer, only, sights the target through the binoculars, other officers and observers watch results through field glasses. Through an oversight on the part of the supervising officer a movie "prop" was used. The "prop" which greatly annoyed the men on the sidelines, the procedure was changed.

The critical, and official audience agree, however, that "Sergeant Murphy" is a swell picture and an absorbing one in their parlance of the director, "Breezy" Eason and players described, Ronald Reagan as Denis Murphy a buck private, and Mary MacGuire.

"The Great Adventures of Wild Bill Hickok"

America's mightiest hero thunders to the screen! The Old West flames to life in a chapter play that logs anything ever before attempted! A daring band of young buckaroo live every hair-raising adventure of a bitter play comes to the McCarthy theatre on the same program with "Sergeant Murphy."

Gordon Elliott is starred in the chapter play, with Ralph Morgan, Circle Wayne, Frankie Darro, Dorothy Maynard, Monte Blue, Rose Ann Otes and Kenneth Duncan in important roles. Mack Wright and Stan Nelson co-directed the picture, which required the services of thousands of Indians and cowboys.

Read above in the best serial ever produced and we advise you not to miss a single chapter which will be showing at the McCarthy each week.

The gay comedy romance "There Goes the Groom" featuring Ann Sothern, Burgess Meredith, Mary Boland and also "Here Comes the Circus" a really entertaining picture featuring Frankie Darro and Mrs. Jesse Crawford in a number which, many consider, was the new "Hammond" electric organ. An excellent two reel cameo.

Coming to Hollywood and a very clever and amusing all technicolor musical revue "Radio Parade," at the McCarthy theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Port of Seven Seas" and "Pick a Star"

A motion picture which is being heralded as something out of the ordinary is being featured and scheduled for the Belle Theatre with an all-star cast of Seven Seas" and starring Wallace Beery with a company of distinguished supporting players including Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal and Dudley Ralph.

Beery is said to play one of his most unusual roles in the new drama in which he deviates from such outdoor characterizations as in "Sad Sack and Lonesome" and "Viva Villa!" to enact the part of the owner of a tea on the Marseilles waterfront. It is a true romance story of his former work with the beloved Jean Harlow.

The new picture is based on Marcel Pagnol's play, "Fanny" which Europe's greatest stage successes, with screen play by Preston Sturges and direction by Alexander Korda. The story deals with the lives of Cesar and Fanny, who operate a cafe on the waterfront cafe, his son Marius who dreams of sailing in far-away places, Madelon who loves Marius enough to let him go away, and Panisse, middle-aged suitor, who tries to compensate her for her loss.

Frank Morgan, who plays Cesar Morgan who makes a startling about-face from his familiar comedy portrayals to play one of his rare serious parts. Madelon is enacted by Maureen O'Sullivan, one of the most charming of the younger players. Marius, is filled by John Beal, the versatile young actor who switched

Lovely Colorful Handkerchiefs Are Vital Wardrobe Accessories

Petit point flowers are embroidered on a black chiffon handkerchief by Dermel to accompany a clever black and white dinner dress.

By LESBETH

It was Marie Antoinette, the French queen who lost her head on the guillotine, who invented the handkerchief.

The story goes that when this young Hapsburg princess was ready to leave Vienna for Versailles to wed the son of Louis XV, she burst into tears, and having nothing on which to dry them, she tore off part of the square lace fichu from the neck of her dress, and with it wiped her eyes and cheeks.

Madame Dubarry, Louis XV's court favorite, took up the plea, and handkerchiefs became the fashion, even the king demanding one. As the jades of the French court often used this new invention to dust the powder off their black mouches or beauty patches, it become known as the mouchoir.

The mouchoir became the handkerchief, most dear to every modern woman and man, and one of their most important accessories with every type of costume.

Aiding China.

Right now the popularity of handkerchiefs is helping to keep rice in Chinese bowls, for the undeclared war with Japan has stimulated one of China's leading export industries, needlecraft or hand-embroidery and other hand-work on linens, especially handkerchiefs.

But in modern usage handkerchiefs are not only used for wiping away tears. In the pockets of suits and dresses they add a last dainty touch; suspended from the wrist by a rhinestone, bracelet they accompany formal dresses in concerts, dances, etc. Or tied, peasant-fashion over the head they take the place of hats and caps for sports or evening wear.

At left, gaily peeking out the pocket of a dark velveteen cardigan is one of Burmel's garden variety of handkerchiefs. It is printed on sheer Irish linen and offers a bright contrast to a dark ensemble. A pinched-front beret trimmed with velveteen to match the suit, faintly suggests the Apache influence.

Flowers On Chiffon.

Petit point flowers are embroidered, by the same designer, on a cobweby chiffon hanky, centre. This handkerchief accents a black and white formal costume for dining under the stars. These kerchiefs come in a number of different patterns and colors, so that you have a different mouchoir for each gown.

Another petit point embroidered kerchief covers the hair of the lady on our right. Worn with a fluffy ostrich boa it exudes softness and

Tuberculosis "Catching" Disease

Theories Differ, Says Doctor, So It's Wise to Avoid Exposure

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE QUESTION of whether tuberculosis can be taught from a consumptive is not as simple as it may seem on first sight. The theories on the matter have gone through a number of changes.

A hundred years ago when very little was known about the cause of tuberculosis, the idea was that it was not contagious at all. Then the French physician, Villemin, pointed out that if a case of consumption were brought into a hospital ward, several other cases would develop there. He was an army physician and he put his conclusions this way: The reputumpitty soldier is just as much a danger to his fellows in the regiment, as a sheep with anthrax is to the rest of the herd."

When the cause of tuberculosis —the tubercle bacillus—was discovered, opportunity was afforded for more intensive study of early cases. "The conclusions arrived at were that tuberculosis probably always begins in infancy or very early life. It goes through a certain stage of development in childhood. Childhood tuberculosis is entirely different from adult tuberculosis.

Catches It From Adult

The child usually catches tuberculosis from an adult in the family who has an open, unsuspected case of tuberculosis of the lungs. The course of the disease depends on the amount of infectivity that can be developed—most often the condition gets well in childhood and leaves nothing but a scar. Sometimes it goes on and develops

Smart Suit a Necessity!

You Can't Go Places This Autumn Without One

By ALICE ALDEN

You can't go places without a suit this autumn, and no girl will want to forfeit the opportunity to wear one of the trig tailored models or one of the fur-trimmed dressy suits that will enliven festive afternoons when the town starts revolving again. As befits a place where a suit is virtually a uniform, California does suits supremely well.

One of the handsomest travel suits we have seen is the checked wool model worn by Jane Hamilton, below. The short, straight skirt is of nubby brown wool, while jacket and topcoat are of cinnamon, black and rose-beige wool in a checked design. The mannish-tailored jacket has wide shoulders and lapels and brown leather buttons. The blouse worn with this suit is of white wash satin; it is smartly tailored. The other suit has a dress of gray nubby woolen, with buttons of dull silver and short, puffed sleeves. The fingertip coat is of matching fabric, with gray caracul collar and pocket trim. The smart, harmonious accessories are of navy blue.

HOW YOU CAN Attract MEN

Proper Make-Up Assures Bet ter Photographs

By JULIET SHELBY

You'll be watching the birdie lots of times this summer and more than likely your photographer will be an amateur. Taking pictures is a holiday pastime that is lots of fun. The finished products will be perpetual reminders of the grand times you had and the friends you made.

This department has often thought how simply swell it would be if these photographic mementos would not be quite so devastatingly frightful about all our most glaring defects. Wouldn't it be wonderful if your friends carried home pictures of you that showed you at your very best? Well it isn't an impossible hope. Our friend Alan Colby, the movie make-up expert, says that a little deft use of your make-up can help you put your best face forward without anyone's knowing it.

He has given us some make-up hints that we are passing along to you for your moments under the camera's eye.

Apparently after you have once seen the results of using a little make-up properly—and it is not at all hard to acquire—you will never do without it.

As to your materials. It is possible to work to a certain extent with the ordinary cosmetics you have, but to secure some professional materials for your make-up box. The simplest sort of make-up kit should include two shades of foundation cream to blend the powder, one light and one dark, eye shadow, mascara, lip and cheek rouge, eyebrow pencil and cream for cleansing, face powder, and a large soft brush for brushing away the powder down your powder.

For any but very close-up pictures, color is applied with a heavy hand to bring up the features and highlights for contrast. But for extreme close-ups amateur portraiture, a softer effect is frequently desired. You can obtain this by using slightly less color, and by using monochromatic color.

Use Foundation Cream.

Foundation cream serves to cover and smooth your natural skin texture, and must be applied right up to the hairline and below the neckline. A darker shade than you generally use for street wear is preferable. Then you apply your colors on top of this; moist rouge to the cheekbones, rubbed out in widening circles; eyeshadow on your eyelids; lip rouge, remodeling your lip lines if necessary. The powder is applied liberally with a powder puff, and the excess is carefully brushed off with the brush. Do any retouching that you think necessary, and put your mascara on last.

Now for correcting face faults. Too high cheekbones should have their highlights lowered by darker make-up on their points, and lighter just below. Bulging eyes can be made less noticeable by using two shades of eyeshadow, a darker one close to the lashes, and a lighter near the brows and toward the temple. Shadow close to the eyes heightens the effect of largeness. The color should be heavier in the centre, blending toward the brow. If your eyes are too close together, put no shadow near the inner corner of the eye, but make it heavier toward the temple. Apply mascara to the underside of the lashes at the outer edge, and the upper side of the lashes at the inner edge. Avoid too thin eyebrows, too fancy lip lines or wet lip make-up which will catch the light and glisten. Remember the general rule that prominent features are made to appear less prominent if they are darker in tone.

Good luck, and here's wishing you pretty pictures.

Novel Recipes Make Eggs Delicious Dinner Dishes

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Eggs a la Suisse or Asparagus With Eggs
Scalloped Potatoes
Sliced Tomatoes
Berries or Sliced Peaches

Bran Refrigerator Rolls Coffee

I like eggs for dinner at any time of the year, but especially in the summertime. I am giving you two recipes for eggs that are a little change from the usual boiled, fried, scrambled, baked, etc. And the berries or sliced peaches with bran rolls are a little different too, and will add to those who "don't eat desserts".

Today's Recipes

EGGS A LA SUISSE — Spread two tablespoons butter on bottom of baking dish. Cover butter with grated cheese. Break eight eggs carefully upon cheese. Season with salt and paprika, and pour a little cream over them. Sprinkle about two ounces of grated cheese on top of all and set dish in moderate oven to bake for about fifteen minutes.

ASPARAGUS WITH EGGS—One asparagus. Lay tender parts in deep pin plate or shallow baking dish. Season well with salt, pepper and butter. Beat eggs just enough to break the yolks and add salt, pepper and butter. Pour them over the asparagus and bake for 10 minutes in a hot oven. Serve at once.

BRAN REFRIGERATOR ROLLS —One cup fat, three-fourths cup of sugar, one cup bran, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one cup boiling water, two eggs, two cakes compressed yeast, one cup lukewarm water, six and one-half cups flour or enough to make soft dough.

Put fat, sugar, bran and salt in large mixing bowl; add boiling water, stirring until fat is melted. Let stand until mixture is lukewarm. Add well-beaten eggs and yeast softened in lukewarm water. Add one-half the flour and beat until batter is smooth. Add the remainder of the flour and beat well. Cover bowl and place in refrigerator over-night or until ready to use. Form balls of dough to fill greased muffin pans about half full. Let rise in a warm place about two hours or until double in bulk. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 15 minutes. This amount of dough will make about two dozen rolls.

BRAN REFRIGERATOR ROLLS — If you've let yourself become dull, cross, and nervous. Men like lively, peppy girls—girls with plenty of energy to go places and enjoy life.

Don't let love and romance pass you by. Help build up your pep and you, too, should have pep galore.

Here's good advice: Start taking time-proven, reliable Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and note the difference. This famous Compound, made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots, helps Nature tone up your system and thus soothes jumpy nerves and gives you more pep to really enjoy life.

Test this this notice NOW as a reminder to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound TO-DAY without fail.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" distress from functional disorders with Pinkham's Compound.

Fashion Flashes

You will want one of the new hooded jackets for your new evening frock. These jackets are seeing quited and so combine the sparkling and the striking. A beauty is in mother-of-pearl and gold sequins.

A bright idea is that of detachable fur pieces. A gown of velvety texture in deep purple has a petplum composed of two wide curved silver fox pieces. These can be detached and worn as a caplet.

Look about and you'll see plenty of smart new coats. A charming beaver which continues down from a very narrow strip to form very very wide tuxedo panels.

Fur goes up to the hat again this season. A new model is a beret of almond green woollen with a draped crown of black broadtail.

Off to school wearing a nice new two-piece frock. The plaided overblouse is in green, tan and brown, while the skirt is of brown flannel with side pleats. Double belt is in green and brown.

Pirates Just Standing Still Letting the Pennant Come To Them Says Bill Terry

Bucs Now 6 1-2 Games in Front With Reds Coming Fast

YANKS ADD TO LEAD

Now Enjoy 15 Full Games Over Second Place Red Sox

By BILL BONI

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Will Terry, the soft-spoken hardshell from Memphis, leads the Pittsburgh Pirates aren't backing into the National League pennant, since the Pittsburgh Pirates stretched their margin to 6½ games by scuppering Will Terry's Giants 7-1 yesterday, the man obviously had to say something in self defence.

He may, for that matter, be speaking the truth. But it's a cinch that the Pirates, if not backing in, aren't doing much more than standing still and letting the pennant come to them.

The Aug. standings saw Pittsburgh in front by five games, the Giants second by 3½, and the Chicago Cubs third by one over Cincinnati. Since then the Giants have crawled along at a .444 pace, the Cubs have played .533 ball and the Reds .545. Yet the Pirates, as of today, had picked up only 1½ games on the Terrymen.

Split Even in Month

The solution is simple enough. Pie Traynor's Buccaneers, who have been making the opposition walk the plank one afternoon only to go off the deep end themselves the next, have split even in the last month on 15 victories and 15 defeats. Just as a basis of comparison, the Yankees over the same stretch won 26 out of 36, for an .800 percentage.

The Giants definitely are in no condition to provide anyone but Terry with headaches. Dick Coffman, the "experimental" starting pitcher, was slugged all over the lot yesterday, principally by Gus Suhr, and, as if Bill didn't have enough on his mind, Dick Bartell reported with a lame elbow so that the infield had to be juggled again.

Reds Win Two

While the Pirates were pasting the Giants to a fare-thee-well, the Reds rallied twice to whip the Dodgers, 5-4 and 7-4, thus moving up five pretenders, the fire-bait Terry's tottering crew and four behind the Cubs, who lost an 11 decision to Milkman and the Boston Bees.

Turner, like Jim Tobin of the Pirates and Whitey Moore in the Reds' nightcap, pitched five-hit ball. Effective pitching was marked the Phillies-Cardinals doubleheader, with Max Butcher bearing down in the pinches to edge out the Cards in the opener, 4-3 and Clyde Shoun hurling one-hit ball in a five-inning relief trick as the Cards took the night-cap 8-7 in the 10th.

American League

American leaguers also accounted for two handsome pieces of pitching. Spud Chandler, after being nicked for a run in the first, shut out the Detroit Tigers the rest of the way as the Yanks won their fifth straight, 3-1, and John Duncan Rigney of the White Sox held the Senators to six hits in gaining a 3-1 verdict.

The Indians outslugged the Athletics 10-8, with the help of two home runs by Jeff Heath and another by Bruce Campbell, and the Browns drubbed the Red Sox 9-3, for Mel Cole's first second victory of the year.

Jim Tobin and Gus Suhr, Pirates: Tobin held Giants to five hits and Suhr to perfect day at bat, drove home five runs with triple and single as Pies won, 7-1.

Buster Mills, Browns: Clouted double and three singles in 9-3 triumph over Red Sox.

Harry Craft and Whitey Moore, Reds: Craft's nine-inning single drove in run that beat Dodgers, 5-4 and 7-4, thus moving up five pretenders, fire-bait Terry's tottering crew and four behind the Cubs, who lost an 11 decision to Milkman and the Boston Bees.

Belmont Juniors Kick Away Five Run Lead But Earn Draw

O.A.S.A. Playdown Tilt Goes 11 Innings Without Decision

SCORE IS SIX ALL

In a sensational pitching and fielding duel the Belleville Belmont Juniors played the Kingston Grad kids a six-all draw in what was to have been a third and deciding junior O.A.S.A. zone play-off game at Napanee last evening. The tilt advanced into the twelfth inning before the umpires terminated play and called the game on account of darkness. The squads will resume activities in a further attempt to determine the junior O.A.S.A. zone winner at Napanee on Thursday evening.

After having lost the initial game of the zone finals by a one-nothing score at Bridge park on Monday, Bert Townsend's Belmont kids returned to their home diamond to knot the series with an 8 to 6 decision while their efforts to eliminate Kingston resulted in a tie game being played last night.

Enquiries Rained Around

"Lum" Carson, Belleville hurler, again opposed Sharpe, the Kingston ace, but unlike Monday's game, Belmonts were outhit 15 to 9 on the game. Skipper Townsend's kiddies were enjoying a substantial lead of six to one going into the sixth frame when the "Grads" batted around the table to score five runs and tie the game.

There was no further scoring in evidence until the game's extra frame in accordance of darkness in the top half of the 12th. Carson and Sharpe each struck out. Then Carson walked two to Sharpe's first.

The fielding of Burtch, Kingston third sacker, was sensational, especially with running catches. Sharpe also led the hitters of the night with four hits in five trips to the plate. Free, Kinnear and Lemmon were other Kingston hitters of prominence. Mason and Whalen were the only Belmont batters to collect more than one hit they getting a brace of bingles each. Rowbotham, Belleville catcher, was injured when a Kingston baserunner collided with him at the plate in the sixth inning, but he remained in. The injury is reported to be more serious than at first expected with the result Rowbotham may be lost to the Belmont cause for next game.

Soon Evened Up

Kingston scored in the top half of the initial frame, but Moone's triple evened the count the next half. Ellis was safe and Collier put Belleville one up in the second while they added two more runs in the third on hits by Whalen and Moone again, both hitting safely in the clutches. Hits by Ebbler, Carson and Rowbotham gave the local kids another in the fourth, which they scored their sixth run in the fifth, without the aid of a safety. Free, Kinnear, Cuthbertson and Burtch all hit safely for the Grads in the sixth which produced their five runs and tied the score, which remained unchanged throughout the remaining five frames.

A large following of Kingston fans witnessed the game, while only the odd few Belleville supporters was present to encourage the Belmonts to greater heights. The winner of the Belleville-Kingston series will meet the T.A.S.A. junior champions in the next round commencing on Saturday in the Queen City.

Greenberg Says Chances of Beating Ruth's Mark Slim

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)— Hank Greenberg, the slugging Detroit first baseman, says his chances of beating Babe Ruth's old record of 60 home runs in a season are slim. The old Bronx boy was found snapping at a bowl of breakfast cereal in a hotel restaurant. Hank's parents still dwell in the Bronx, fodder for, and it is a matter of record that he would have been playing for the Yankees today if the Yanks had been pretty well fixed for first baseman. He'll say I've about a 10 to 1 shot to break the Babe's mark," he said, tentatively. "It's been a great thrill to get started touring me to knock 61 homers. Every time I come to bat I'm trying for one. The fans want them. The result is my batting average has slipped 50 about .290.

Intentional Passes

Another factor which hurts my chances is that they're giving me more intentional passes than ever, just like they did to Ruth. And I guess they're finding me a bit, too. I've been hit by pitched balls three in the last couple of games."

Hank, at the moment of finishing his prunes had clouds of fate hovering in his cereal. He placed him exactly nine games and three home runs short of the Babe's total mark. He got to doing some thinking.

"There's three tough parks for a right-handed hitter like me to get homers," he considered. "Three in the Yankee Stadium and in Cleveland and Washington. Detroit, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago and Philadelphia are all right. I'll hit 'em in those five.

"My best bet of course, is out in Detroit, where we'll get 24 games left. But here's where I'm handicapped. We're going into September, and that's usually bad weather for homers."

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Jamieson Bone

The situation in Europe continues tense, although the opinion of prominent leaders is that Germany will not risk a war at this present time. Her lack of gold, the cost of her rearmament her lack of foreign credits, and the fact that important, her lack of allies, should preclude the Third Reich from embarking in a conflict in which it would be a certain loser.

The nervousness so evident in the security markets the past few days is not warranted. We have successfully passed through such "crises" in the last year or so and the present one should prove the same. In the meantime, many investors are dumping their holdings overboard irrespective of merit and the buyers remaining on the sidelines, sharply discount any future earnings.

With Government bonds returning comparatively small yields, and with bank interest on savings accounts at only 2½ per cent, the general consensus is that securities are more desirable than cash. Despite this investors with surplus funds are not utilizing their cash assets for more desirable issues. That they are not yet fully convinced that business boasts an improved outlook. A revival of confidence is urgently needed to bring about utilization of cash on the part of investors.

Bright spots in the business picture in the U. S. at the moment are steel operations and merchandising.

The July and August earnings figures of industrial "bellwether" companies reflect a amazing uplift in earning power that promises to more than well double the 1937 results. The sales of the two big mail order houses are also expected to show the figures of a year ago, and only moderate gains from now on should reflect the sensational business of over 1937 results. In addition, and reassuring to the public, the profits may have in store, there seems little doubt that the motor industry will, during the balance of the new models flatly disappointing "preview" appearances, enjoy a big fourth quarter.

If the market has been weak on the downside of late, the rails, coppers, airplane, nickel, asbestos and other so-called war stocks declined less. One could assume that a rush would develop to buy these issues on the theory that the

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

She stayed until train time, but neither of them touched that delectable ground again. Only when he had brought his car around and came in to get her did he touch her at all. Then he crushed her to him with almost a groan.

"Good-bye, my girl" he said. "Always my own girl, whatever happens."

It was that picture that she carried back with her, going back to the old home and the quiet life. She could have helped, but he had not wanted her His pride got too great. She could not fight it.

She was not very well after that. Sometimes she had a pain, a small nagging pain in her right side, just under the border of her ribs. It came and went, and she hardly noticed it. She answered a call in a night of pure agony. She could not even call Martha at first, and so she and the pain were together. Her brother, shut in, walled off, so that there was nothing in all the world but that pain. Later she got help and when it was over, Ted Lawrence told her practically that she ought to have a gall-bladder operation.

"Better get it out," he said. "You don't want any emergency stuff."

She managed to smile back at him from her bed. "I'd like Chris Arden to do it when he comes back."

"And suppose he doesn't come back?"

"Then it wouldn't matter so frightfully, would it?"

He looked down at her. He was more than half in love with her himself, as he had managed to say.

"You're talking like a child. He wouldn't do a thing like that."

"He would for me."

CHAPTER LII.

One day Beverly saw in the paper that Katie was going to marry Bob Barnes, and wondered whether Chris knew it, and whether it would hurt him.

But Chris knew it already and was not hurt. "They'll get along."

Constipated? You Should Get at the Cause!

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the bathroom stool. "It's done up and get it over," they tell you. But modern know they don't "get it over" at all—until they get at the cause of the trouble!

Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you will only try. Most people do—many brand, pulsated. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch those "regular" days begin! Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the bathroom stool. "It's done up and get it over," they tell you. But modern know they don't "get it over" at all—until they get at the cause of the trouble!

Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you will only try. Most people do—many brand, pulsated. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

She thought without resentment. "They're both ambitious, and she'll help him. He's making money, too. She'll like that."

It rather puzzled him that after so long a time together with Katie he felt it so little. But he was busy then, and he had little time to remember. Work was coming in steadily. When the case was beyond his capacity, he would send to some town for help, or—as it sometimes did—a twice-weekly trip up in the car beside him and take it for the afternoon. That was his day's drive away. Physically he was well, but not comfortable. Mrs. Miller had not been able to come back, and he managed with a village woman an hour or two a day.

Then one day in February that problem was solved so unexpectedly that later on he was to look back on it and grin with pure delight. He was at his desk that morning when the bell rang, followed by the entrance of a tall faintly familiar figure in a too blue suit and with a cigarette dangling from an impudent lip. The figure stopped in the doorway and struck an attitude.

"Well, by golly, and if it ain't my old friend the Doc!"

It was Dick Wilkes, a Dick as inaccurate as ever, with a cheerful grin, and a suitcase in his hand.

"Dick! How on earth did you get here?"

"Well, that's a long story," said Dick, coming in and setting himself on the edge of the desk. "I was back home, and I heard of your little trouble, so I thought I'd come and look over the ground."

"Well, how does it look now?" you're here?"

Bad to fair. Nothing doing with the arm yet?"

"Not yet."

"Sudden luck." He got off the desk. I'll be up and park this bag somewhere. Then I'll look around and see what's what."

"Look here," Chris said, "let me get this straight. Is this a visit you're making me?"

"You can call it that if you want. No wages, anyhow."

Neither then nor later did Chris ever know just what that emergence of Dick's meant. He never mentioned the war, save once to boast that he was drawing partial disability compensation. "And believe me, boy, I earned it." He never expressed any gratitude to Chris for the night he had saved him. But after his own fashion he paid back every jot and tittle of that debt, from the first evening when Chris, coming in from a call, found him over the stove, his partial cigarette in his mouth, inviting off the irate day woman who had come into get the supper.

"It's all right, Grandma," he was saying. "I'm a cook. I used to cook when I was in the pen. Don't you worry about h's stomach. i'll fill it."

He literally drove her out, and Chris had some difficulty in packing her.

There commenced with Dick a new era in Chris's life. Dick had no repressions, no delicacies. What he thought of Katie was bluntly told once and for all. But nonetheless thing was his attitude toward Chris's infatuation.

"Let's see it, Doc. Don't be fool. Maybe I can rub some sense into it."

Chris let him examine it. "Nothing," he said. "Looks like something you found under stones in the dark."

He massaged it daily after that with singularly skillful hands and infinite patience. He would sit, his cigarette dangling, and work over it, talking to it as one might to a child.

"Come on, now, get some sense into you. Quit playing position. Give a move on you. How's that, Doc?"

From the first that hand and arm were his job, although he took over the entire establishment. He was not an untried bravado. He was noisy in the house, whistling and singing. But he fed Chris well, he cleaned the car and drove it on occasion, and he was even useful in the office, for he had no squeamishness.

It was not long before Chris began to feel a faint tingling in that dead arm of his, and found his knees weak as water under him. He said nothing to Dick about it, but Dick was observant. He increased his efforts. He would pick up a finger and say:

"Come on, baby. Just a flutter now. Wiggle a bit. Try it, Doc."

Then one night in response to this urging, a finger did move, and Dick let out a whoop and did a dance over the room.

"We've got it, Doc! We've got it, by golly. A couple of months and you'll be fighting me with it."

Chris could not speak. He sat in his chair looking at the hand. Now he willed the finger to move again and it did. When he looked up at Dick, he found him noisily blowing his nose.

"I'm the stuff, Doc. Who said your uncle couldn't do it?" He bent down and gave Chris a terrific wallop on the back. "And now how about a shot of liquor to celebrate? Where's the whiskey?"

It was over that temporary celebration that Dick leaned back suddenly in his chair and laughed.

"What's the joke, old man?"

"I'm thinking of Katie. She went overboard, and then the ship didn't sink! Maybe this won't hurt her like blazes."

Before he went upstairs that night Chris put an arm around Dick's shoulders, much to his embarrassment.

"I guess you're even more than even now, Dick."

"Don't go soft on me, Doc. I've had a hell of a good time."

He banged out the door, leaving on one of those mysterious night excursions of his when he sometimes took the car to go incredible distances to dance or, as Chris suspected, to go no distance at all with one of the village girls. And Chris, alone in the house, lighted the lamp in his room that night and stood looking at his hand and arm. There was motion there; not much, but some. It would come back, that hand of his. He had an odd feeling that perhaps, after all, Noel's pragmatic God had been from His great white throne and made a gesture toward him.

"I am thankful," he said aloud, "to something or other. Thankful and grateful." He was amazed to find that he was trembling.

He still had a long way to go, but at least he had a direction now. Progress. The time came when he could bend his fingers, but there was as yet no grip to them. It was shortly afterward that he wrote to Ted, in that clumsy left-handed writing of his:

"You'll be glad to learn that there are some evidences of unison. The hand's still pretty useless, but it's coming back. If it goes on as it has—"

His only reply was a telegram, indicating that Ted was having a streak of patriotism, and saying merely, "Three cheers for the red, white, and blue."

x x x

Dick was still there when Noel came home for the Easter holidays. Chris left the meeting at the station to Hinton and Dick all morning he watched across the fields for the boy's young figure, and Dick watched him.

"Think a lot of that kid, don't you?"

"Wait until you see him."

The house was in order and a fire burning in Chris's study when at last a young figure leaped the gate and marched sturdily up the path.

Dick whistled softly to himself. Jerry Arden, he thought. But the boy's face was sobered than Arden's had ever been. Even the eyes more direct. He listened to the door as it opened and shut. "Anybody home?"

"Home and waiting, son!" Chris called.

Dick gave them an hour and then appeared with a plate of sandwiches. He found Noel back in his deep chair and the boy sturdily ASLEEP on the front of the fire.

"This is Mr. Wallens, Noel," he said. "He'll tell you that he was the war. But he won't tell you what he's done for me."

Dick looked embarrassed, but he grinned as Noel gravely shook his hand and thanked him.

"What's he been telling you?" he demanded. "I wanted free board for a while, and I got it. That's all."

They became great friends, the boy and the man. Chris, wandering into the kitchen after a pulling had gone, would find them washing dishes together, with a cheerful unmorality, his purely pagan philosophy, began to worry Chris. Noel was at the impressionable stage, and behind him, too, was the heritage of his father's code, and those few days he had accepted Dick's flippant speech. Perhaps, Chris thought, he'd better have a talk, too, for the boy was all he had left now, and he was determined he had been a subtle change in their relationship.

"Want to see a case with me, Noel?"

"I told Dick I'd go fishing."

But Dick was playing fair. One day Chris found Noel regarding him with bright, curious eyes.

"Did you save his life? He says so."

"That was my job, son."

"But he says you carried him for hours, and then operated."

"I couldn't very well leave him there he was, it's quite messy."

Chris was rather quiet that week and Dick watched him with shrewd and understanding eyes. Then one morning, coming down to breakfast, Chris was astounded to find Dick's suitcase in the hall. He had his bright blue suit in the living room eating, and Mrs. Miller hustling about the stove.

"What's all this, Dick? You're not leaving us?"

"I always migrate in the spring, Doc," he said airily. "Time for my flight, that's all."

Chris tried to persuade him to stay, but his family were restive. It was when Chris suggested that he ought to settle down somewhere, however, that his eyes grew somber.

"Cut that, Doc," he said. "I liked a girl once, but somebody got ahead of me. Get 'em and forget 'em—that's my motto now." Then his voice softened. "Say good-bye to the kid for me, Doc. He's a good kid. I'm not the man to help raise him."

The next minute he was shouting to the kitchen. "Hey, there!" he called. "Where are those eggs? You don't have to lay 'em. Just cook 'em."

Chris drove him to the station, divided between relief and a sense of loss.

"I'll miss you, Dick. You know that."

"Well, I suppose a fellow would miss a bad tooth."

They stood on the bare platform constrained with the fear of grown men for emotional display. Each of them knew that it was not likely they would meet again; and Chris, looking down at Dick's shiny figure in its fantastic clothing could find nothing to say. Dick, however, was whistling lighthearted, his eyes on the track.

Then he said. "Trains always excite me. I like to be going places."

"If you're ever in trouble, you'll let me know, won't you?"

"If I am you can count on it. I'll tell you. That will be news!"

Noel reached the platform as the train drew in. He was breathless and puzzled, but Dick merely waved him a cheerful goodbye.

"So a good boy and wash behind your ears, kid," he yelled. Then he swung his suitcase onto the platform and mounted it himself. "If you ever need me, I'll come on the run," he shouted. "Run! I'll fly."

CHAPTER LIII.

In the early fall of that year Chris had a visit from Ted Lawrence. He came unannounced, to find Chris busy in the office and a line of vehicles of various sorts outside. He was sitting comfortably on the porch when Chris came out, and he gave him a long look before Chris saw him.

"Great Scott! Ted!"

"What a memory you have for names!" said Ted admiringly, "You old scoundrel! It looks as if misery is good for him."

They were happy to be together again, boisterous. But Ted was eyeing Chris appraisingly. He looked better, although he was still carrying the right hand and arm as if they were useless. What fascinated him was that there was no resignation in his face, the face of a defeated man, accepting his defeat with gallantry, but nevertheless.

The first day in Chris' office Ted said:

"Let's get this straight. Do you mean to stay on here, Chris?"

"I don't know. There's some reservation, but it will be a long time yet. Too long, Ted. A man can't drop out for a couple of years and hope to get back where he was. You know that. Besides—"

"What?"

"I have a life here, such as it is and it's not a bad life. I like these people, and they like me. And I have no assurance that I'll ever hold a knife again. I've got a hand but it's clumsy as the devil. No use kidding about it."

Ted examined both hand and arm carefully. The wrist drop had been corrected, and the hand was mobile; but the hand certainly lacked strength and grace. Without holding it, he looked at Chris's face, quiet but bearing the deep lines of tragedy.

"It's just a hand, Ted., That's all right."

"It's a pretty good hand now, Chris. Better than I had expected. You'll be operating again before you know it, man!"

"That is not to be. In the interval I'm here. That's all."

Ted looked at him together that afternoon in Chris's muddy car, jolting over back roads, nursing his wife's baby, and Chris was twice Chris took Ted in to see a child with a cleft palate operation, and ever after Ted Lawrence was to remember those farmhouses, darkened and unswept, and the crowd them draped in autumn coloring, and Chris with that familiar forward thrust of the shoulders stooping to enter some low doorway. Chris was right. He had made himself a life out of wreckage, not his, for he had wanted, but at least a useful one.

That night, however, with the early darkness and the lamplight Ted began to find the silence and

2,000 Canadian Soldiers in War Manoeuvres

With an intensive training period behind them over 2,000 troops from units in the Canadian army swung into war manoeuvres near Camp Borden, using aircraft, artillery, tanks and mechanical transports. Their objective was the "capture" of Schomberg, Ont., which for the duration of the games has been named "enemy territory." That

Eyston Too Fast for Camera to Follow

Even the speed of the speediest camera lens devised by man could not snap the picture of Captain George E. Eyston, driving his "Thunderbolt car at an average speed of 345.60 miles per hour, without getting this movement on the film. The British daredevil sped 347.40 m.p.h. on the north run of a measured mile, and 342.46 on the return trip. Thus Capt. Eyston eclipsed his old mark of 311. m.p.h. by more than 34 miles per hour. Note the car painted black to eliminate the sun glare which robbed him of the mark on a previous run.

The new record made, Capt. Eyston climbs from his racing monster to receive the congratulations of mechanics and official timers. He said he had a comfortable ride.

Rich Britton and Cinderella Bride

They were married in Paris. As Pauline Sidal, Mrs. Oelrer was familiar to patrons of New York's Hollywood restaurant, where she sold cigarettes. Oelrer's father, Max, is chairman of the board of Gaumont-British Pictures Corp., and his uncles, Isadore, David and Maurice, are members of a financial group which has been described as "the second house of Rothschild."

Giant British Airplane Breaks In Two

Great Britain's giant airliner, Albatross, constructed for transatlantic flights on which it was to carry passengers and cargo, broke in two as it landed at Hatfield Airdrome, near London, after a test flight. The machine was loaded well above her rated maximum capacity with lead ballast and this is believed to be responsible for the accident. The crew of four escaped. The machine was being groomed for a possible flight across the Atlantic, starting Sept. 1.
